J. T. Hawke thought Captain Read forgot that the domain of trade and commerce and industrial dispute well within the power of the Dominion Government. The Government maintained a standing army which was for the purpose of keeping the peace. The revision asked for would not be sweeping, merely so as to safeguard the people's interests.

Strikers were frequently not property owners and the payment for the militia would not hurt them. There was great justice in the resolution. (Applause.)

E. A. McCurdy opposed the resolution and felt that the violators of the law should pay the bills for militia.

E. McCarthy thought the Government should pay these bills as it was a Dominion interest. He cited the Irish Constabulary, a body of soldiers paid by the British Government. He supported the resolution.

Secretary Williams spoke as a delegate and believed the striking miners and the owners should be assessed for the money due.

W. Youll thought there was no legitimate charge except the railway fare. The question was put and carried.

EVENING SESSION.

The Resources of Moncton.

A 8 sharp the Board met again. R. T. Hawke was on his feet promptly and asked the president if he would inquire of the Board in session if they would care to hear the exact facts regarding Moncton, its gas, oil and shale resources. Mr. Lodge, the founder and promoter was present, as president of the Moncton Board of Trade.

With one accord the response came, "Let us hear him."

Mr. Lodge then described the resources at Moncton at considerable length. He told of the difficulties and the successes. He attributed great credit to O. P. Boggs, a United States expert, who had practically made the oil wells. The gas was remarkable as it would not freeze and it was exceedingly dry. It was too dry to manufacture gasoline from, but its other advantages proved a remarkable asset. Gas and oil were the prime factors in attracting and promoting the great steel industries of Pittsburg. Similar conditions would be in vogue in the neighborhood of Moncton. He hoped to be able to get the gas into St. John, to Halifax and New Glasgow. In the West they were carrying gas from Beau Island to Calgary, a distance of 175 miles. Experts stated that the Moncton gas was purer in every way. The cost in his own house had been found one half that of coal. He thought the Provinces were a little slow in taking hold of these properties. He told how some men had gotten "cold feet" at the wrong time.

As a power boon the wells could hardly be estimated. Experts who tested the wells said they were the best they had ever seen, as far as continuous supply was concerned. The earth formations guaranteed a long continuous flow of gas. The oil wells were good also. He gave much data re phenomena of oil and gas; told how the wells were put down and exactly what they were doing in oil. They were boring their 26th well and will bore more.

He followed by dwelling on the bituminous shale found in great quantities near Moncton. A new plant was being erected in the shale beds by Sir William McKenzie, who formed a twenty-five million dollar company to exploit it. The shipment of gypsum from Nova Scotia to fertilizing companies in the States, and the fertilizers came back at great profit to United States makers. The shale deposits in Albert County would produce fertilizers unequalled on this continent. He further expected to see some shale deposits under development at New Glasgow, N. S.

Fundy's Tidal Wave.

The power of the tidal waves of the Bay of Fundy should sooner or later be harnessed and the future of these great Provinces can hardly be estimated. All Boards of Trade should be active and should be looking for new industries all the time. The future of the Boards would be in individual effort. Every man must help. The Moncton gas was six times better than Medicine Hat, five times better than natural gas in calorific power. He referred to the opinions of the British manufacturers in reference to Maritime Provinces. The benefits of the Panama Canal to the Maritime Provinces were untold for shipping to the West. He named some places where there were iron deposits in the Cobequid Hills, and by the aid of two tides the ore could be brought to Moncton. He told how scientists were wrong re Moncton oil and gas wells, and especially the Geological Dept. He referred to the foolish money spent on the militia which might be better spent on the resources of Canada.

Communication with P. E. I.

The resolution of the P. E. I. delegates was then introduced by the Summerside Board of Trade by Captain Read, re reference to better telegraphic service between the mainland and P. E. Island. In introducing his subject, the Captain said the Dominion Government had not treated the Islanders in accordance with the agreement of confederation. He detailed the difficulties. There was a rotten old cable 30 years old, which broke often and the Island was shut off from mainland connection. They had no night service, no lettergram service. He illustrated how the Island cable service got the majority share of the money paid for telegraphic service and big companies like the Western Union got the small share.

Further Difficulties Cited.

C. McArthur seconded the motion and detailed further difficulties that were experienced by the Islanders, owing to the faulty cable service. He said that the cable company received a subsidy on the strength of giving a continuous service. Further, the Government Council had promised to formally protest, so that these ideas would be supported by the right power.

E. T. Higgs, Charlottetown, told how long since the Island had been after a good telegraphic service. He told how the contract made by the Government at the time the Island came into confederation in 1873, had not been maintained. He told of the breaks in the cable, mentioning one of last month which lasted two weeks. He accentuated the absence of lettergrams on the Island, He showed how the hours of operators on the Island such as 3½ hours open on Sunday, and daily closed for at least 4½ hours. Holidays were rigidly kept by the operators also and the service was simply awful. He however could not support the resolution just as Captain Read brought it forward. He therefore moved an amendment. The amendment was seconded by R. H. Jenkins.

Captain Read declared that the amendment meant exactly what his did, and he would like a ruling on the question.

Mr. Prowse, M. P. P from the Island, said he agreed that the resolutions were so much alike that one was not an amendment to the other. The movers should get together and save the time of the Board.

A. E. Saunders, secretary of Halifax Board of Trade, said he understood that the agreement with the Anglo-American Cable Co. had ceased.

F. McEcken said it was a matter for the Exchequer Court, not the Maritime Board.

Under the Railway Commission.

J. T. Hawke spoke as a most interested party, being a newspaper publisher. He told how grievances of the Press Association were dealt with by the Railway Commission. If then the Government was giving a subsidy to this cable service, the grievance came under the direction of the Railway Commission.

The president here asked the delegates to get together and bring in a new resolution, which they did. The following was passed, which embodies really both main and amendment resolutions as formally brought forward:

"WHEREAS the Dominion Government is under a statutory obligation to maintain telegraphic communication with P. E. Island under the Act of Confederation;

"AND WHEREAS the present service is inefficient, unsatisfactory, expensive and frequently interrupted by the breaking of the cable;

"BE IT RESOLVED, that the Maritime Board of Trade, now in session in Truro, request the Dominion Government to take immediate steps to place the Telegraphic Service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland on such a basis as will insure a continuous service equal in cost and efficiency to that enjoyed by the people of the mainland.

"And in the opinion of this Board a second new cable is necessary to do this."

Hon. C. W. Robinson was selected as mainland member of the comminttee.

The British Preference.

H. Logan, of Amherst, brought in the resolution re limiting the British preference to goods coming to Canada ports only. He cited resolutions passed by the Board back three years ago, also from speeches made by himself in the House of Commons in 1904, also of Hon. R. L .Borden and Hon. W. S. Fielding at that time. He even quoted Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the same time sanctioning such an idea as embodied in the resolition. He showed that about twenty-five million dollars worth of goods came into Canada, receiving the preference tariff of 33 1-3 per cent., through United States ports, mostly in the winter time. This benefited U. S. railways greatly. If this resolution could be put into operation, Halifax, Sydney and St. John would be transformed into hives of activity all winter long. He denied that it was necessary to use U. S. ports. Canada was independent of United States. It was no retaliation. U. S. A. had been protecting their own interests at all times. They favored every colony they acquired with preferred legislation. He quoted the laws of United States re shipping from and to their colonies and United States of America. He showed conclusively that such legislation embodied in the resolution would be a great asset to Canada and especially the Maritime Provinces.

Should Look After Ourselves.

He desired no friction with the neighbors to the south. We should, however, legislate in our own interests. Canada should not "lie down" and let United States enjoy any of her advantages which were unnecessary.

The employment of the resolution would encourage shipping. This subject should engage the Board at every meeting. Nothing had been done for eight years and it was about time that the Maritime people forced something through in the way of legislation. He had just visited Canada west, travelling 12,000 miles, and with all the beauties there he returned east with greater love for the Provinces of his nativity. (Applause.)

The Maritime Provinces should stand side by side and fight for their rights, regardless of politics. A vote for this resolution was a vote for not only the Provinces, but for the building of a National spirit; a policy of independence of United States, and the belief in a country which deserved the support of every man, woman and child born within the boundaries.

Where Some Delay Occurred.

A. M. Bell seconded the resolution and said they must do something to force the hand of the Government. However, he knew that goods arriving at Halifax in winter took much longer to go west than they did via U. S. ports. It also took three weeks to get goods down from Toronto. That was because of lack of railway facilities. He could not see any retaliation in the resolution. Canada could stand alone. (Applause.)

Captain Read pointed out that this resolution would strike right at the G. T. P. and the C. P. R. who had U. S. terminals.

J. DeWolf urged that he had seen a great many resolutions passed by various bodies similar to this one. Now they should go further and see that this was carried into effect. (Applause.)

The resolution was carried unanimously.

THE THURSDAY SESSION.

The morning session was occupied first by a financial statement of the secretary. Moved by E. Higgs, seconded by E. A. McCurdy that the report be adopted.

The auditing committee comprised of Messrs. Aitken, Bell and Saunders reported that the accounts had been audited and found correct.

Several speeches were made re having the meeting at a place where the newly elected president resided.

D. A. Morrison said he thought the very best man should be chosen regardless of where he might reside.

Mr. Lodge also dwelt upon the importance of having good men as officers.

The New Officers.

It was moved by K. J. Mackenzie, seconded by D. A. Morrison, that the Board should proceed at once with the election of officers. Carried unanimously. The nominating committee was then chosen including Capt. J. Read, D. A. Morrison, J. Harris, R. H. Jenkins, J. E. De Wolf.

The following officers were chosen: President, M. Lodge, Moncton, N.B.; 1st Vice President, E. T. Higgs, Charlottetown, P.E.I.; 2nd. Vice Pres., H. J. Logan, Amherst, N.S.; Secretary, T. Williams, Moncton.

Compensation to Workmen.

The Halifax Board put forward the subject "The Workmen's Compensation Act," namely:

That in the opinion of the Board a more equitable agreement between employer and employee could be arrived at than the provisions of the present Nova Scotia Act provides. (Chapter 3, 1910.)

A. M. Bell voiced the question. He did not wish to go into the details of the Act so much as the spirit behind it. He was surprised that the government of Nova Scotia pressed such legislation. Capital and labor should work together harmoniously if progress could be maintained. He was strongly in favor of organized labor. He was not a supporter of tyranny of either labor or capital. Nearly all governments looked with deference to the labor party. He mentioned that the legislation had to do with the coal industries and perhaps a good case could be made out for the government because of coal royalties. He illustrated how certain coal companies and miners met together in harmony. There was such a thing as going too far and the labor interests who helped to pass legislation such as the Act in question were going too far.

He hoped the board would give a strong resolution asking for the amendment of the Act. (Applause.)

Mr. Schon, of Halifax seconded the motion, and dealt with the Workmen's Compensation Act in Germany showing how workman's death called for the government to pay full wages for 14 years. Thus, any child young at that time would be able to make a living at 14 years of age. He advocated this form of legislation in Nova Scotia. He spoke from memory but merely outlined the suggestion.

Hon. C. W. Robinson said the law was similar in New Brunswick. He thought it was a question how far they should go on this matter. He was sympathetic with labor on the question, but unless the subject had maritime interest the Board should be careful.

Mr. DeWolf suggested that they insert word "Provincial" instead of Nova Scotia and thus make the subject broader.

Mr. Bell acceeded to this request and so did the seconder, making the resolution to read the same with the erasure of "Nova Scotia" and insert "Maritime Province Acts."

F. McEcken explained the question was far too large to discuss. Each province was unfamiliar with the Workmen's Act of the other and so the resolution should be confined to Nova Scotia as originally brought forward.

Question for Careful Consideration.

J. T. Hawke said he had noticed that in times past he had heard class speakers take part in discussions. No arguments had been brought forward. The features of improvement in the Act, brought forward were insufficient. The subject was inadequate. No New Brunswick delegate had asked for an amendment of the Act. These Acts were necessary. Some employers were extra thoughtful and some were careless. Capital did not pay the piper any more than did the laborer. He believed that the Maritime Board should be very careful in passing upon such questions. He was afraid the subject would create hostility from the laboring classes, and he would suggest that the motion be laid on the table for future reference.

D. A. Morrison agreed with Mr. Hawke that this subject should not have been brought up. However, he wished to say that the dismissal of a careless employe at Spring Hill mines, caused the big strike up there.

He knew the labor act was not perfect, but surely they were all anxious to strive toward an improvement.

Hon. G. E. Faulkner, M.P.P., agreed with Mr. Hawke. He dealt at some length with the idea of a Workmen's Compensation Act.

Whether one Province or another had a better Act, might be discussed anywhere, but they should be more specific. He knew of the German law which in this connection was the best extant.

Sections of the Act that were objectionable should be noted and they could be amended. Captain Read offered a unique resolution instead of the one on the table, and created a laugh.

M. Lodge said he was interested in the resolution but Mr. Faulkner had shown him the way out. The legislature was the place.

M. E. Finn confessed, as a member of the local parliament, that the Act was not perfect, and it could be easily amended. He cited hazardous risks and pointed to the rights of workmen and the rights of capitalists. He showed how the Act was interpreted and that a judge or jury had the privilege of allowing damages. He read from the Act and showed that it was not drastic either to employer or employe. The Government of Nova Scotia could not afford the high standard adopted by Germany much as they might like to do so. The law was fairly sound as it existed. He was sure the government was anxious to satisfy either the wishes of capital or labor. Equitable treatment was what the government was anxious to give.

Great applause greeted Mr. Finn.

C. E. Bentley made a resolution that Mr. Bell would withdraw the motion on the table.

Mr. Bell said it was the Halifax Board for whom he spoke, and if the Board were willing to withdraw, he was. After a few moments conversation Mr. Bell withdrew the motion.

Mr. Lodge the newly chosen president was called to the chair by Dr. Dunbar.

Before vacating, Dr. Dunbar thanked the Board and hoped they would carry away pleasant memories of the meeting. He invited the delegates to a drive about town during the afternoon.

Mr. Lodge said he had not expected the honor but he was grateful. He would like to see new life put into the Board. Great things awaited the Board and the Provinces were teeming with resources and life which required exploiting. They should all try to do something for the East. He referred to Truro where one big mill made goods sold all over Canada, and which were unmistakably the best in the world.

Hance Logan arrived at this moment and begged that his name be left off the list of officers as he would be unable to take active part. As the future of the Board would be one of progress , he thought all the officers should be active.

Mr. Elderskin, said Mr. Hogan, was over modest and he should act. If they hoped to get legislation, Hance Logan should be the man.

Mr. Logan insisted that he could not accept. He would assist any way that he could. Mr. Lodge thought that they ought to have a vice president who would have the ear of the government.

The name of John Stanfield was proposed but he declined.

The Nominating Committee retired and shortly afterwards brought in a new name for 2nd vice president.

The Immigration Problem.

The subject of how to secure a desirable increase in immigration to the Maritime Provinces was taken up by Mr. Blanchard, of Truro, in an exhaustive paper.

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

"The subject upon which I have been asked to address you this afternoon is not a new one, and needs no introduction from me; but it is one of such importance as to claim your undivided attention during the short time at our disposal. 'How can we best attract to our shores a desirable class of immigrants?"

"It is an unfortunate fact, unfortunate at least so far as these Maritime Provinces are concerned, that while other portions of this Dominion, particularly the Western, have increased in population during the last decade, by leaps and bounds; we in these provinces by the sea have practically been standing still; and the question at once presents itself to the thinking man, why do not we in the East increase in population as does the West?

Many Have Gone West.

"The reasons are obvious and need hardly a second thought. The opening up of vast areas of virgin soil of great fertility, which could be had free, or at small cost, together with practically unlimited markets for its products, naturally attracted settlers of large or small capital, both from the older provinces and across the water, and consequently, we in these Maritime Provinces, have suffered in that the young and vigorous men, and maidens too, have felt the "Lure of the West" and in scores, and hundreds, have severed the ties that bound them to these provinces by the sea, and with many regrets have settled either on the prairie or in the rising cities of that wonderful land. And who can blame them, for is not this our heritage, and we have rights there which are ours by inheritance.

"But while we are glad to see these Western provinces settled by such a desirable class of settlers as are furnished by these provinces, (and they are unequalled the wide world over), we regret the enormous drain which it has made, on the producing capacity of our agriculture particularly, and in discussing the question of immigration at this time, it will be our duty to point out as far as we are able, some ways in which this great loss may be met, and a desirable class of immigrants induced to cross the water and make their homes in these far famed provinces.

The Man For The Soil.

"And let me first speak of the agricultural immigrant, because, while we have natural resources in mines and minerals, equal to any similar acreage on which the sun shines, it is upon agriculture, as the foundation of our national prosperity, we must mainly depend for our national greatness. Your mines may cease to give an adequate return for the labor which you have bestowed on them, your minerals may in future years become exhausted, your fisheries may fail to bring you that reward which you anticipated, but your agriculture never; according to the skill, and energy with which you prosecute this calling, so will be your sure return. Seed time and harvest shall not fail. So then, Mr. President, it is the agricultural immigrant that we must strive to attract to these provinces, and he must be of a particular kind in order that he may succeed. As far as my information goes, there are three classes of agriculturists in the old land, or to be more particular, Great Britain, viz:—The land owner, the large tenant farmer, and the small tenant farmer. We cannot get the land owner to change his conditions, nor can we hope to attract the large tenant farmer to this country, so we must content ourselves with hoping to show the small tenant farmer that, with the limited amount of capital at his command, he can improve his condition by emigrating to this country; that he can with a small amount of capital, own his property in fee simple, and make for himself a competency against old age. We must be able to show him truthfully the conditions which prevail here, as to soil, climate and markets, and the necessary capital requisite to make a start, with assurance of success. I have said, Mr. President, that he must be a particular kind of man, trained in a particular way, in order to compel success. I now say that it is imperative that he be either a market gardener, or dairyman, better a combination of both, and that his training shall have been in that specific direction.

"I have known men induced to come to this country, who did not have the qualifications which I have mentioned, and although having quite an amount of capital at their command, make complete failures. The report which such a man sends to his friends is more than likely to deter men who could have made good, from making the venture.

Importance of Dairying.

"And let me say here, Mr. President, (and I make no apology for the digression, because it bears directly upon the subject in hand), that upon improved methods of dairying, i.e., upon the proper selection and care of the dairy cow, rests the future agricultural prosperity of these provinces and their national greatness. I speak advisedly, because, I have only to point you to the Principality of Belgium, which less than fifty years ago was under conditions not any better than those which prevail in this province of Nova Scotia; a country no better agriculturally than we, smaller in area, and even less fertile; and last year, this little country produced over $100,000,000 worth of dairy products, while we in Nova Scotia produced only $4,000,000. Can we improve our conditions? We most certainly can. We want two things:—First, we want the assistance of the English and Scotch dairy farmer, men trained in the profession; and second, we want the widest possible markets for these products.

"I have said Sir, that it is unfortunate that our young men and maidens are leaving us for the West; that the farms which it was natural that we should suppose would be cultivated and improved by their hands, are falling into a measure of decay, or cultivated as best they may be by the older people. But again I say, we cannot blame them, it is their duty to improve their condition, they have not been trained for generations in the dairying business as these English and Scotch farmers have, they have been lumbermen and fishermen as well as farmers, and have thus acquired somewhat of a roving disposition; many of them have spent a portion of their early days in the cities of the neighboring republic, and consequently chafe at home restraints, and we can hardly expect to keep them. But the English and Scotch are different, and experience has proven that where settled in these provinces undr conditions at all favorable, they have been permanent and successful.

"I am well aware that in certain sections of these provinces the people make a distinct business of fruit raising, and depend almost solely for a livelihood on the production of apples and small fruits, but it is only very occasionally that you can find across the water any one wishing to come to this country who has had a special training in this direction; and those best acquainted with this branch of farming say that it can be most successfully conducted when associated with dairying, and mixed farming.

Best Markets Wanted.

"And now, Mr. President, allow me to say a word about markets. I previously said, that for the successful prosecution of the dairy industry in these provinces we want the widest possible markets for our products; and anything that I must say in this regard must not be construed as having a political tendency, because governments are simply obeying the mandate of the people; but for the full development of the dairy industry in these maritime provinces, it is imperative that we obtain free access to the 15,000,000 of people who occupy the cities on the Atlantic seaboard of the neighboring republic. Protect your manufacturing industries if you will, but the dairy farmer in these provinces needs no protection for his products. He wants to be allowed to enter the markets of the world free of duty if at all possible. But someone says what has this to do with the subject of immigration—very much; because one of the first questions which is asked by the prospective immigrant is, where are your markets? If we say England we are are at once told that it is a long haul of over 3,000 miles, and also that Holland and Belguim now have that market to the extent of over $100,000,000 annually. If we say that we have a good home market in the provinces, we are told that our total population would only make a good big city, and that two-thirds of them are farmers; we are also told, and quite truthfully, that if this is a dairy country, we should with such a population of farmers be exporting millions of dollars worth of dairy products, somewhere, annually.

"The truth of the matter is, that we have not developed this industry to one tithe of its possibilities, chiefly because of restricted markets.

"I am perfectly well aware that the prices which are obtained for dairy products at present in these provinces are good; and it is not that very much better prices would prevail, but it is the fact that if your output were increased four-fold there could be no glut in the market, and you would still have the assurance of fair profits.

Value of Maritime Milk.

"There are at present in these provinces about 300,000 milk cows, yielding a gross return of about $10,000,000 annually. The numbers of cows could easily be increased to 1,000,000, and the individual return from each animal by careful selection and feed, more than doubled; so that we are annually incurring a distinct loss of millions of dollars in this industry, which a trained immigration from the old land would do very much to curtail.

"I do not wish to detract in any way from the laudable efforts which the different local governments are putting forth, in order that a better understanding of these things may be given to the people, but it is hard to get the old men to change their methods, and as we said before, very many of the younger are casting their lot in western lands.

"I have dwelt longer with this phase of the subject than perhaps I should, but it is the side with which long experience has made me more familiar, and on which I feel I can speak with some authority. I now come to the labor question and this has become quite a problem in both east and west. Complaints are constantly made by our farmers that they cannot get skilled help to work their farms, and consequently they are obliged to curtail operations. There is very much truth in this statement. From the way in which our farms are at present operated, nearly all the hired help is required in the summer season, and it is not to be expected that a small army of laborers can do nothing for the greater part of the winter and be at our doors when spring opens, to give us the required assistance.

English and Scotch Laborers.

"In order to overcome this difficulty we must learn to employ most of our help by the year; and this is just where we can utilize the English or Scotch laborer to advantage. There are many of these men with families, who would be willing to emigrate to this country provided they had the assurance of steady work by the year, with a cottage in which to live on the farm, and in the course of time, these men and their children would, after becoming acquainted with the country, take up holdings for themselves and make splendid citizens. There is no question Mr. President, that in the matter of advertising our country and its resources, the west has had more attention paid to it than the east; but at the same time, I could not give my approval to any system, which would be the means of inducing immigration to these provinces in large numbers, without first making the proposed settler fully acquainted with prevailing conditions. That there is room in these provinces for large numbers of farmers there is no question. That a fair measure of success is practically assured to the right kind of settler, with a certain amount of capital, is reasonably sure; but the Government should see to it that each man is properly settled and honestly dealt with and not allowed to become the prey of designing men who think an Englishman was only made to be robbed. So good an authority as Sir Wm. Van Horne believes that these maritime provinces offer a splendid field for a certain class—the best class— those with sufficient capital to start with comfortably, because they could surround themselves with conditions similar to those to which they have been accustomed, and he suggests that the Government as an experiment should adopt a system of ready made homes, such as has been so successful in the West, and this could be done without any ultimate loss. That these homes should be grouped as much as possible so as to form neighborhoods, and that a certain oversight should be had of them to see that their methods were of the right sort. I think the suggestion a good one and could be carried out without any loss.

"I would add to this suggestion another, as a partial solution of the labor question. That the Government take immediate steps to find out from our best farmers who are in want of permanent help, if they would be willing to employ such laborers as I have suggested and erect suitable cottages on their farms for the accommodation of the men, and their families; and also the terms on which they would employ them. In very many instances the women would be of great assistance in the farm house for a portion of the day.

Land Flowing With Milk and Honey.

"The subject is a most interesting one and deserving of our serious consideration. I have given it my best thought with the time at my disposal and I find no fault with any one who may take a different view. The land in which we live is truly a land which flows with milk and honey and offers a sure competency to the intelligent and willing worker. Nature has withholden from us those illimitable stretches of fertile prairie on which can be grown for generations to come the wheat to feed the more densely populated countries of the world; but she has opened her hand most bountifully in the bestowal of an inhertance of mines and minerals so that situated as we are it would appear that sooner or later we are bound to become the very workshop of the world. She has also given us a beautiful land—a land of rivers and brooks ,mountain and valley, truly the dairy man's paradise. No other land that I know of will give surer returns to the intelligent prosecution of this great industry. The time is surely coming when the tide will turn eastward and abundant prosperity will be the reward of him who works and waits."

James Stairs of New Glasgow admired the address of Mr. Blanchard, but while agricultural labor was vital, he was sure labor for the industrial work of the East was needed. Mr. Blanchard had not suggested a remedy or a means of getting desirable immigrants. He was not familiar with agriculture, but he was with industrial matters. He found that many of the government immigration men were not practical. They might encourage labor men to come out who were quite incompetent. He thought the government should appoint a man to visit industrial plants and find out how much labor would be required in all the towns and cities of the East. The Dominion Coal and other companies brought out men from the Old Country who were chosen by their own paid agents whose expenses were paid by the company. He told how hard it was to get good men.

M. Lodge said he did not think that the immigration officers were of great importance to the Maritime Provinces. Better men should be sent over to Britain—men who know about the country. He firmly believed that some of their own men should be sent over there to tell of our advantages. He did not think the Englishmen were very desirable immigrants for the Eastern Provinces. He would prefer Danes, Swedes and Germans and others from the other countries where the products of agriculture etc., were produced, they would be better men. North of England men and Scotchmen, would be good men, but the Londoner would not suit the East.

Industrial Training at Home.

W. H. Belyea, of Newcastle, made a suggestion re keeping their own people at home. He declared they had no agricultural colleges in New Brunswick. Their own people should be trained along industrial and agricultural lines and not so much along classical lines.

Mr. Faulkner was shocked to hear such a suggestion, as the matter of agricultural and technical education was being most efficiently dealt with in Nova Scotia.

E. A. McCurdy seconded a resolution along the lines suggested by Mr. Belyea, but the president ruled the resolution was out of order as the constitution would not permit it.

Mr. Lodge believed the subject was a good one, and of great interest to New Brunswick.

The New Second Vice.

The nominating committee brought in the name of John Stanfield, of Truro, as 2nd Vice-President. Mr. Stanfield was unanimously elected in the place of H. J. Logan.

To Newcastle Next Year.

E. A. McCurdy extended an invitation from Newcastle for the next meeting.

D. A. Morrison moved, seconded by J. E. DeWolf that Mr. McCurdy's invitation be accepted. Carried unanimously.

The Prospects of The Board.

The future of the Maritime Board was brought forward by Halifax Board through A. E. Saunders, secretary. He said that the Maritime Board was robbed of some of its life by the abolition of contentious subjects. They felt at Halifax that controversies were always interesting. Further, something definite should be done to get these resolutions before the government.

H. J. Logan said he was glad to see the Board take on new life. He had attended many meetings and he would offer the chief suggestion namely "union." Let there be more union and he believed under Mr. Lodge, the Board would go ahead.

E. A. McCurdy suggested that Provincial Boards would be another solution. If all the Provincial subjects were threshed out on these Boards the Maritime Board meeting would be much more interesting. This would not abolish the Maritime Board, but would strengthen it.

Captain Read said that a political union in the Maritime Provinces was impossible; the best union to maintain would come through the Maritime Board of Trade. What they wanted was to get rid of croakers. Get the optimism of the West. It was very nice to ask Mr. Lodge to take this or that, but it would not be fair to ask any man to do this out of his own pocket. He thought they should ask the government to give a subsidy to the Board. He suggested that a committee be appointed to try to arrange funds for the Board.

Hon. C. W. Robinson felt that the officers had a great deal to do with its success. He felt sure that this year would see a regeneration of the Maritime Board. He was opposed to Provincial Boards. That would not be good for the Maritime Board. The Maritime idea was a good one and deserved encouragement.

Dr. Dunbar said that the Maritime Board would depend upon the vitality of local Boards. He told his experience with local Boards last year. Boards everywhere seemed in a moribund condition. He was opposed to Provincial Boards and he presaged great things for the future.

Ed. McCurdy concluded the meeting by proposing the following resolution which was seconded by Capt. Read and adopted unanimously.

"Resolved:—That the Executive of the Maritime Board be requested to call upon the Railway Commission when in Ottawa and obtain an assurance from them that steps will be taken forthwith to compel the railways to charge in future the same passenger rates from West to East as from East to West in order that all provinces of the Dominion be placed on an equal footing."

Delegates Are Entertained.

The Truro Board entertained the visitors to a delightful auto drive about the town of Truro, and wound up by a reception in the Park (considered one of the most beautiful in the world.) There a band concert was given lasting from 3 to 5 p.m., and a most appetising luncheon was served. Speeches and songs enlivened a pleasant afternoon and many compliments were extended Dr. Dunbar and his faithful committee who contributed so much to the success of the function.

Some Advantages of the Convention Town

Location of Truro, Nova Scotia, and Its Commercial and Educational Facilities—Has an Agricultural Model Farm—Boasts of One of the World's Most Beautiful Parks — Contains More Than a Thousand Acres.

Teeming with historic interest and great natural beauty the town of Truro, N.S., where the Maritime Board of Trade met this year served to attract the delegates during their stay. Truro was founded away back in 1761, and today has a population of about 7,000. Situated in the geographical centre of the Province of Nova Scotia, Truro lays claim to special attractions for the special investor. The town is best known as an educational centre, yet it has two or three large factories, the products of which enjoy a reputation limited only by the two oceans. It has good schools, well kept streets, fine churches and all the progressive elements that go to make up a modern town.

One of the important institutions of the locality is the Nova Scotia Agricultural Model Farm, which is conducted by the local government for the benefit of such farmers as are desirous of acquiring technical and scientific training. The assessed valuation of property for 1912 was $3,398,300 with existing debentures of $461,000. Since 1899 annual deposits are made to a sinking fund which will retire all debentures maturing after 1919 as they fall due.

The shipping facilities of Truro are excellent, and it is said there are few towns in the Dominion possessing any better. Every day there are over a dozen freight trains from Truro (exclusive of specials) as well as 12 regular passenger trains. These trains are operated by the C.P.R. and I.C.R. The town is within 1¾ hours ride of Halifax harbor At present there is in course of construction a handsome freight shed and railway depot. The depot it is said will have no equal east of Montreal.

John Stanfield, who was made 2nd vice-president this year is one of Truro's ablest men, and is head of the well-known manufacturing establishment of Stanfield's Ltd. Mr. Stanfield is also member of the federal house. It is said that 50 per cent. of the goods manufactured in Truro are marketed in the Canadian West. The park is considered by many as to be the most beautiful in the world, and it is here that the visiting delegates were entertained to a luncheon by the local board of trade. The park contains over 1,000 acres, and certainly is unlike anything in the world in its peculiar beauty.

The surrounding country is fertile, and lends itself readily to dairying, beef raising, mixed farming and market gardening.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Good demand.

Pepper—Foreign markets fluctuating.

Corn Syrup—Better demand.

Montreal, Aug. 29. — When all has been summed up, it is felt that business in grocery lines for August will compare favorably with that of other years. Collections are reported as fairly good and prospects for the fall now appear bright.

With preserving season in full swing, there is a good demand for sugar, while jobbers are finding a sorting trade in fruit jars and associated lines. Corn syrup is moving better and with advent of cooler weather will be taking on its usual fall activity.

SUGAR.—There was quite a flurry recently in sugar in New York and reports locally were to effect that an advance of 15 cents had been scored. A good volume of business was done on the strength of it but later advices showed that advance was only ten cents. In spite of this, however, no change took place 'locally.'

There is quite a good amount of business passing at present and it looks as if those dealers who were holding back expecting a decline are now tired of waiting and are replenishing depleted stocks. It is said, however, that there is not any oversupply of refined anywhere, so that in view of big demand, dealers would do well to keep their eye on this market.

MOLASSES AND SYRUP. — Recent advance in prices of maple syrup with a higher tendency still has stimulated to some extent the sale of corn syrups, which have been meeting with full attention from the trade.

Molasses is in strong demand and a good season's business is ahead. Prices are steady with no immediate change.

DRIED FRUITS. — Just before new crop raisins arrive there seems to be a move on the part of wholesalers to dispose of old crop holdings, but no concessions are being made. Tone of market at the coast is firm.

Up to the present, prunes were being held stubbornly by packers and there was no anxiety to sell. To-day, in spite of reports of failure of European crop, prices have eased and it is not any too difficult to obtain supplies.

New crop figs are coming in for some show of interest and opening prices should be named soon. Apricots are dull, the market showing no signs of brightening up.

COFFEE.—As frequently stated future of coffee market depends entirely on the new crop, and it is interesting to note the effect various advices about the crop have on the market. When reports came to hand of good flowering and larger crop, prices began to ease, but the reaction took place when weather conditions become more unfavorable. Of course the August flowering has a lot to say on the matter as it never sticks so fast as during October and if it is good it lessens the October growth, so that with adverse conditions climatically under these circumstances a reduction in the new crop would be a foregone conclusion. However, taken as a whole news from centres of production is encouraging so that a good crop is expected.

Though market has its ups and downs primarily the prices here do not change so that following quotations still prevail.

SPICES.—Though pickling season is now in full swing, trade is fairly quiet but there is an increase in demand over corresponding period of last year. Some large dealers are beginning to look ahead and secure fall supplies. Pepper is becoming tricky because the fluctuations are more than erratic with a downward tendency. Still at time of writing cables from foreign points indicate firmness making the situation all the more perplexing.

There can be no doubt but that supplies of spices are limited so that the large consuming countries will have to look to the primary centres again. This will make the situation interesting and we expect some interesting developments around the fall.

RICE.—Reports to hand re condition of crops in China are reassuring though in some parts serious damage has been done by floods. Around Wuhu for instance the dykes have been washed away and with them the hopes of a bumper crop, it being stated on pretty reliable grounds that rice to the value of £1,750,000 has been destroyed or in our own currency $8,750,000. In spite of the reduction of the import duty, the high prices prevailing in Japan have undergone little change.

There is a medium amount of business passing locally without any change in prices.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Pink Salmon—50c case lower.

Foreign Peas.—Higher.

Sugar.—Change to steadiness.

Toronto, Aug. 29.—Exhibition is in full swing this week and local wholesalers are having many visits from country merchants who while in the city take the time to do a little business.

The large crowds in the city help business for local retailers, but country merchants appear to be getting a fair volume of trade. Jobbers report a good movement of general grocery lines. "Indeed" said one wholesaler, "business has been particularly good this summer. Even during July, which is usually quite a quiet season, we were busy."

Sugar, which has taken on a firmer tendency is moving well. An entirely new line to be exhibited at the exhibition this year is sugar, the Canada Sugar Refining Co., having a display. The new carton sugar is the feature.

SUGAR.—There has been quite a decided change in the complexion of the sugar market during the past week. A market which only a short time ago gave indications of an easier tone has assumed quite a steady front. This is shown by an advance of 10 cents made in refined in New York.

Raws in New York have been firming and are now 61 points above lowest figure for season Slightly adverse crop conditions in Europe caused a strengthening there and Cubas followed. Market is now one of the uncertain propositions in which it is hard to tell what the future may be, but there is no denying the fact that the market is showing a much steadier feeling at present.

DRIED FRUITS—Spot dried fruits offer no special features. This is not the busy season, but a normal demand for time of year is apparent.

Interest in new crop is fairly active. Cables from Greece note a slightly easier tone in currants, but it is apparent that there will be considerable poor fruit this year. Valencia raisins also show just a slight tinge of easiness.

California prunes are unchanged. Raisin market on coast shows a slight improvement.

SPICES—Spices continue to move out well, the advent of the pickling season acting as a stimulant to certain lines. There is a general tone of steadiness including such lines as cloves, cinnamon, nutmegs, and pepper. It is perhaps most marked in the case of cloves. There was a slightly easier turn to pepper on foreign markets which, however, had no effect on local situation. There is a somewhat firmer tone to peppers again.

COFFEE.—There was a weaker and irregular market in coffee for a time but it has given way to a firmer undertone again. We speak of the New York market. There was no change here. Probably the anticipation of a large yield of coffee in Brazil for 1913-14 caused the weakening.

RICE AND TAPIOCA. — Although there is some improvement shown in rice in Far East, dealers are looking for no concessions here as some lines at least have not been advancing in proportion to values on primary markets. Considerable business was done in Texas rice here last year. It then sold around 6 cents, but will probably be higher this year in keeping with other lines.

Tapioca prices are well maintained.

BEANS.—Spot beans show absolutely no change, continuing scarce and firm.

First estimate on California lima bean crop places yield at a figure between 1,000,000 and 1,150,000 sacks. This falls below output of last year about 150,000 sacks or more.

The Situation in Canned Goods

TORONTO. — Lower prices on pink salmon than anticipated is an interesting news feature. It appears that prices on this grade of salmon have been reduced 50 cents per case from the opening figure named.

The version given by one local jobber is that one packer cut the price 50 cents per case below that first named and that others followed. There is no price to the retailer set by packers on this line as is the case with sockeye. As pinks opened at same figure as last year, this reduction makes them lower than last season's pack which is decidedly contrary to the general trend of salmon.

Local dealers say that the prices quoted on this year's salmon across the line which is lower than last year will have little effect on price of salmon in Canada.

As pointed out before foreign peas have been stiffening on account of poor outturn of pack. Prices were named early in the spring but higher values would be demanded now but as one wholesaler said, "You would probably be unable to get a price because they haven't any to sell. We have also received word from English packers that they will only be able to deliver a small percentage of orders."

Advices say French sardine pack is small and fish large.

A strong situation has been developing in California fruit lines and the association has found it necessary to issue a new list making some advances for the most part 10 cents per dozen over opening prices.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Coffee—Weaker.

Sugar—Unsettled.

Canned Goods—Scarce and Dear.

Winnipeg, Aug. 28.—The expectation of a very heavy yield in Brazil for 1913 is responsible for an easier feeling in coffee ,but the present visible supply does not seem to warrant any noticeable decline. Coffee situation is to say the least complicated, the market perhaps more than any other being in the hands of factions who attempt to manipulate it for their own ends.

There is much dissatisfaction here at the proposed new freight classifications by the railroads and they will be opposed strongly by the Canadian manufacturers association.

On cereals cooked and ready, the new classification would increase charges on a car lot $48 to Winnipeg, $117.60 to Calgary and Edmonton, $88.50 to Regina, and $100.80 to Saskatoon.

As regards present trade conditions, business is brisk and the outlook good. Prices are unchanged.

SUGAR—Sugar market is in an unsettled state. Raw sugars are dearer and refined sugars cheaper. At the same time there is a good demand and certainly there was never more sold in Western Canada.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Aug. 28.—Business with local trade continues quite promising. Haying being done by the farmers has caused a slump in many districts with travelers for local wholesale houses, and has also been responsible for a jump in price of butter and eggs, as these commodities are not being brought to the city in quantities which the demand would warrant. Hand-picked beans seem to be adding to their already firm standing.

Potatoes have taken a marked slump this week, falling to 80 and 90 cents a bushel. There seems to be a good crop in most sections of province, despite the fact that early reports indicated a falling off compared with other years.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Aug. 28.—There is a fair volume of business passing in wholesale grocery trade, considering high prices for most market leaders. Pork and pork products continue to advance. Hams are quoted at 18½ cents, with probability that they will go still higher. Roll is up to 15 cents, and sides are quoted at 19 cents, highest price that has prevailed here for many years.

Butter is in fairly good supply, creamery prints being quoted at 27 cents, while choice dairy in small tubs is selling at 23 to 24 cents. Nearly all butter on market now is of good quality.

There is heavy demand for sugar, as preserving season is at its height. Standard granulated is $5.10, United Empire $5, bright yellow $4.30, No. 1 yellow $4.60, and unbranded $4.50.

Canners have notified wholesale dealers that only sixty per cent. of their orders will be filled this season.

Potatoes are selling freely at $1 per bushel. Outlook for crop with province this season is not very favorable. The weather has been wet and cold. Fruits of various kinds are coming on market now. The early variety of apples is fairly good.

SNAP FOR COUNTRY MERCHANT.

How Simple it is for Him to Conduct Business Smoothly.

Here is an interesting soliloquy from a country merchant on the "snap" he has operating a business:

"Yes, I certainly have a snap. Wholesale houses send duns every month and draw on me at sight, but if I send a bill to a farmer he becomes swearing mad and quits trading at my store. While I am hard up for money, many of those who are owing me are sending money in advance to mail order houses. If I contribute money for any cause people say I am bidding for trade. If I don't they say I am a hog. Every day I am expected to dig up for everything that comes along from a raffle ticket to a church fund by people who claim I ought to do this because they do part of their trading here, but our friends Robert Simpson and T. Eaton neither buy tickets nor help the church fund, and yet they get the cash in advance. If I sell a pair of pants I must treat the family to candy and cigars; if I buy a load of potatoes I must do the same.

"Customers who are able to pay hang on to their money while I pay 10 per cent. at the bank to get ready cash. I have a big business during hard times and poor crops, from people who are willing to do trade with me provided I can duplicate catalogue house prices and wait until harvest for money. My scales weigh too much, when I sell sugar and too little when I buy butter. I am a thief, a liar and a grafter. If I smile I am a soft soapy hypocrite, and if I don't I am a grump. Yes, certainly this is a snap."

And he looked over $10,000 worth of accounts, all good, and wonders how he could raise $350 to pay a sight draft due to-morrow."

Many Prizes for Well Decorated Rigs

Vancouver Grocers Have Another Successful Picnic—Held It at Exhibition Park—Winners of Interest to the Trade in the Parade.

Vancouver, B.C., August 28.—(Special).—Practically all grocers in the city closed for the annual picnic this year which was held at the exhibition grounds, it being exhibition week. The affair was most successful, a large number taking part in the procession to the grounds, and in the events which formed the programme of the afternoon.

The procession formed down town at 11 o'clock, and nearly one hundred vehicles of different kinds followed the band. Most of the vehicles were decorated, some of the motor trucks being filled with pretty girls dressed in white; others with samples of goods, while flowers, bunting and flags were lavishly used. In one a coffee grinding machine was set up and was worked, demonstrating how that portion of the grocery business is conducted. The parade was conducted without a single drawback, and was well worth seeing.

Prizes for Decorated Rigs..

It was grocers' day at the fair, and in addition to special events put on by the exhibition directors, the dealers had a programme of their own. Prizes were awarded as follows:—

Best decorated rig in parade.—First, Swift Canadian Company; second, Parkinson & Archibald; third, Parkinson & Archibald.

Best decorated retail delivery wagon.—First, D. S. G. Kelly; second, A. & C. Grocery; third, F. T. Rolston.

Best decorated delivery automobile.—First, Kelly, Douglas & Company; second, Kelly, Douglas & Company; third, Oscar Brown.

Best decorated retail delivery automobile.—First, London Grocery; third, A. & C. Grocery.

Traveller's race.—Messrs Edwards, Slade and Storey.

Horse race.—A. & C. Grocery.

Grocery clerks' race.—Messrs Livingston, Petch and Powell.

Hamilton Grocers "Hump" a Success

Visiting Dealers From Brantford and Toronto in Attendance—A Number of New Features Dovetailed into the Usual Programme—Visitors Win Tug-of-War But Lose the Ball Game to Locals.

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 28.—(Special)—A while before the leaves begin to turn, there is a certain annual twitching sensation which seizes the members of the local Retail Grocers' Association and elevates their buoyant spirits. The cause may easily be traced to the near approach of the annual "Hump." When the day arrives—and it came this year on Wednesday last—one may see a "trecking" of men from behind the counter to the conveyance which carries them to the stamping grounds where the "Hump" is held.

Imagine the stride of the strong muscled camel as it nears the oasis in the heart of the desert, where troubles will be banished and contentment found. Then you will have the eagerness with which the Hamilton grocer hies himself off every year to the annual "Hump."

Everyone knows full well that prayers avail little unless they inspire one to work. The prayer of the Association was fully realized this year again because those in charge of the event saw to it that the necessary preparations were perfected. And it was a great "Hump."

Brantford and Toronto Visitors.

The "Hump" went to Mountain Park, located east of the East End incline. It not only included Hamilton grocers, but fellow members of the trade from Brantford and Toronto were there. It was an afternoon of fun. With Secretary "Bay" Hill engineering the function what else could be the case? His serious looks always belie the underlying humor. Frequently from his appearance one might expect a Sunday School announcement, while instead, it is likely to be that of a four-legged race, a pick-a-back, or a bottle-breaking competition.

Among the feature events were a tug-of-war, a ball game, bottle breaking contest, and the aforementioned four-legged race.

The tug-of-war was between a team of visiting grocers and the locals. The visitors won despite the fact that such strong men as W. Waters, Ed. Hazel, Andy Bain and W. Smye were opposing them. The victors line-up included: H. G. McDonald, S. W. Hall, D. W. Clark, D. McLean, all of Toronto, assisted by Messrs Clarke, Moore, McKew, J. Burns, A. Burns, jr.; S. Miller and E. J. Church, of Brantford.

The locals were: J. L. Brown, F. Hutchinson, R. D. Saul, O. W. Robins, M. Cummings, W Waters, W. Smye, E. Hazell, M. Burkholder and A. Bain.

Display of Markmanship.

It needs considerable marksmanship to break a bottle with a broom blindfolded—that is, the marksmen were blindfolded, not the broom. A great deal depends what's in the bottle, no doubt, as one bystander remarked during the contest, as well as the power of one's olfactory nerves. In spite of handicaps in this regard the first prize went to D. W. Clark, of Toronto.

Marksmanship with the aid of the eye was also exhibited, the victor in this contest being none other than James Mellen, President of the Brantford Retail Grocers' Association.

Hamilton grocers won the baseball game from the visitors—remember the score, 23 to 10. No wonder they lost the tug-of-war. The winners included: Cann, Semmens, Knox, Smith, Slater, Brown, Cummings, White and Copple.

Visitors: Burns, Church, Miller, Burns jun., Moore, Davis, Hall, McDonald and Clark.

Umpire—Bay Hill.

John Forth was chairman of the outing and he has reason to feel proud of the result, and still remain modest.

Lesson 20--Course in Card Writing

Course of Twenty Lessons Comprising Edwards Short-cut System, Closes With One on Lower Case Script—Note the Accompanying Plate and the Three Cards Demonstrating its Use.

By J. C. Edwards. Copyright, Canada, 1911.

Commencing with the plate it will be wise for the student to go over every letter and study it carefully, practicing every stroke until he becomes thoroughly acquainted with it.

In reviewing the previous lesson it will be noted that, in actual use the letters were almost always joined together as we were taught to do in our school or business college days. This is absolutely essential, and another point always to remember is—that every letter should be on the same slant, i.e., supposing that a line were drawn at an inclination of say 20 degrees, every letter should be so balanced as to have this same slant. Practice, of course, is necessary to acquire a uniform line of letters, each having the same slant, same proportions and no open spaces between the letters of a card.

Get Away from Conventionalities.

If Christopher Columbus had not thought that something lay beyond the vast expanse of water he never would have set out on the voyage that terminated in the discovery of America. So it is with everything else to-day. The idea of learning something new, of discovering something different, something out of the ordinary, leads to new inventions and promotes civilization. The cardwriter who contents himself with learning the technical points of lettering, if he practices diligently, will be a maker of cards, not a cardwriter. He must break away from the old rut and drift into new channels of his own and add his own originality.

Script in Outline.

More care needs to be taken in writing outline script when it is to be filled in solid. The strokes must be made as uniform as possible. A sample of this style of letter is shown in the "French gowns" card. The letters are outlined as shown in the plate and then filled in with the shade. The form of decoration in this card is very simple. The card is deep champagne and the decoration is white which shows up very faintly, except in the case of the fleur-de-lis design at the top of the card which has a shade rubbed in with dry color before the design is put on. This gives it a relief effect and makes it stand out strong.

The Decoration Suggests the Heading.

In the "Blue Bird Series" card the design suggests the heading at first glance. It is a blue bird cut out of wall paper and pasted on at the top of the card, breaking into the top display line. We all know that this is not always possible, yet if one keeps his eyes open he can often pick up such appropriate suggestions or if he has access to a first-class wall paper department many good ideas may be got without much effort.

And the Spacing—Don't Forget.

Watch your spacing and don't get a one-sided effect. A light line may be drawn down the centre of the card and one across, then lay out the card in pencil, at first (only roughly) to make sure that the lettering comes out right, leaving the same space on both sides of the card and the same top and bottom. Also watch the letter spacing which is even more important. In the case of the "Blue Bird" card, where a reader occurs and a sentence is written in lower case, the words should be almost the space of a letter apart, but when it is necessary to crowd them or, by mistake, two words are crowded, the idea used in this card may be brought into play, viz: "edition" was commenced too near the word "last" and, therefore, the two words run together. A small circle or dot was used to separate them and it was also necessary to balance the line by using the same between the words "the" and "last." You will notice that the ornamentation of this card comes up very near the top while the reading matter does not come as near the bottom of the card. This is a warrantable exception to the rule as the ornament is not at all the important part of the card and is only an auxiliary to help out or strengthen the wording and is a minor or subdued tone. This may often occur in cardwriting where a bunch of flowers or some other decoration is used.

Proprietors Relationship to Salesmen

Co-operation Rather Than Running the Business Single Handed is Advised—Some Responsibility Should be Placed on Trusted Employes—This Tends to Make Them More Loyal to the Business.

By F. C. Williams.

The great question confronting many proprietors especially in the small places is not so much the high cost of living as competent help.

During my sixteen years of experience in the retail business along this line, I have had several changes in the management of my business but have been very fortunate in the selection of competent managers and clerks.

I believe that a good method to obtain the best that is in your staff is to shoulder all the responsibility you can on them. Make them feel they are a part of the concern; turn over as much of the weight of the business as possible on them. Make them feel the dignity of their calling and that you value their weight and ability in your behalf.

Consultations are Suggested.

Discuss twisted problems with the staff. Get their opinions and ideas and decide mutually on the best policy to adopt under difficult circumstances.

Frequently a good manager will understand certain phases of the business, perhaps a little better than the owner himself, and only by mutual, earnest discussion can this ability of the manager be brought to the front. I have known managers who understood certain points of the business better than the proprietor, viz: The buying of certain lines of goods and the selecting of certain lines to best suit that particular trade as well as the amounts most advisable to buy. Yet many proprietors will continue to ignore all this valuable assistance at his disposal, and will act on his own and less competent knowledge in that particular branch of the work.

I do not like too much stress put on set hours. A good manager will not watch the clock, but rather the sales, the service given to customers and the condition of the stock. If a manager has the business end at heart and is made of the right kind of stuff, the question of hours will not be considered but rather, the increasing of sales and the enlarging of the business in general.

Privileges and Favors.

A proprietor and his manager and clerks should be closely associated with no differences between them. A man in whom you can place unlimited confidence, who has been tested and found worthy of it, should be granted certain privileges and favors. He should be made to feel that he is a partner in the concern rather than a mere figurehead or piece of machinery. A working together as one united firm should be the rule rather than having vacancies or gaps of interest between the members.

Climbing the Ladder.

Some employes get along better than others. This is evident to anyone. One manager I had walked right up the ladder quickly. He made good at every turn and in a few years with the writer, bought out a business in an adjoining town, forming an equal partnership. Results are, after about two years duration, gratifying in every respect. He has developed into a bright and clever proprietor so to speak and will some time own a large business entirely of his own. My experience has taught me that in the future, my policy shall be not to hold down or stand in the way of any deserving employe, but on the other hand will encourage and assist him all I can.

DRYING AND FREEZING EGGS.

The Department of Agriculture of the United States Government, has issued a statement dealing with dried or frozen eggs and their use in food products. Good eggs may be so treated, says the department, and used for food without injury to health. The statement reads as follows:

"Frozen and dried eggs intended for human consumption are largely used for cooking purposes where inferiority may be concealed. The traffic in eggs sold for drying and freezing has greatly increased in the last few years.

"Strictly fresh marketable eggs in the shell command a high price and there is difficulty in meeting the demand for them, but large quantities of questionable eggs, often bought at very low prices, have been broken out for cooking purposes by disreputable firms, being preserved by freezing or drying until ready for use.

"There is no objection to drying or freezing good eggs under proper sanitary conditions."

In the United States six sugar firms now put up sugar in cartons. In Canada it is put up in cartons by two companies, The Canada Sugar Refining Co. and the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries.

Following items are from The Canadian Grocer of September 2, 1892:—

"A number of Ottawa grocery stores were visited on the 27th by one of the officers of the Inland Revenue Department for the purpose of ascertaining if there were any violations in the law providing for the keeping of tobacco in the same boxes as it was originally purchased in. Some 400 pounds of the weed was seized."

"Egan Bros., grocers, have purchased from J. H. Price, a store on Talbot Street east, St. Thomas, for $3,000."

Editor's Note.—Egan Bros. are still in business on Talbot St., St. Thomas after a lapse of 20 years.

"W. E. Zimmerman, a traveler in the employ of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, died on Monday evening of typhoid fever. He was well known and much sympathy is expressed for his young widow. Mr. Zimmerman was 36 years of age and was formerly with A. R. Kerr & Co."

"The demand for eggs is about the same as last week. Receipts are still heavy and some of the stock arriving is not up to much. We noted last week that the export trade had been stopped nor is it likely to start for some time. Prices at this point are about the same and we quote the 11 to 12 cent. figures."

Editor's Note.—This item is from our Montreal market report of September 2, 1892. Note the contrast in the price of eggs 20 years ago and to-day. In this week's issue they are quoted from 29 to 32 cents on Montreal market for selects and new laids respectively.

An inventory of the estate of the late Thomas A. Snider, catsup manufacturer, was filed at Cincinnati on July 31. His personal estate amounted to $97,704.50, with real estate valued at $100,000. Among his effects was found $93,628 worthless stock and worthless debts of $5,720. Debts collectible of $22,500 also were listed.

Lemon Prices Likely to Be Maintained

As There Will Be Few More Coming Along Before New Crop —General Strength in Markets—Domestic Fruits Coming in for Good Deal of Attention—California Fruits Also Selling Well—Malaga Grapes In.

The lemon market has had an undertone of firmness all summer. It was pointed out in these columns early in the season that strong lemon market could not be expected this summer and such has been the case. What might have been if we had had as warm a summer as last year is difficult to say. There has been a fair and steady demand but it did not reach the big proportions of last year.

While the major portion of the summer has been left behind, there is nothing at present to indicate any weakening in lemon market. On the other hand it presents a strong front. There will be no more lemons of any account coming along until the new crop begins to move out about Nov. 1. One Canadian importer reports that the Italian Government has seized all lemons in Sicily for the use of their solders in Tripoli. This means present supplies will have to tide us over until new crop arrives. There has been a general strong feeling, values are higher in New York and it looks as if Canadian prices will be well maintained.

These are busy times now on the fruit markets, domestic fruits being the centre of attraction. Peaches are running more to the freestone variety but prices hold at fairly high level. Considerable business is being done in canteloupes while fancy fruit from California is selling well. Peaches are more reasonable while plums also shape that way. California pears are about to an end and Oregon will be commencing. Malaga grapes are also coming along now.

Supplies of new onions are being received. Summer stock of Spanish onions has been selling for some time but is now being replaced by winter stock. They are more fully matured and therefore keep better.

MONTREAL.

VEGETABLES.—Vegetables continue to move out freely, the chief varieties being Canadian, a very small assortment coming from the other side. Sweet potatoes are exceptionally scarce while New York leeks are no longer quoted. U.S. potatoes are coming along in barrels and are having a ready sale.

GREEN FRUITS.—The domestic fall fruit trade is now getting under a good head of steam and will shortly be moving at its liveliest clip. The fruit market is a busy spot these days, as a result, while shippers in the fruit sections are also sending goodly quantities to country retailers direct.

Good peaches are coming in this week, stock running more to the freestone variety. Prices on these maintain quite a stiff front. Fancy varieties are in demand this week on account of exhibition while California fruit is selling briskly. Malaga grapes of sweet and fancy stock are in this week at $2.50 to $2.75 per box. Some fine canteloupes are coming in at 50 to 75c per basket.

Lemons hold quite a strong front and are likely from present indications to continue so.

VEGETABLES. — While tendency of corn on the cob was considered as downward by dealers last week, it has failed to move in that direction. Growth of this line appears to be real slow this year.

Winter stock of Spanish onions is now coming along and commands a slightly firmer figure as they are better matured and better keepers. Potatoes are increasing in supply and Ontario stock is now selling at 1.50 to 1.60 per bag with imported stock now a small factor.

Cucumbers and tomatoes are now being given considerable attention.

Another Oyster Season Has Opened

Shipments are Now Coming Along—Will Act as Stimulant to Fish Department—Advantages of Starting to Handle Early—More Attention Being Given to Fish by Wholesalers.

The opening of the oyster season gives another line which should assist in stimulating business in the fish department. Quintal shipments of the line have come along to most Canadian markets and from now on will continue, although quantity will be somewhat limited until cooler weather sets in.

Much might be said about the advantages of starting to handle oysters early, but one of the most prominent reasons is that appetites should be keen for this line after long period of non-supply.

Greater interest is being given to fish by wholesalers and this is shortly expected to be reflected in the retail trade. Increased varieties of fancy sea fish are being brought in to swell the list of available lines. Smoked lines are creating more interest. Factories on the coast are running full time and report a good call for smoked lines from inland Canadian points.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Halibut have been scarce this week owing to storms along the coast. Small shipments of Gaspe Salmon are coming to hand, while B. C. salmon is also difficult to secure in any quantities. Haddock and cod are not so plentiful as last week, but prices remain the same. Supplies of lake fish are improving. Prices for fancy New York fish such as Bluefish, Sea Bass, remain firm and the quality of the stock is fine.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Week has been marked by the initial shipment of oysters for the season, which came in on Saturday last. The season can now be said to be really started and regular shipments in limited quantities will be coming along till the weather becomes cooler and makes a general activity possible.

Wholesale fish men are already putting greater efforts behind trade as is shown by increased varieties of fish now being offered. The additional lines are principally ocean fish. Whitefish and trout are scarce at present. Frogs' legs are quoted at 50 cents per pound.

New kippered herrings and mackerel are in, the former quoted at $1.50 for 40's and latter at $2.50 for 80's.

In shell fish, there are winkles at $1.00 peck, clams at $1.50 per 100, whelks and mussells at $1.00 peck and dulce at 15c lb.

In the window of the Wm. Davies' store on Queen St., near Yonge this week is a monster sword fish. It is only a year old yet weighs about 1,000 pounds. The sword is about a yard long. Sword fish steak is being sold off it, retail at 20 cents per pound.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Unfavorable weather has greatly interfered with fishing operations along Nova Scotia coast during past week. There has been little sun and fishermen ashore have been unable to dry their fish. Fresh fish are in light demand, and there is little doing in the export line. Some small catches of mackerel have been made along the coast. The fish are extra large and were quickly bought up.

Swordfish are in abundance, but few are sold here. The most of these fish are shipped to the United States market, where good prices are obtained. Smoked fish factories are running full time, and substantial orders continue to come along from upper Canadian points.

COMPLETE COURSE ON CARD WRITING.

Black and White Always Strong.

The millinery card demonstrates the use of white script lettering with a black, left-hand shade. It also shows the application of the script lettering in two bold diagonal lines, giving it the proper spacing and using no decoration outside of the relief panel. The card, however, is of oatmeal finish in green which adds much to the effect and gives it a fancy touch. "Advance Styles" is an eccentric form of lettering giving a half script and half Roman effect which is quite in keeping with the other lettering.

Interesting Facts About Oyster Growth

Formation of the Spawn, How it Comes to the Surface and Gradually Sinks on Becoming Heavier — Year Old Shells Placed Where Embryo Can Hang On—Oyster is Sensitive to the Cold—Trouble in Winter When Bays are Frozen Over—Sometimes Causes Shortage When Big Supplies are Expected.

With the coming of September—the first of the autumn months—the oyster season is also ushered in and retail dealers who go after the extra profit in the sale of oysters, will soon be making preparations for the early first-of-the-season trade.

To effectively sell an article necessitates a good knowledge of that article. The same applies to the oyster. The dealer who studies the oyster, its growth, capture and its habits, etc., is in a much better position to sell it. He has more confidence in himself and the greater the confidence he has in his own powers the more goods will he sell in many lines.

Formation of the Spawn.

The propagation and cultivation of oysters is an interesting study. The spawn begins to form in the oyster in June; it continues to collect until the sack around the muscle is well filled. This spawn is discharged usually in August, the time depending on climatic conditions. If the summer is warm, they spawn out early; if cool, the spawning is later and sometimes they do not spawn at all. For instance, this year an oyster man who returned a couple of weeks ago from an inspection of his company's beds found that in some places the oysters had all spawned out and the embryo had set on the new shell.

In other beds he found the oysters had not let go of any of the spawn. This spawn comes to the surface in the form of a milk or cream and with the assistance of the sun is fertilized and a primitive shell is grown. As the oyster develops it becomes heavier and sinks to the bottom.

How Embryo Hangs On

Each embryo is provided with a hairy appendage with which it clings to anything that is smooth and hard, but the object it clings to, must be clean. For this reason oyster growers take the empty shells which accumulate from the oysters opened the year previous, load them onto scows, take them out and shovel them into beds of the spawning oysters. The spawn being a liquid will come up through the empty shells to the waters' surface and when it fertilizes and returns to the bottom, the fresh clean shells are there for the embryo to cling to. One hundred young oysters might be found on a single shell, none of the embryo being larger than that of a pin head.

As these oysters grow they of course take up more space and crowd each other off the old shell they originally clung to. These oysters are dredged up and usually planted on ground that has been cleaned up during the season just past. Some growers leave them on that ground until they are ready to take them up and market them.

Should be Four Years Old.

It is generally considered most profitable not to open oysters until they are four years old. They are fully matured at that time and have as much flavor and strength as they will ever have.

It is generally conceded, however, that oysters do considerably better if transplanted to other grounds. The term fattening or finishing ground, is usually applied to places where the currents are such that the oysters will fatten more quickly, or places where the water is shallow and will as a result heat up quicker; oysters fatten more quickly in warmer waters. When they come out of spawn they are poor, but pick up very rapidly until about the middle of November. This is also regulated by the weather.

Don't Like the Cold.

When the water gets cold, the oysters hibernate, the gills being very sensitive to cold. They do not improve after about the first of December until spring. It is during January and February that the oyster grower has his real trouble combating the ice and heavy storms. Some people are still of the opinion that salt water will not freeze.

In February last there were points along the Atlantic Coast where they claim they had 8 feet of ice over oyster beds that growers had expected to be getting oysters from at that time. These are matters that the inland dealer cannot appreciate. It is hard for the retailer to understand why it should be more difficult to obtain oysters when they are most needed, but it is a fact that there are days when it is a physical impossibility for boats to get away from their docks. Many times an attempt is made, but they have to turn back. In such cases the expenses of the growers continue with no recompense.

Dealers will therefore realize the troubles and difficulties the grower sometimes has in mid-winter getting material to supply his trade, and will criticise him less severely in future.

SWORD FISH AND HALIBUT.

Two Lines Now in Season—Comparisons Made Between Them.

Some leaders in the fish line just now are Haddock, Cod, Herring, Halibut, Salmon, Mackerel and Sword Fish.

Perhaps the majority of dealers are familiar with the above lines, and others which are here omitted, but there is considerable doubt as to whether the sword fish is edible, so that a few words about it will not be amiss.

The sword fish season is not a lengthy one, lasting at the limit from six to eight weeks, nor is the catch ever certain or large. But it is claimed that it offers good nutritious food with a greater sustaining power, even than that of the halibut. Furthermore, the grocer can offer a customer a sword fish steak at a most reasonable price.

The dealer, again, who has a fish department—and every grocer should—has a splendid oportunity right here to cause intense interest in his store by securing a sword fish and placing it in a window specially prepared for it. The number of people who would inquire about the monster could be given a little selling talk, and ten to one made carry away enough to try and satisfy themselves of its good rich flavor.

The halibut is another fish of the larger tribe which should have a ready sale everywhere. It is mostly cut up into steaks by the dealer, but the flesh is most delicate and sweeter than that of the sword fish. The bulk of the halibut is caught off the shores of Vancouver in deep water, though they have often been found in shallow inlets. With the large influx of immigrants to the Western provinces there is a ready market for the generally good catch there, while Eastern Canada, supplied by the fisheries off the Maritime coast also provides a steady demand for the full supply.

Editor's Note.—In future issues other seasonable lines will be dealt with in this column, so that clerks and dealers can talk along intelligent lines when asked about any particular fish.

OYSTER CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

The Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association of North America have decided to spend $15,000 in a campaign of advertising favorable to the oyster. Part of the money will go to monthly and weekly publications. The balance will be used in paying for the preparation and distribution of pamphlets dealing with the oyster as a healthful article of food.

Rolled Oats Decline 25c. Per Barrel

As Predicted Last Week—Approach of New Crop a Weakening Factor—Good Yield Anticipated—Export Flour Trade is Slack—U. S. Exporters Underbid Canadian in Foreign Markets.

Rolled oats are down 25 cents per barrel or 12½ cents per sack this week. The change was announced on Tuesday and is in keeping with our predictions in former issues. True, it is that old oats are a rather scarce commodity and hold a fair tone of steadiness but are lower than when former figures were set on rolled oats.

However, the principal weakening feature that has brought about the decline is the approaching new crop of oats which at present promises well. Estimates ranging from 175 to 200 millions as the yield in Western Canada have been made, while in other parts of the Dominion conditions appear rosy. For instance, Ontario gives promise of a good crop, although numerous rains have not been beneficial by any means.

The decline in rolled oats may probably have the result of stimulating trade somewhat. Some mills report a fair trade and say they expect some booking to be done now.

There is a fair volume of domestic trade in flour for season but export business is slack. Exporters of winter wheat flour are confronted with a difficult proposition. U. S. dealers can buy their wheat cheaper and therefore underbid them in flour on foreign markets. Deliveries of winter wheat in Canada are slow and there was a report current this week that Canadian millers were bringing in U. S. wheat and milling it in bond for export.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Local market remains steady and indications are that there will be no changes in prices just at present. Export trade in spring wheat is quiet for this time of year, chief cause being the fact that a large good quality crop is expected and lower prices are looked for immediately it is marketed. Consequently the buyers across the water are inclined to wait, making their present supplies last out.

ROLLED OATS—Those dealers who followed the market closely and took our recent hints about possible decline have saved money as the market has dropped as forecasted, to the appreciable extent of 25 cents per barrel. There, of course, must have been some doubt about statements as the oat market is getting stronger. However, here is the proof. Trade passing locally is fair, though dealers are not inclined to stock up heavily pending new crop.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—There is nothing particularly new to report in Manitoba flour. Trade is running along in the usual manner for this time of year and millers and dealers in general are carefully watching the progress of the Western Canadian wheat crop.

The coming together of values on winter wheat and bids on winter wheat flour which is necessary to cause any business to be done is as far off as ever. Deliveries are on a small scale as farmers are busy and wheat prices are maintained while bids from foreign countries will not go above the par of prices offered by other countries. American competition is strong and prices must come down here if business is to be done.

CEREALS—The decline in rolled oats predicted in our last issue was announced on Tuesday of this week, when prices were reduced 25 cents per barrel or 12½ cents per sack. While there has been a fairly steady tone to old oats, approach of a good sized new crop has brought a weakening in the market and a consequent concession in the finished product.

Pastures Excellent, But Butter High

Reasons Suggested for This State of Affairs—Not Enough Cattle—Season Was Late is Getting Started—Extraordinary Demand for Eggs—Market is Firm—Cheese is Quiet.

It is rather puzzling to some dealers why butter in face of excellent pastures which are now general throughout the country refuses to be dislodged from its present high level.

There is no denying that there is lots of grass. This has been made certain by the abundance of rain we have been having. What then keeps butter at its present fairly steady position?

"There is certainly plenty of grass," said an Ontario wholesaler this week, "but there are not enough cattle to eat it. A year ago last spring farmers sold off their cattle at high prices and now we haven't cows enough to expect any big production. However, there is quite a bit of stuff coming along now. I don't expect to see any big killing in butter this year but it looks like a nice profit for those who have supplies in storage."

Another dealer also referred to the excellency of the grass just now and and also to the fact that the number of cattle was not increasing at same rate as population. "Besides," he said, "the amount of milk being used is increasing enormously and we can't have the milk and butter too. This year is rather exceptional ,too, for stocks were completely cleaned up this spring and the season late in getting under way."

The feature in eggs has been the extraordinary demand bringing somewhat of a change in the situation. At some points receipts have not measured up to demand and wholesalers had to break into fall storage stocks. A week or so ago, dealers thought the U.S. would be able to lend a helping hand in such a case as this but an upward trend in values across the line has shut off the possibility of this just at present. As a result Canadian prices are firmer with slight advances at some centres.

Cheese at present time is rather quiet but holders are firm in their ideas. Country markets keep up pretty well owing to competition in securing better grade of goods, August and September cheese being considered among the best long keepers of the season.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.— Prices for all lines of smoked meats are steady but pure lard is becoming scarce and prices have advanced a quarter cent. The demand for hams and bacon was expected to be large during the past few weeks owing to cooler weather, but it was disappointing though dealers say it must liven up.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — Mention was made last week that certain dealers had higher ideas on lard. This seems to be becoming more general and quotations are firmer by about ½ cent per pound. Stocks cannot be described as large, while a good selling season is not far distant.

As far as smoked and cooked meats are concerned, there is nothing particularly new to report. Cooler weather than usual may have robbed trade of some of its activity this summer but on the whole, dealers appear quite well satisfied with the season.

Live hog market shows little change.

BUTTER.—With the goodly number of rains that we have been having for some time, the growth of grass is luxuriant. This does not appear to be weighing down the butter market much, although some dealers note a good quantity coming along and a slightly easier undertone. This has not been reflected in quotations, however, for some dealers for instance, are quoting dairy slightly firmer.

There appears to be a fair supply of butter moving marketward just now but there has not been much accumulation. It is pointed out by one wholesaler that season was late in getting under way so that production has kept behind what it otherwise would have been.

EGGS—The egg market is still rather puzzling. While production is on a fair scale and outside dealers say they are not storing, still market maintains a strong front, values in the country haven't taken on a somewhat firmer tone during past week.

Eggs across the line have taken a firmer tone. There is no change in selling prices here.

CHEESE.—Practically no old cheese left on market. Prices are nominal. New cheese shows no marked change, a fair volume of business being transacted. Stiltons in box of about 40 lbs—4 cheese to box—is quoted at 18 cents. Limberger is worth the same price.

Making Most of Provisions in Summer

How Dealer in Summer Resort District is Making Good Profit in Lines Such as Breakfast Bacon and Cooked Meats — Uses Display Refrigerator Because He Maintains These Goods Will Sell Better if They Can Be Seen.

That bright opportunities for the sale of provisions lurk where many a person would hardly consider it possible to work up anything like an appreciable trade is shown in the case of C. Coon, general merchant at Trent River, Ont.

This is a small country hamlet near Havelock, Ont., which during the greater part of the year can lay claim to but a meager population. This, however, is swelled to appreciable proportions during the summer months. It is a summer resort which lures to its neighborhood, people from many of the surrounding towns as well as many from Toronto and other cities of Ontario.

Provisions a Feature in Summer.

It is this annual influx of campers in search of the usual features that go along with an outing that makes this provision department possible. This store has not been slow to take advantage of the opportunities thus presented and specializes on this particular line during the summer months.

Mr. Coon, realizing that fresh meat was difficult to secure at this point, concluded there would naturally be a call for smoked varieties. This demand he prepared to care for. True, it is that the river close at hand offered the possibility of fresh fish to the camper, but all people do not go there to fish and some who go to fish find that their catch falls far below the amount of sustenance their appetite demands.

Bacon and Cooked Ham.

One of the lines which has been given particular attention is breakfast bacon. Anyone who has spent some time in camp knows what an appetizing thing, breakfast bacon is for the morning meal. The result is that a good deal is sold.

Another line that has been swung to the fore in this department is cooked ham. The reason for this is apparent. Such uncongenial work as the cooking of meat on a warm summer's day does not connect up well with holidays. When they betake themselves to summer haunts, people evade cooking as much as possible. They want something ready-prepared, and this is the reason that cooked ham is an especially popular article at the summer resort.

Went Strong After Sales.

Carmen Coon, son of the proprietor, realized that it was good business to specialize on these lines during the summer. He also recognized that meats had to be kept in proper condition if more business was to follow. It was also evident to him that if best results were to be attained these lines must be placed where people may see them. It is the display that begets purchases. He set to work to devise a means of display.

An ordinary flat glass counter show case six feet is length was secured. In the centre of this a galvanized iron tray which would hold a fair-sized piece of ice was placed. Leading from the tray was piping to carry off the water from the ice. On either side different varieties of provisions were placed. Thus meats were kept at the proper temperature and always prominently before people who visited the store.

Mr. Coon states that his display refrigerator has helped the sale of these lines considerably.

PUT ON A 25 CENT SALE.

Toronto, Aug. 29.—Miller's Grocery, 632 Yonge St., took advantage of the coming of the National Exhibition to do a little extra advertising. A circular headed ,"Exhibition Specials," was sent out to customers. It contained a list of goods which might be purchased for 25c which was headed "25c Bargains," and contained such items as 3 lb. currants, 3 lbs. raisins, 6 lbs. cooking rice, 4 lbs. cooking figs, 2 tins new seasons finnan haddie, etc., etc. At the bottom attention was called to fresh shipments of fruit received daily.

A Scientific Discovery

The mechanical process of homogenization is a recent scientific discovery by which milk can be kept indefinitely in any temperature but frost. It intricately mixes the milk and cream by the breaking of the little globules, which makes it more wholesome and nutritious than ordinary milk. When drinking it one has the sensation of drinking thin cream. It is always pure, sterile and sweet, and is the great boon to mankind by which every dealer can profit.

CREDIT customers make LESS trouble than anyone else, where

are used. Reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings—paying for themselves many times over.

How They Work

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

For Summer Appetites

In hot weather, when the appetites are just a little off, and there is a peculiar craving for something cool and satisfying, nothing touches the spot like

JELL-O

It is so deliciously cool, so light, so wholesome, so nutritious, so tempting and good every way, that it satisfies the summer appetite as nothing else can.

There is no other dessert worth serving that can be made without cooking and fuss, and in hot weather no housewife wants to cook and fuss more than is necessary.

Consequently, Jell-O is one of the few articles that sell as well in hot weather as at any other time.

Don't Miss the Exhibit of Redpath Sugar

At the Toronto Exbibition

REDPATH Sugar is to the front again with a most interesting exhibit in the Manufacturers' Building Annex, under the Grand Stand at the big Fair.

Here are shown samples of sugar in the different stages of refining, from the raw sugar to the pure white crystals of REDPATH Extra Granulated, and the sparkling Paris Lumps. The Exhibit shows very clearly the great difference between REDPATH and second grade sugars.

REDPATH was the first sugar refined in Canada—the first shown at the Toronto Exhibition—the first Canadian Sugar marketed in 2 and 5 Pound Sealed Cartons—and for over half a century it has stood first in the estimation of both the Trade and the public.

Don't be hobbled—

Cut Loose From Poor Flour

WHEN a flour stops pulling, Brother Grocer, it drags. How can you forge ahead with poor quality neutralizing your efforts?

Are you working for your competitor or for yourself? Stop wasting your energy, your planning, your enthusiasm.

Cut loose from poor flour once for all.

For the very best salesmen you have can't make bad flour good, nor can it ever make good itself.

Cut loose from dissatisfaction, impatience, apologetic explanation, from dreams that never come true.

Consider now FIVE ROSES flour, Brother Grocer.

Ever since 1888 it has helped realize the hopes of the best retailers, brought back the customer and done missionary work outside.

Many a grocer has changed the drag into a pull by merely changing his brand to FIVE ROSES.

What else could you expect from a flour that has jumped its sales from 800 barrels to 10,500 barrels?

Customers with the same flour needs as you write us that FIVE ROSES sales are going up, always going up.

Are you going to be held back any longer?

Ask your jobber or write our nearest office.

WASTING YOUR ENERGIES?

If it pays to push an article, it pays to push it to some purpose and to push more with an object of gaining permanent trade than of temporary profit. If the demand for any article stops when you stop pushing it, 95 per cent. of your energy has been wasted.

You waste no energy whatever in advocating the sale of products we represent, because they have stood the test. People who buy them once will buy them again and again. Briefly the intrinsic merit of these articles backs up the highest praise you can give them.

Your Own Experience.

Mr Grocer, is usually your safest guide in the selection of your stock in trade.

Upon YOUR OWN EXPERIENCE, Clark's are prepared to rely, confident in the assurance that you have always found CLARK'S PORK & BEANS to be a valuable adjunct to your business.

CLARK'S IDEAS are that PURITY and HIGH QUALITY are the most necessary attributes of prepared foodstuffs and that a well organized system of ADVERTISING is appreciated by the dealer as a material help to his trade.

CLARK'S EXPERIENCE is that careful attention to these essentials has resulted in a rapidly and ever increasing demand for CLARK'S PORK & BEANS.

Does your own experience coincide with Clark's?

We leave it to you to decide.

Look for the elephant on every package—the guarantee of quality and excellence.

Beware of Imitations has no rival. It is in a class by itself. There is always one by which the rest are measured. In the tea market that one has always been, and is to-day, TETLEY'S. Ask the particular buyer of good tea, and the answer is invariably TETLEY'S.

Put up to sell at $1.00, 75c, 60c, 50c, 40c.

How Would You Solve This Problem?

There are, say, half a dozen makes of electric coffee mills. They are of all types and sizes and of all prices. Your problem may be to select the one to suit your taste, and not what someone thinks your taste ought to be. How would you go about it?

Would you take somebody's recommendation and let it go at that, satisfied with your efforts?

Or would you find out for yourself which machine suited your taste, and then be satisfied to know th you were getting the best.

Wouldn't it be a good idea then to look into the COLES? It ranks with the best and meets your price.

A SUGGESTION

A good many Red Rose Tea coupons obtained at the Toronto Exhibition will probably be handed in to you by your customers.

We served the 40c quality at the Exhibition—why not suggest to your customers when they present the coupons that they try a package of the 40c this time, mentioning that that was the tea they drank when they obtained the coupon.

It seems to us a good chance to change some of your tea trade from the 30 to 40c. We hope the suggestion may prove of some worth to you.

Every Household Has Use for Arrowroot!

Day by day hundreds of people are learning the wonderful food properties of St. Vincent Arrowroot. Large manufacturers of biscuits and chocolates find that their products which contain this popular food are the choice of consumers.

ST. VINCENT ARROWROOT can be made up into so many and so delightful dishes that its popularity is easily explained. Medical science is loud in its praises of St. Vincent Arrowroot as a dish for infants and invalids, because it is so strengthening and easily digested.

You have but to acquaint your trade, Mr. Grocer, with the fact that you have St. Vincent Arrowroot and you can be sure of a steady sale. There's good money in it, too.

Write the Secretary for information and samples.

THE "WANT AD."

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life, into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

How Many of Your Customers Know the Flavor of Real Vanilla?

Literally thousands of people do not know the flavor of real vanilla extract—

Shirriff's True Vanilla

They have simply been buying vanilla in name only. They have not known that a bottle with a vanilla label might contain a chemical imitation of the real thing. Lately, many progressive grocers have been pointing this fact out to their customers, and telling them the advantages of using the real vanilla extract of Mexican Vanilla beans. Housewives always feel under an obligation to grocers who show them how to improve their cooking. And Shirriff's True Vanilla certainly does improve the flavor of puddings, cakes and sauces, much to the housewives' delight.

There is good profit for grocers in getting their customers to use true vanilla extract. A list of selling points that have proved successful in increasing the retail sales of Shirriff's True Vanilla will be sent to you on request.

Doesn't This Strike You as a Good Soap Proposition

You don't have to think twice to realize that Morton's Soap is going to make quick sales and reap good profits. We have a soap proposition that is worth your investigation.

N.P. Bar Soap

is simply an honest piece of soap with no fake or fad connected with it. It gives the consumer by far the best value for the money, both as regards quality and quantity, of any soap on the market to-day. Show it to your customers, test it on the scales, ask them to try a bar; if they are not perfectly satisfied with it, you have our authority to refund their money.

It is sure to please—the profits are good.

No Dirt Can Lodge in the "All-Metal"

It Stands to Reason that an all-metal washboard made in one piece will outwear the old-fashioned wooden kind many times. Then, if this is a fact, the all-metal washboard is the most economical. This feature alone is one that prompts the housewife to buy the MEAKINS' SANITARY WASHBOARD when she sees it in the store. There can be no doubt about the superiority of an all-metal board over the old-fashioned wooden kind. Its practicability and sanitary construction, and dirt-resisting qualities commend it at once to the buyer and to the dealer as the line to handle.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

"If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

"He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

"Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

"Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

Interior view of a bright New Ontario store. A. J. Carson, the proprietor, aims to eliminate waste motions.

The Policy of Reducing Waste Motions

A New Ontario Dealer Who Works for Arrangement of Stock That Will Assist in Quick Service—No Curves to Turn—Makes Counters and Shelving Sell Goods —A Believer in Value of an Attractive Store and Modern Equipment.

Much has been heard of New Ontario in recent times. The commercial interests of the country have discovered something of its vast possibilities, and instances of political and trade invasions have been by no means few.

But New Ontario is also going ahead rapidly so far at the character of her stores are concerned. A good example is shown herewith. It comes from Haileybury and illustrates the grocery store of A. J. Carson. For a bright-looking, attractively arranged store, it must be considered a good deal in advance of many to be found in long settled portions of Old Ontario centres of similar size.

Prompt Service a Chief Object.

One of the chief aims of Mr. Carson is to arrange his stock so as to permit customers to be served with as much promptness as possible. The needless running about to get this and that is reduced greatly by systematic placing of the stock. As the proprietor, himself, stated recently, "the store is so equipped as to eliminate the 'curves' or needless running to serve customers."

Gives Attention to Shelving

This is a subject recently given publicity in The Grocer. It is an important one for the retailer to consider, because at busy hours and on Saturdays he should conserve movements and serve his customers promptly and properly. With the goods easy of access there is little waste motion. This allows more patrons to be served in a given time and creates a good impression in favor of the store.

The neatly arranged shelves of the Carson store indicate special care in interior display. On the right are seen seven pyramids of canned goods placed so that the label shows prominently. Owing to the fact that the picture did not include the entire shelving, six pyramids nearer the front cannot be seen.

Mr. Carson is aware of the splendid selling value of a counter display. Receptacles for spices, biscuits, nuts, etc., are in prominence. These, together with goods shown on the opposite side on tables and shelves help to create demand, and therefore increase sales and profits. In this store a great many lines are shown on the counters which are ordinarily out of sight in other stores. Articles that can be depended upon and that permit a fair profit are featured in this way.

Employs Several Selling Helps.

In addition to the bin fixtures in Mr. Carson's store he has additional fixtures and equipment which aid in attracting trade, handling goods with greater facility and selling more goods. In the above illustration may be seen a metal ceiling, cash register, cheese display-stand, computing scale, and refrigerator. On the left toward the front is an attractive array of fruit where all entering must see it. In fact the entire interior is such as to induce customers to purchase goods not thought of before entering as well as to attract custom the store did not have before.

If New Ontario, as it develops, emulates the policy of Mr. Carson in conducting a sanitary and attractive store, one can easily predict that mail order houses will not make the same inroads into the business of retail merchants there as they have done in other places.

Business to Go After During September

Opportunities That Lie Before the Dealer at Present Time—Preserving and Pickling Season in Full Swing—Fish and Oysters Need Attention—More Fly Destroyers Will be Required in Many Homes—Window Displays are Splendid Aid.

"Don't sit down in the meadow and wait for the cow to back up and be milked—go after the cow." This advice of Elbert Hubbard is well worth some study by the grocer. If he gives it some consideration he should be able to translate it into a message which if followed will, without doubt, mean more business.

September, the month upon which we have now entered is rich in opportunities. The grocer who sits down and waits for those opportunities to transfer themselves into extra business will, however, be greatly disappointed. Efforts on his part are essential if extra business is to be created. In other words he must "go after the cow."

The Time to Act.

As aforesaid there is a good deal of business to be secured during September and considerable business which like the farmer's crops will not wait to be harvested. It must be harvested now or all hopes of securing gain from it given up. In this particular might be mentioned the trade in pickling and preserving necessities which is now present but which will in a short time be gone. Now is the time to go after this business.

Waning of Preserving Season.

Late fruits, such as peaches, plums and pears are now coming forward and in such quantities and at such prices as to make them available for preserving purposes. It is for the grocer to carefully follow these lines and pick out the time when it is best to push them strongly for preserving. Handling of fruit has several advantageous features, one of which is that the housewife who purchases her fruit at a certain store is also likely to want sugar, jars, rings and other associated lines.

When fruit is sold, the dealer should not let the opportunity pass of mentioning these other lines. If possible it would be well to have them all combined in a window display. The dealer should be able to work out some attractive and appealing trims with these combined lines. Something that will catch the eye is desirable.

A Display Suggestion.

A shelf of good fruit is the housewife's pride. This is quite true and was the subject of a preserving window by one dealer last year. At the rear of the window a shelf was constructed and filled with fruit in jars. Below this in the centre was a tempting display of peaches in baskets. On one side were fruit jars and on the other a pyramid of sugar. In the centre and towards the front were the words, "A good combination," worked out with sealer rings. Show cards proclaimed the reliability of each line shown in the display. The window brought business.

Pickling is another work which the busy housewife now has on her hands. This will not be with us for a great time and it behooves the dealer to get after this business at once. Besides it must be remembered that the earlier business is generally the cream and is most desirable. Spices and vinegar should now be swung into prominence and pushed in every manner possible.

The Drug Store Competition.

Here, it is perhaps most desirable that some advertising be done. Drug stores generally give considerable printer's ink to spices during the pickling season and if the grocer is to maintain his share of this business, he too must do some advertising. As pointed out before, quality in this line as well as in vinegar should be made a strong point in advertising as well as in personal talks.

Another avenue of endeavor which with the opening of September begins to loom up large in the eye of the grocer is the fish department. During the past few months weather has not been conducive to this trade, nor were large supplies or extensive varieties available. This will begin to change now and the opportunity of working up an appreciable trade in fish now becomes possible. This month ushers in another oyster season and here some efforts put forth should bring good results. People are always on the lookout for "the first of the season" in any line and this can be made good use of in promoting the sale of oysters. An added feature to getting started early is that if one gets the people coming to the store for these goods, they will probably continue to do so during the whole season. This feature is worth consideration by the enterprising dealer.

Some clerks and dealers are too ready to grab the bag off the scale as soon as a substantial "bang" is heard. They do not stop to think the overweight the "bang" means. The scale should balance.

Cereals in Prominence Again.

Trade in heavy varieties of cereals has been lagging during the past few months for during the warm weather people are not so much inclined to eat heavy breakfast foods. With the temperature now beginning to ease off, appetites for these lines will gradually be coaxed back and the grocer should do his part in this regard by suggestion in advertisement, window and personal talks. Now is the time when it would be well to give over a window to cereals. This line is such as to allow of some good windows being arranged and the dealer should use a display to start off the fall business.

Feature Fly Destroyers.

When the warm weather came a few months ago it brought with it a deluge of flies and a corresponding call for fly destroyers. The change to cooler weather which will soon be noticed is not going to cause that demand to fade away. In fact, it is going to prove of assistance, for the cooler weather drives the flies indoors and the housewife will need renew her campaign of fly destruction. Unlike human beings, flies have a great staying power and will not be driven from the house by harsh words. The housewife will need a supply of fly destroyers, and the grocer should still keep them in prominence.

The country is showing marked prosperity, money is quite free, as shown above September is not lacking in live opportunities and the grocer who puts forth the necessary efforts should be able to keep the cash register ringing merrily during all of the coming month. However, he must remember that it lies with himself and he must "go after the cow."

Canadian Window Trimmers Convention

Meeting at Toronto is Well Attended—An Address by Jerome A. Koerber, of Philadelphia—Window Decorating Lauded as an Art—It Has Been Suggested That Grocery Dealers Organize.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 3.—The annual convention of the Canadian Window Trimmers' Association was held here on Wednesday. Thursday and Friday of last week. There was a good attendance. Some few grocers were on hand but the number was small compared to those present from other trades, particularly the dry goods men. An effort will be made in future to get grocery window trimmers interested in the association. It is recognized that there is a great field for grocery window trimming.

One of the features of the convention was an address on Thursday night by Jerome A. Koerber, of Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia, one of the best known window trimmers in America.

Mr. Koerber regards store and window trimming as one of the greatest professions. Art and skill are essential to it, as well as great possibilities of compensation for men who apply themselves. Many such have advanced to merchandise men, general managers and proprietors.

"A natural leaning or aptness with a strong determination for the business are among the first principles," said Mr. Koerber, "but once satisfied that he would be happy in no other line, a young man ought to go about the decorating business as one would go about studying any other profession where tact, ability, taste, etc., are needed and developed. If a young man is going to study law he gets law books and works alongside men who know. He is alert, developing in himself a power to reason, to come to conclusions to make decisions and all the things that go with the business.

One of the first things is—gather a general knowledge of merchandise. To know the various lines of goods, the qualities and uses of same. This means, when he handles goods of any description, the trimmer knows what they are and their uses. A man is at sea if he does not learn the general quality and uses of goods.

A Word for Beginners.

"The beginner has always had a warm place in my heart and I suppose it is because I have had the privilege of starting out so many in the business and because I started at the bottom of the ladder myself, and with a desire to learn well from A to Z. It was not like Topsy in Uncle Tom. She had no origin, but just sprung up without any fierce battles or hard work. Some are that way. They do not need the A.B.C. of the business.

"I decided to learn the business, and this, coupled with a person's natural inclination, will produce success. There are many good men in the business, and many openings. The business has risen to a place next the sister craft of advertising, only with many advantages.

"So I would advise young learners to get beside a man who is sure of what he is doing, who has a good scope of experience and will be able to guide you aright.

"To the man coming up. If thus far you have had the privilege of working alongside experienced practical men, you have learned well the first principle. Now make for better information, using all the various channels of to-day so that you will continue well. Be always aert, ready to learn more, rise higher.

"And now a word of the men who have the responsibility to-day of managing a decorating department. May we not enlist your best efforts to raise our calling to the higher plane of efficiency, that we may commend ourselves more highly to merchants whether large or small.

"Let it be manifest that all selfishness is buried and that as we march on winning laurels reaching higher attainments, we are also ready to help the man coming up."

The convention proceedings were livened up by a number of demonstrations of decorating and window trimming. A number of practical addresses were heard. Altogether, those who attended had an excellent opportunity to pick up a great deal of valuable information and helpful suggestions.

A Grocery Association.

It has been suggested that the grocery window trimmers either form an association or join the C.W.T.A. There are many hundred grocery dealers in Canada who are deeply interested in the subject, and it is felt that an organization would result in the dissemination of much information and ultimately place grocery trimming on a higher plane.

Bernard Pink of E. & T. Pink, & Sons, Ltd., confectioners and jam manufacturers, London, England, leaves for Canada on September 6th, and will be visiting the principal towns in the Maritime provinces, and Quebec, Montreal, and Toronto. Mr. Pink will be in Canada until Christmas.

OYSTER SEASON NOW ON.

The months with the letter 'r' are both fur and oyster months. The coats of the fur-bearing animals begin to hang onto the hair when September is ushered in and gradually take a firmer hold as cooler weather approaches.

Until September arrives the flavor of the oyster is not relished by many. But that month is now opened up and the oyster will soon find its way into the homes of many lovers of this delicacy.

Dealers who are first on the scene with oysters will, therefore, attract considerable new business. And now is the time to open out at least in part the oyster department.

With present system of handling them no losses whatever need occur if a little care and attention is given. A few years ago oysters were retailed more cheaply than today, but both the dealer and the consumer paid for a good deal of water. When they are purchased now, oysters and not water are paid for. This means more satisfied customers even if they have to pay more, providing of course they are made acquainted with the reason.

To sum up: the dealer should make preparations for stocking oysters; he should let the people know he has them and he should explain by some system of advertising that he is selling solid oysters and not water.

POTATO PROSPECTS LOOK GOOD.

Reports have come in to the effect that potatoes will be a heavy yield this year. In Ontario, farmers are claiming that it will be a record breaker, but many have not reckoned on the damage that will result in low lands where the excessive moisture will cause considerable rotting.

From New Brunswick comes news of a good crop despite the cool weather that prevailed for a considerable part of the growing time. In Nova Scotia some anxiety is shown, however.

But, taking everything into consideration, the potato crop of the country will be a good one. This means that this winter and next spring, potatoes will be cheaper than a year ago, all of which will be welcome news to the dealer whose profits have been cut down by high potato prices.

It is amusing to see how those daily papers which have been accusing the dealer of getting undue profits on such products, are now forecasting cheaper potatoes. When an article is plentiful they know the price is lowered. They appreciate then that supply and demand regulate price, but just as soon as prices advance, they take it for granted, with but a superficial study of the problem, that they are being unduly enhanced and the middleman is getting an extortionate profit. The masses must be catered to regardless of facts.

PARCELS POST PASSES.

After a long-drawn-out fight a Parcels Post measure has been passed by the United States Senate. The Bourne-Bristow bill, as it is called, was put through without debate.

The bill provides for eight zones in which the rates will be as follows:

The country will be divided into eight zones, length of zones and rates as follows: First zone, length 50 miles, rate, 5 cents for the first pound, 3 cents for each additional pound; second zone, length 150 miles, rates 6 and 4 cents; third zone, length 300 miles, rates, 7 and 5 cents; fourth zone, length 600 miles, rates, 8 and 6 cents; fifth zone, length 1,000 miles, rates 9 and 7 cents; sixth zone, length 1,400 miles, rates 10 and 9 cents; seventh zone, length 1,800 miles, rate, 12 cents per pound straight. The eighth zone is for distances beyond 1,800 miles, with a rate of 12 cents per pound. Maximum packages, 11 pounds.

It is believed that the measure will be found unwieldly, and that in actual operation it will be so complete a failure that the idea will ultimately be abandoned as worthless. As a result, the retail business men are not worrying over the outcome. They are sitting back and waiting patiently and confidently for the time when the laboring and ill-equipped craft of Parcels Post will drift on the rocks of adversity.

RAIN DAMAGE TO ONTARIO CROPS.

Throughout Ontario the heavy rains during the past three or four weeks have done considerable damage to the crops. Instances of fields of hay that are still lying out are many. In such cases, as might naturally be expected, it has turned almost black and will practically be unfit for horse feed.

There is yet considerable wheat, barley and oats not under cover. The continued wet weather has caused much of these grains to sprout in the shock. A traveler on a railway train anywhere in Ontario might have observed during the past two or three weeks, farmers turning out grain in the stook to give it an opportunity to dry. Showers fell in such rapid succession that many have done the same act several times with the same field of grain.

It should, however, be understood that the harvests on high and rolling land were practically all in the barn prior to the wet spell, so that only low lands and a portion of rolling lands have suffered much. Yet the losses are bound to have a certain depreciating effect on business, even if slight. In some places it may mean a little slowness in collection of accounts, but with so much mixed farming in Ontario, the farmers will usually be found prosperous and their 1912 harvests together with side lines will net them a fairly good surplus.

SPICES AS MEDICINE.

Just at present time, spices are an important line in the grocery store. It is interesting to know that apart from their use as condiments and preservatives, they are valuable from a medicinal standpoint.

The value of spices lies in the richness of aromatic substances and essential oils. They have been the subject of classic research and have been shown to arouse appetite and to promote the secretion of the gastric juice, and the role they play therefore in dietetics is an important one. The medicinal action of some of them is further of value. Allspice, for example, is used as an aromatic, and has been successfully administered for flatulency, the oil gives relief in rheumatism and neuralgia.

The medicinal uses of cinnamon are well known. Cardamoms are used in the form of a tincture as aromatic and stomachic, and are also employed as a flavoring agent in curry powder, cakes and liqueurs. The application of capsicum and the peppers generally are well known. Cloves are aromatic, carminative and stimulant, and have been used in dyspepsia, gastric irritation and in cases of vomiting.

Oil of cloves is also a popular remedy for toothache. It has also its uses in microscopy as a preservative. The uses of nutmeg are wide, vanilla has an enormous application as a flavoring agent, while turmeric enjoys a similar patronage on account of its bright yellow color and pleasant, musky flavor.

MISDIRECTED ENERGY.

A story is told of a man employed by a farmer to dig a well, exemplifying a case of misdirected energy. The man dug the well so crooked that on the third day he fell out of it.

Misdirected energy is a great handicap to many a dealer. Instances are numerous where merchants have worked early and late to get a little ahead, only to find their hopes blasted by lack of energy along the right lines.

One of the principal causes of the difficulty is the absence of a plumb line to determine the standing of the business from time to time. There are too many groping about in the dark so far as their bookkeeping operations are concerned. They fail to keep proper account of the amounts owed and owing; they do not get after their accounts while their wholesale never forgets to forward the everlasting invoice. The inevitable result of such a course is a rapid depreciation of the bank account and eventually, failure.

The dealer must remember—as the best dealers do—that hard work is not the only avenue to success. There must be something behind work—there must be system in all departments of the store. Only then can energy be properly directed and the well dug straight.

FLOOR SPACE ALLOWANCE.

No grocer can consider himself aggressive, progressive, or among the elite in grocery circles if he persists in littering the floor of the store where customers are expected to walk, with boxes and barrels. In every store there ought to be at least room enough for two customers to pass one another.

Recently the writer visited a store which certainly could not qualify in the elite class. On entering the corner door one was forced to travel in two different directions along an aisle between goods on the floor to get up to the counter. Not only were goods on display on the floor, but outgoing orders were also piled up where empty floor space should have been found.

No one who is at all particular about her purchases could associate such a store with anything but disorder, incompetence, and uncleanliness. It is all very well to believe in the power of interior display as a sales producer, but such displays should not act against the convenience of customers. Plenty of space to move about in is desirable; then if the dealer wishes, he has a perfect right to use the surplus floor space for some attractive display of profitable quality goods.

Lessening Losses and Shortening Hours

Eternal Vigilance Necessary to Cut Down the Little Leaks—Examples of Lessons to be Taught Employes—Necessity of Getting in Damage Claims Before Time of Expiration—Moving Off Slow Stock—How Early Closing Was Effected.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

To lessen the losses in our business there is one recipe: the old time-tried one of "eternal vigilance," and, so far as I know, there is none other. But just like teaching salesmanship, orderliness or any other virtue, we must first teach ourselves—begin, like charity, at home. This problem calls for the exercise on the negative side of the question, of the same qualities that make for betterment in raising the grade of our sales and thus advancing our general business. It reverts to something I have handled recently at considerable length—the careful, conscientious training of those under our care. And this kind of thing takes us down to the fundamentals, the rudiments, the primaries of instruction to begin with, for there is where we get the foundation of what has wrecked so many of us—waste.

Sweeping Groceries, Not Dirt.

Often have I stopped a boy who was gathering a lot of sweepings together and asked him what he was doing. My tone has been kindly and I have made it an invariable rule to speak pleasantly, as not to do this would defeat my object. His reply would be—with usually a surprised look: "Sweeping up some dirt." Again I smile and say: "Is that so, John? Sure enough it is; but do you know, I was thinking of it another way—what do you think I mean?" He expresses himself as unable to imagine what I am trying to get at, and then I tell him. "Why, John, all that stuff you are sweeping out—every bit of it—is groceries; just groceries—is it not?"

And then I go on to show him a leaf of lettuce, a crushed banana, two or three prunes, a little cheese, and mixed up in it all some sugar; and I try to point out to him what that pile of "dirt" represents. The banana, 1 2-3c; the prunes, ½c; the cheese, 2c; the sugar, maybe 1c. Altogether, 5 1-6c gone into the dump, every particle whereof might have been sold. Then I try to show him what two or three daily sweepings of that kind may mean; the price of one or two daily hours of his own time; and I show him that there is the clew to our profit or loss account.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Should be Prevented.

Then I tell him to pick up the prunes and wash them, so they may go back for sale, that being the only portion of the wreck that may now be rescued. But I further point out to him that none of us can afford time to remedy these conditions after the dirt has been created; that our task is to PREVENT such accumulations—to stop spilling prunes and sugar, handle bananas so they will be sold and not crushed, cut cheese so there will be no little waste ends. I take him to the cheese counter and endeavor right then to show him for himself, how to cut cheese. Then I indicate to him how to handle a brick of cheese so that we shall not have the big end of rind to throw away, but rather that such rind may be apportioned out among our customers, for value received, yet in such a way as not to make anyone of them feel that she is getting too much of the waste.

This matter of cutting brick cheese, by the way, is a fine art which I fear many of us do not understand ourselves sufficiently, yet it is our cheese, our business, our loss; so we cannot be too impatient—in fact, cannot afford to be impatient at all—with those younger than ourselves who do not understand it. But, by the time I have gone this far with John, I think it well to let him go for this time, though I watch him constantly, and all the others, too, to see that they have a chance to learn these points of preventing waste.

Making Early Damage Claims.

Further thought along the same line will keep us cleaning up our stock all the time. Fruits of some kinds are liable to swell readily, notably some which are packed "fully ripe" on the Pacific Coast. Thus it is up to us to watch that stock and sell it out promptly; also to mark up our date-ahead memos so that we shall make our claims for swellage within the time-limit allowed us on such things.

It is embarrassing to find a lot of those things gone wrong when it is too late to claim damages; and in such cases, the blame is ours, which should make us more tolerant of the "boys" who cannot surely know these things as well as we do and cannot know them at all unless we teach them.

Turning Stock Into Money.

Another point is the getting rid of goods which do not sell readily. I had some grated pineapple, in syrup, packed in glass, marked to sell at 50c. That was a fair price for it. I had one good customer who wanted me to keep it for her and I did so. After a time she died—and I still kept it. It was there three or four years—no fault but my own, though I will say that it was still perfectly good and I thought I might as well have it as have something else to display. But finally, one Saturday night I sold the remaining 5 bottles for 30c each; and then I reflected how much better to have sold it for that price two, or even three, years sooner. When an item does not sell, it is up to us to sell it; get out of it what we can, and put the money into active work again.

Every move of this character betters our business. Each time we clean up a dirty spot, or move stickers, or teach our boys a point or two about how to handle groceries, we are lessening losses. Moreover, such a habit formed by ourselves, soon reflects itself in the actions of those around us. If we are constantly looking for weak spots to strengthen and are thus always fussing around the store, our boys and girls get that habit and will be found fixing, cleaning, arranging, filling shelves, wiping showcases, etc., all the time. Remember how the admiral made his crews avoid scurvy and keep healthy? He set them to work. His watchword was: "A ship is never clean!" and that is the keynote of modern naval discipline. It is well for us to adopt that idea ourselves and hold that there is never a minute of the day when anybody about a store need be idle; there is ALWAYS plenty to do, a fact that is admitted in theory, but hardly carried into sufficient practice, and there is plenty of room for us to improve ourselves in this regard.

Must Have Leisure To Plan.

And that gets me down to my last, but what I consider very important point; That we must give ourselves leisure for all this. Neither you nor I can devise sales-plans, or displays, or schemes for betterment, or clean out stickers, or teach our help unless we are measurably free, during at least three or four hours every day, from the constant tasks which are apt to make the grocer's life a drudgery. The man who runs the successful store is the man who makes leisure for himself—not he who is always "too busy" to listen or to plan. The brains of any business are always to be found under one hat—mostly, and that must necessarily be, the hat of the man who is supposed to run the business. We must learn—another thing to LEARN!— to delegate all the routine work, the regular tasks about our store. This is not merely desirable, we MUST do it, or we cannot be as successful as we should be. The successful man is a GENERAL of his forces—he cannot be a private in the ranks. Thus only can we lessen waste.

Must Agitate For Public Sentiment.

As for shortening the hours, I can only say that this is a subject for constant agitation to the end that public sentiment will help us out sooner or later. Much, however, can be done by the individual if he is made right, understands his business, and goes slow and gradually.

A Gradual Change.

In 1886 nobody thought of grocery stores closing before 9 o'clock, and many of them did not close then—"just couldn't, you know." Johnson's was a very busy store, about the busiest in town. We opened at 7 and closed at 9, Saturdays included, for in those days we had no perishable goods to sell out at any sacrifice of the Saturday evening.

It seemed to the elder Johnson that these hours could be made shorter, yet he never asked any others to join him. He simply stated in a series of his ads that he believed, and felt that the customers would agree with him, that grocers' hours were too long; and that for his part, his sentiments resembled those of Horace Greeley on the subject of resumption of specie payments; that the only way he could think of to attain early closing was to CLOSE. Therefore, beginning January 1st, 1886, Johnson's would close at 8.30—"not a quarter past eight, nor twenty minutes to nine; but EIGHT THIRTY." And thus it was done for two years. Then we stepped down to eight, and thus continued until the end of the OLD REGIME, when the elder passed away and the younger tried to emulate him! The elder knew his business.

A Complaint About Marking of a Scale

Western Ontario Dealer States That a Scale Was Marked Improperly—If So, How Did It Pass Inspection?—Matter Taken Up With Weights and Measures Officer But No Reply Has Been Received.

A reader of The Grocer in Western Ontario sent in a communication some time ago re a scale he purchased which he claims was defective in that it could not readily be read. Here is the communication; it explains itself:—

The Marking of the Beam.

"Some time ago I saw an article re scale inspection in The Grocer. It is to refer to this that I would like to have the privilege of a small space in your paper. The instance I wish to relate is a transaction that occurred in my own store.

"Through our local hardware merchant I purchased a scale —a 240-lb. counter scale. The scale was inspected by the proper authority and shipped direct from the manufacturers. After it arrived and had been in service for some short time, I noticed that the beam was improperly marked. In place of the pound marks being opposite the notch they ran directly to the point, leaving them very difficult for any person to balance correctly. I notified the merchant and he likewise notified the manufacturer. The answer was in brief—"If your customer will express the scales to us prepaid we will alter them free of charge." That means express or freight two ways at my expense after having practically paid the amount for the first inspection, to my mind seems unjust. In the first place why should the scales be manufactured in that manner and secondly, why should the inspector pass them? The distance from here to Aylmer is great and the expense of shipping likewise, omitting the inconveniences of being without a scale for that length of time.

"Can you tell me if they still continue to inspect scales at the merchant's expense I am quite aware of the fact that even cattle scales when on a farm are never approached in this vicinity."

Editorial Note.—If the scale is defective in the way stated in the communication, how did it pass government inspection? All scales and balances, large or small, have to pass the test of the Inland Revenue Department before going out to merchant, farmer, or private householder.

No Reply Received.

To determine some information on the subject The Grocer wrote the Weights and Measures inspector in charge of the London, Ont. office, Inland Revenue Department, but up to present no reply has been received. It would be interesting to know if any other readers have come across a similar experience.

With regard to the manufacturer demanding that the freight, etc., be paid to have the scale fixed, this is probably a mater of policy even if it is contrary to what some might do.

Scales are still inspected at the merchant's expense.

"There is no relaxation to the stiffness in prices for choice butter which is exchanging hands for as much as 18 cents, in the form of dairy tub, if it is of choice quality. Equally good butter in large rolls will not bring so much, as it is shipping stock that is wanted."

Editorial Note:—This was a news item from our Montreal market on date above mentioned and shows quite a difference from to-day when best butter brings around 28 cents.

Current News of the Week

Ontario

Peter Maitland, grocer, Toronto, has sold to F. C. Seale.

J. A. Rickaby, 1077 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, has sold out to J. Richardson.

C. N. Gurley, Burk's Falls, Ont., has purchased "The Coulter Store" business from A. A. Agar.

Sangster & McCuaig, general merchants, Bainsville, Ont., have dissolved, D. D. McCuaig continuing.

G. O'Brien, grocer, Peterborough, Ont., was a visitor in Toronto during the week. He spent a day at the Exhibition accompanied by his daughter.

R. W. Wilson of Fergus, Ont., representing R. Simpson & Co., tea importers and wholesale grocers, Hamilton, Ontario, who was injured in a railway wreck near Durham last spring has sufficiently recovered from the effects of his accident to resume his regular trip and is now on the road again for the same firm. His many friends and acquaintances are glad to see him back on the road again.

Quebec And Maritime Provinces.

E. Lamarre & Cie, grocers, Montreal, have registered.

R. Hendery, of Rose & Laflamme, Ltd., was in Ontario this week on business.

A. P. Tippett, of A. P. Tippett & Co., has just returned from a short holiday down east.

Arthur S. Estabrooks, general merchant, Coldstream, N.B., is succeeded by Belyea Bros.

W. H. Halford, Canadian manager of Furuya & Nishimura, Montreal, has returned from a western trip.

Fred Mathewson, of Mathewson & Sons, Montreal, has returned from a pleasure trip through Maritime provinces.

The new plant of the Canada Brush factory at St. John, was burned last week and the loss was heavy. The factory was almost totally destroyed, or at least so much so as to be useless. They expect to rebuild in St. John on a larger scale. The new factory being erected in St. John by the Simms Co., Ltd., for the manufacture of brushes, etc., is progressing favorably and it will not be long before the company is selling stock from the new plant.

The new factory for canning goods at Chameook, N.B., is being rushed along and plans are being made to place on the market canned fishballs, baked beans, plum pudding, vegetables, fruits, sardines, lobsters, and a variety of other articles. It is expected that the company will use 1,000,000 pounds of codfish and 3,500,000 barrels of potatoes in a year in the manufacture of fishballs. It was planned to start canning sardines this week.

Western Canada.

Mrs. Lund, grocer, Delisle, Sask., has discontinued business.

Fred Crossman, general dealer, Kirkella, Man., has sold to J. A. Cloodege.

Mrs. A. M. Roff, Morse, Sask., has sold her general store to Pitcairn & Sharwan.

E. Beeman, general merchant, Aberdeen, Sask., has sold to Henry Schroeder.

Young & Thompson, grocers, Vancouver, B. C., have sold to Fraser & McLean.

Roland McIntosh, general dealer, Parkside, Sask., is succeeded by McIntosh and Agusta.

W. M. Craig & Co., general merchants, Olds, Alta., have sold their Curlew branch.

Greensides & Hanna, grocers and hardware merchants, Bounty, Sask., are succeeded by Bounty Supply Co.

Herbert E. Burbidge of London, Eng., stores commissioner of the Hudson's Bay company, who is in Western Canada with his son, R. W. Burbidge, manager of Harrods' departmental store in London, announced at Edmonton, Alta., a few days ago that a six-storey steel and concrete re-inforced structure will be erected in the near future to replace the present store building at Jasper avenue and Third street. New lines will be added to make it one of the most complete department stores in the Western provinces.

Moose Jaw, Sask., wholesalers, at a recent meeting heard the objects and purposes of the Canadian Credit Men's Association explained to them. The Saskatchewan division is governed by a board of directors composed of Regina men, with S. C. Burton as president, and there are committees from other cities working in conjunction with them. The Moose Jaw committee consists of the following:—W. B. Riley, of Codville Co., Ltd.; J. R. Banks, of Rex Fruit Co.; George McEachren, Robin Hood Mills, and G. O. Morron, of Moose Grocery Co.

RAIN SPOILED PICNIC.

Members of the Trade at London From Hamilton, Brantford and Toronto.

London, Ont., Sept. 4—(Special).—The Retail Grocers' annual picnic at Springbank was postponed to Wednesday last on account of bad weather. Although the day previous looked promising, on Wednesday morning it was pouring rain and is continued most of the day.

The committee were more disappointed than the mothers who had prepared their babies for the baby show. They had builded on showing the delegation from Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford, something in the picnic line to make them sit up and take notice; but the weather man interfered. The grocers from Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford came up and the London members of the trade did the best they could under the circumstances. They took them to luncheon, afterwards took them through some of the stores, then for an auto trip around the city and to Springbank in the mud. Most of them left for home after supper, but those who remained were taken to the theatre, and through one of London's largest wholesale houses.

Those that came from a distance for the outing were D. W. Clark and W. C. Miller, Toronto; J. A. McIntosh, Jas. Main, Mr. Cummings, E. Hazell, W. Smye, J. Knox and J. Brown from Hamilton; W. J. Mellen, Jas. Burns, J. E. Church, A. J. Hall and Fred S. Hartley, Brantford.

Even if there was rain the visitors claimed they spent a good day. Reports brought back from Springbank whispered of a ball game, rain or no rain. Anyone might have guessed as much. Here are a few impressions secured from a bird's eye view of the game:—

The ball looked big enough but how seldom it was caught.

Ed. Hazel made the longest drive of the game—into the Thames.

The great demand for some lines of groceries was not in it with the run on War Cry's on the day of the picnic.

Who was the Jonah? was an oft-repeated question. Either Thos. Shaw or Ed. Ryan, judging by the number of times their auto refused to budge.

It is said that Toronto ball club is after Ranahan and Miller to help them finish the job of securing the "rag."

Nevertheless it was a great day.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Outcome uncertain.
Rice—Continues steady.
Spices—In good demand.

Montreal, Sept. 5.—Grocery wholesalers are loking forward to a good business during September. Trade during month of August was on a good scale. Collections should be fair this year as country is generally prosperous.

SUGAR.—Even the largest wholesalers refrain from making any definite statement about future events in the sugar market, so doubtful is the situation . What with car shortage and the possibility of the U.S.A. using up the whole Cuban crop, the political situation and news of the breaking up of the Brussels Convention, it certainly is difficult to forecast, but taking these sharp as they stand, it would seem that sugar must advance later on. The raw situation at the present moment is undoubtedly stronger. When we find refiners buying Phillippine sugars, which are only good for mixing, we must give the situation some thought. Again, refiners are said to have reached a pretty low level as far as supplies are concerned, so, adding this to above points, we have a mighty interesting situation because there is an exceptionally heavy demand for sugar all over at present, and indications are that it will keep up.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Molasses is in good demand both for domestic and manufacturing purposes, but conditions are very much the same as they were during the past few weeks. It is likely that there will be an earlier opening of the season, due to the cooler weather, which seems to have set in for good. Still the fall movement is some little way off yet.

DRIED FRUITS. — There has been some activity in this market of late and it seems as if things are taking hold now. Smyrna figs are coming along in good condition, according to reports and some business is being transacted for future delivery. Cleaned currants are selling easily, but uncleaned are firmer in Greece, according to recent cables, but little weight can be placed on these reports just yet, so many are the factors working towards stiffening up the market. Seeded and seedless raisins are also firmer and deserve attention now, as stocks are none too heavy. Prune picking has been commenced in California and packers report that the quality of the fruit is excellent, the result being that there is little disposition to part with the crops as higher prices are expected later.

COFFEE.—"Coffee seems to us to have been selling too low formerly," said a local grinder quite recently, and like others he can see no break as yet. Mocha are away high like the other grades, so that it would seem that the effect of the valorization "hold-up" should be discounted somewhat. However, be this as it may, high prices will rule for some time and no definite statement on the outlook can be made until opinions agree on the new crop. Bullish cables received of course indicate that growing conditions are unfavorable, while the bears can see nothing but a bumper crop. On this factor alone hangs the true market indication. Of course, the strike in Santos has not helped any, keeping back the accumulation of stocks to a certain extent.

SPICES.—There is a marked growth in the demand for all lines and though one cannot report anything but a quiet market, yet the undertone is firm, due to same cause outlined in our last isue —namely the reduction of many stocks to a minimum. Considerable fluctuation is the chief feature in primary centres, black and white peppers proving problematic.

NUTS.—The offerings of walnuts in shell have not been so heavy of late, due perhaps to cables received from France indicating a firmer market. Almonds are in fair demand, Pecans and cocoanuts being dull to a degree. Opening prices on California, 1912 crop should be named about end of this month.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Canned Peas.—Premiums asked by some firms.

Canned Beans.—Tendency to firmness.

Sugar.—Uncertain future.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—No complaints are heard from grocery jobbers in regard to trade. Indeed, most of them expressed themselves as well pleased with volume of business. There is a good deal of business being done in sugar just now.

As the seasons come and go, so must the grocery lines of demand change. For some time now, summer goods have been occupying the stellar position on the stage of demand but must shortly give way to early fall goods. One instance of this is cereals of which heavier varieties will be demanded with the cooler weather. However, the demand for summer goods is not to an end and attention should still be given to them.

There should be a good trade in grocery lines during September. Preserving supplies will be an important item as well as pickling necessities. The most should be made of this trade while the time is ripe.

SUGAR.—Sugar situation is a difficult one to size up at present time as there are a great many different factors to consider. Last week a generally firmer turn to market was reported and it still continues, to some extent at least. It is one of those uncertain propositions, outcome of which it is difficult to predict.

With preserving season in full swing there is a brisk demand for sugar. Stocks throughout the country are not large.

DRIED FRUITS.—California raisins being unusually low and Valencia raisins being high, naturally result is that Valencias are neglected to benefit of California article. However, there seems little or no prospect for any reduction in Valencias as speculators have pretty well brought up this year's crop. Raisin market on coast is also showing signs of increasing firmness and packers are holding rather firmly at quotations.

California prunes have shown just a slightly easier tinge. Premiums seem to be a little easier on the large sizes, due somewhat to the feeling that in some sections prunes are sizing up better than expected, and also to the fact that some of those who sold a big raft of small prunes at extremely low prices earlier forgot to figure that to get these prunes they would have to take in some of the other sizes, and now feel that they are a little long in some sizes.

Evaporated apples will apparently show a good yield in Ontario this year and prices will be lower.

COFFEE.—Fluctuations in New York coffee market still continue while local market maintains an even tone. There is a fair demand for season.

The news from Brazil is not encouraging as to a fine flowering in September as fears are entertained of frosts doing damage, owing to the cold weather which is now being felt.

SPICES. — This is a season when spices are in good demand and retailers should keep them in prominence. Mixed pickling spice is a big seller just now. Cloves continue steady. A short crop in Zanzibar this year is now almost a certainty and this should act as a check on any large decline. In fact, consensus of opinion seems to favor higher prices this fall and winter. New York reports black and white pepper as fluctuating erratically but as closing at firmer prices.

SITUATION IN CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO. — A tendency that has been gaining ground in local canned goods of late is that of firmer values in peas and beans. This is perhaps more marked in case of peas and there are some firms who are asking 10 cents per dozen over opening prices on standard and early June. "We are asking $1.35 for standards and $1.40 for early June," said one jobber, "although there is no alteration in extra fine sifted." This same dealer is also asking a premium on canned beans. There seems to be a general tendency to firmness on these two lines.

As pointed out last week there has been a reduction of 50 cents per case on this year's pack of pink salmon. Most wholesalers when salmon figures were put out quoted pinks at $1.25 for future but around $1.15 is now being quoted. Reduction was possibly to some extent due to competition but it appears that pinks have as usual been a fairly good pack while demand has not been as large as expected would be the case with present high prices on better grades. Spot pinks, however, are not plentiful and around $1.35 is being asked for present delivery.

Reports from packers in regard to lobster pack seem none too bright. One local broker states that he has filled all his orders but is booking no more.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Syrup—Advances 10c.
Beans—Advance 15c.
Sugar—Firm.

Spices—Strong market generally.

Winnipeg, Sept. 4.—Winnipeg wholesalers continue to report a most satisfactory volume of trade. With the advent of warm dry weather which seems to have settled in at time of writing, prospects for fall business could hardly be better. Collections are fair for the time of year and retailers report a satisfactory proportion of cash trade. Scarcity of labor to handle the crop during harvest and threshing is the only untoward circumstance in the business situation.

Crown and Beehive syrups have made further advances and the sugar market is firmer although prices here as yet have not advanced and may not. A late circular from a London house reports pepper high, prices having advanced 3 and 4 cents there for white and black respectively; cloves and nutmegs are also dearer. Mace has advanced no less than 15 cents during the year. These advances will be felt locally before long.

SUGAR.—Sugar market is reported as firm at present, but whether there will be any advance here is problematical. It is reported that an advance has gone into effect in Saskatchewan. The demand here has been phenomenal during past three weeks and shows no signs of falling off.

The Greek currant crop is above average. There will be 132,500 tons for export, about 12,000 more than last year.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Sept. 5.—Local wholesale grocers are unanimous in opinion that season thus far has been one of best in many years and some are prepared to present figures certifying to fact that bulk of trade and returns have been much more encouraging this year than for some time. This refers chiefly to local market but it may be said that throughout New Brunswick as well conditions of trade are most pleasing, large sales being recorded. Collections during the last month or so have, however, been slightly disappointing to some dealers and there may be a few losses on this account.

Market during the past week has seen few changes of unusual interest. Flour remains unchanged and at present there seems to be no reason for expecting any alterations in quotations. Local advices to hand are to effect that Ontario wheat crop has been harvested and that it is only about 60 per cent. of last year. No change worth noting is looked for until the crop in northwest is harvested, or at least until it is determined how heavy it will be. There has been a slight advance of about 4 cents in oats caused by the wet weather interfering with harvesting.

Pork and beef remain high and there seems to be no lowering of prices in view.

Butter and eggs are on upward move, and former is particularly scarce. High prices are expected for butter before the winter is fairly well under way.

PLATE GLASS WINDOWS ON HINGES.

In Carlsbad, Germany, all the plate glass windows are on hinges enabling the store staff to get at them from the front as well as from the inside. This method of hanging them is found to be specially serviceable where the stock is large and varied and the space valuable, and therefore, narrow, as well as where business is being done with passers-by. Many of the windows are, too, of enormous size.

The Need of System in a Retail Business

A Look Into Some Grocery Stores Where Reform is Needed—Planning the Work of Clerks—Lack of Attention to Floor Space—How One Dealer Secured Number of New Customers by Means of Systematic Delivery.

By O. S. Johnston.

The sea captain who begins a voyage without a compass encounters a sea of trouble. The building contractor who starts to erect without laying his plans beforehand, is, to adopt an old saying, building castles in the air. Success in business has invariably been achieved by men whose plans have been well mapped out before the first gun was fired, by men who have equipped themselves with a compass and who made their trade building plans along sound lines.

What value then, do you place on system? Do you believe in letting a business run you, or running it yourself? With system you can run it successfully. Without it, it will run you to the wall. The latter would be an undesirable state of affairs, so let us see where well preconceived plans have helped out some, while lack of same have hindered others from advancing.

Planning the Clerk's Work.

If there is anything which is an abomination in the sight of a customer, it is a clerk doing something other than attending to her or doing nothing at all. All women are not impatient, but some clerks apparently do their best to make them so. In a grocery store not long ago a woman was seen awaiting attention at the counter while the clerk was snatching a glimpse at the sporting page of a newspaper. This kind of service gives rise to complaint, and when the store is criticised by the customers, they are justified in saying, "my, but they're slow."

There is a dealer, however, known to the writer, who realized that by apportioning certain work to each clerk he would overcome the loafing evil and here is what he has to say:—"I used to have one clerk always work on the front counter filling orders as they were taken, thinking that the large pile of goods constantly on the counter would impress the customer with the busy nature of the store, but I often noticed customers standing near him waiting to be served and becoming impatient when he paid no attention to them, but went on with the work I had given him. I began to plan a little, and decided to set aside a place for this man in the rear and instructed the clerks as they took an order to pass it on to him for filling. This plan kept them always on the hop, customers got served quickly, and there was no possibility of their standing near the order filler and getting impatient because he stuck to his post and did not serve them.

System in Delivery.

"Sure Mr. Blank runs the legs off his horse while mine is always fresh and never overworked," remarked another dealer. He at one time had trouble in delivering goods promptly until he conceived a plan. Just as soon as the driver was ready to move out in a certain direction, he would use the telephone and call up some housekeepers who never dealt with him, at least sparingly, and spoke thus, "Madam, my afternoon delivery is almost ready to go out. We will pass your door in a few minutes. Is there anything I can send you? What about —?" And right enough this man of enterprise got a number of them to say "Yes, send me —." The result was he took away a number of customers from his competitors and established two or three deliveries at certain hours each day which as he candidly put it, "I bluffed them into thinking was a regular thing with me."

The greatest victories in war have been won through the preconceived plan, and not acting on the spur of the moment. Here is a case where a dealer educates his customers to order goods for such and such a delivery, thereby increasing his business all round.

Overcrowding With Hampers.

There is a certain store in Montreal which in one way causes temporary amusement to customers; but this amusement unfortunately for the dealer, soon develops into disgust, and the transition is rapid. Instead of having hampers delivered at back or at any rate carried to rear of store, the proprietor has them left in the middle of the floor, which is none too spacious and the customer has an amusing time finding her way to the counter. But ruffled feelings are soon aroused when the dealer opens a crate of celery and peels it there and then, throwing the leaves here and there, placing danger in the way of visitors because many a fall has come as the direct result of tramping on a peel of some description.

One may rest assured that there is something wrong when he sees a woman gathering her skirts on entering the store. He may count on something being there which is objectionable

Watching Progress of Western Crops

To Discern Probable Trend of Flour and Cereals — Wheat Showing Well So Far—If Conditions Continue Favorable May be Concessions in Flour—Something More Definite in Few Weeks.

As for some time now, the eyes of the milling world as well as of those retail dealers interested in flour and cereals continue to be directed to the approaching new crop. They are closely watching the progress of the Western Canada harvest to discern if possible, the probable trend of values in flour and cereals during the coming season.

Western Canada gives promise of a record wheat yield this year and estimates now range around the 200 million mark. If nothing crops up between now and the end of the harvest, it is felt that lower prices on wheat and wheat commodities will be seen. Wheat market already shows signs of wavering under approach of new crop. Threshing is now under way in certain centres and in a few weeks, something definite should be known and if conditions continue as favorable as at present, some shading in values seems evident. However, it must be remembered that the wheat is not all harvested yet.

This year's crop of oats also promises well and this was probably responsible for last week's decline in rolled oat market. Western millers thought present prospects of a yield ranging from 175 to 200 million bushels warranted lower prices and thus the decline.

It looks as if winter wheat flour will range at fairly high level this year. The Ontario crop of wheat which is now harvested is only about 60 per cent. of last year, although it must be remembered that last year's yield was heaver than usual.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR. — There has been a fair volume of business done for local account with a passing demand from the country, but export business has been practically nil as buyers on the other side are expecting lower prices for the new crop which from all appearances will be a record one.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There have been no changes in local flour prices nor are there any particularly new features to report. The same keen interest in the progress of Western Canada'5s wheat crop is in evidence.

There has been no improvement in the delivery of winter wheat. Probably farmers are busy just now or they may be holding back as in other years. Wheat prices are still too high for any export business in flour.

CEREALS.—Rolled oats prices are unchanged at last week's decline of 25 cents per barrel. It would seem that it was the shadow of the approaching new crop which brought about the reduction, as old oats continue firm on account of scarcity. Again, it is said that some western millers indulged in price cutting, and that lower prices were followed by Eastern manufacturers.

TAKING UP EXTRACT STANDARDS.

Meeting to be Held in Ottawa on September 25 For This Purpose.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—Some months ago negotiations were begun between Chief Analyst A. McGill of Inland Revenue Department, Ottawa, and the Pure Food Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association with regard to food standards for extracts. These standards have not yet been fixed, as both Prof. McGill and the manufacturers are anxious to have them as practicable as possible, and, therefore, will take plenty of time.

Recently a meeting was held in Toronto to discuss a draft of vanilla and lemon extracts from Mr. McGill. There were present Jas. Litster, Litster Pure Food Co., who is chairman of the Pure Food Section of the C. M. A.; F. F. Stuart, Stuart Bros., Niagara Falls; Mr. Moore, National Drug Co., Toronto; and Prof. Cotton, of J. J. McLaughlin, Limited, Toronto.

Some changes were suggested in the drafted standards and Mr. McGill will be met in Ottawa on Sept. 25 to go into them thoroughly. The annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association will be held at that time in Ottawa.

According to statistics compiled by a New York agency, only 2,500 grocers and delicatessen dealers in that city are rated $1,000 or more. The list contains the names of 14,000 dealers.

Competition in Chocolates Aids Dealer

The Old Peppermint Drop and Aniseed Ball are But Poor Relations to the Candy of To-day—These Have Not Only Been Improved in Quality, But are Supplied in More Attractive Form—Boxed Goods and High Quality Bulk Varieties Enable Dealers to Secure High Class Trade—They Can Sell Candy For What it is, Good Food.

"My, I never had these when I was a girl." That is what our grandmothers would say if they were here to-day and took a stroll through some of the leading grocery stores in any large city. They would gaze with pleasure on the delicious confections and wonder why the young folk are not satisfied with the old fashioned cinnamon stick, peppermint drops and aniseed ball.

Ere long, though, they would realize that extravagant as the taste may have grown, nevertheless, the increased output of sweetmeats from the factories and their richer nature must simply be one of the striking results of the onward march of science and skill.

Chocolates Show Great Advance.

The greatest advance has undoubtedly been made in the manufacture of chocolates. The smaller chocolate with the rich, delicate centre has made great headway. One manufacturer vies with the other in his anxiety to produce something better and different. In fact, manufacturers resemble, in a sense, the Bereans of Scriptural fame, who were always on the lookout for "something new."

Helps The Dealer.

And all this rivalry helps the retailer. It insures him being offered purer goods and puts an obstacle in the way of the unscrupulous maker who would force impure goods upon him, or at least concoctions which have no appealing force for the consumer, but an attractive desire-creating name.

There is a constant cry for pure cleanly goods and the fact that even a number of staple lines are being put up in cartons, makes it natural for us to expect a good deal of confectionery being delivered in sealed packages. This keeps the goods fresh in their passage from factory to consumer, and preserves the pure flavor of the cocoa and whatever flavoring may be used. While sales are frequently made from trays in the show cases, there will be a constant demand for the package goods also. Bulk goods, properly cared for, are a splendid stock to handle also.

Attractiveness of Package Counts.

Package chocolates afford splendid opportunities for display, more especially as in more recent years, a move has been made towards highly lithographed boxes, which, in themselves, invite a test. Here again is another instance of competition working indirectly for the retailer. In the case of bottled goods the label is pretty well a fixed thing, no change from one year to the other. But with chocolates, Dame Fashion is in control, and sees that the taste is catered to regularly by a total periodical change in style of package, etc.

In the olden days chocolates were not an extra desirable stock, because factories were not properly ventilated and on humid days the coating would soften, and the supply, instead of being attractive, would become a sticky mass and prove objectionable to the eye. To-day refrigeration machinery has reached such a stage of perfection that the cool, icy air can be introduced to the coating and dipping room, uniformly in every respect, with the result that the coating can be preserved and an equal and lasting chocolate color is given the sweetmeats.

Medical Experts Recommend Candy.

When the medical profession advocates a reasonable use of pure candies, the dealer may feel sure that he will encounter no snags when offering good goods for sale; and while at one time the digestive organs were considered liable to derangement from contact with candy, to-day the profession are more acquainted with the food value of sugar and cocoa and the percentage of nutriment in both, and so are not antagonistic to it.

To sum up, therefore, the retailer should consider the points just given, as they prove conclusively that no good store should be without a strong well arranged confectionery department. As aforesaid, the public demand for pure chocolates is strong, and the rivalry among bigger manufacturers goes far towards raising the standard of purity, while the elaborate packing means easy sales. Indeed, the dealer should get some data on the nutritive value of sugar, etc., and with it, he will find himself in a position to talk intelligently to the customer and to create sales on his own initiative. After all, what is more desirable than to be able to create sales in this way? By cultivating the art, you secure yourself a place amongst the ranks of those big dealers who are called, and truly called SALESMEN.

SEASONABLE FISH LINES.

Facts of Interest About the Haddock Cod and Maritime Sole.

HADDOCK. — The haddock may be called a staple fish line as it is on the market almost the whole year round. The main sources of supply are the Banks which extend from the latitude of Newfoundland, down as far as Nantucket Island, that is, to a point opposite the State of Rhode Island. The quantities caught both in the States and Canada run well into the millions of pounds annually, one large wholesaler putting the amount conservatively at 10,000,000 pounds. As an article of diet it is very popular, and dealers can have no difficulty in getting rid of a fair quantity weekly, if they only go the right way about it. One strong point in favor of large sales is the fact that it is much cheaper than any other fish and the trade can always count on a heavy sale during years when the cost of living reaches a high level.

COD FISH.—The cod, for sake of explanation, may be termed the raw material for several lines of prepared fish put on the market, such as dried cod, boneless and skinless cod, desiccated or shredded, and in the popular form salted cod. As to the latter in former days when distribution problems were many and facilities few, the salted cod was one of the main lines of diet. To-day a fair number of shipments are made in the salted form but the heaviest demand is for the prepared, the reason being apparent. Large quantities are also sold in the fresh state but not to same extent as the haddock. Codfish is certainly one of the most palatable of sea food and its reputation is a world-wide one. It belongs to the northern latitude of this country, the season running from May 1st to the end of December. The length of the season is due to the fact that it is first located deep down miles out from the coast, a gradual move being made towards the shores till it is sometimes found in the narrow and shallow inlets. It then moves out again being caught at end of season on the farthest banks of the ocean. That it is one of the most prolific of fish, no one will dispute as one female will deposit as many as 10,000,000 eggs.

P. Y. Anderson, general merchant, Wyoming, Ont., has been advertising a going out-of-business sale. It began on Aug. 24, and lasted until Sept. 4. The advertisement stated that "4 bottles of extracts", "7 bars —— soap", and "3 boxes ammonia" would each be sold for 25 cents "if bought together with other groceries to the value of $1 or upwards."

Rainy Weather Hampers Curing of Fish

On Eastern Coast—May Have Some Effect on Prices Later On—Need Fine Warm Weather—Cooler Weather Needed to Enliven Oyster Trade.

Unfavorable weather in the Maritime provinces is interfering to a considerable extent with the curing of fish. For some time rainy weather has been general, making it impossible to cure stock. It is felt that this may probably have some effect on prices later on, especially if they do not soon get fine warm weather. It is said that fishermen have thousands of quintals of cod salted, but not dried.

While the oyster season has opened again, it has not as yet developed into appreciable proportions. Initial shipments are coming along, more retailers are being induced to take up the line, but cooler weather will be needed to bring activity. Fish business appears to be shaping for a good fall trade.

There is a firmer feeling in swordfish for as weather grows cooler they become more scarce.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Halibut is very scarce and price has advanced considerably. Supplies coming to hand now are from American supply of Pacific Coast, the customs duty payable adding to price. Gaspe salmon is practically finished, but small supplies of fresh B. C. salmon are coming along. Brook trout are so scarce that none is obtainable at present. Haddock and cod though, are plentiful, also lake trout and whitefish, but fresh dore and pike are extremely scarce.

TORONTO.—Greater activity should shortly develop in fish and oysters. Wholesale dealers are beginning to put their shoulders to the wheel and retail dealers should now begin the planning of their fall campaign.

There are no changes in local quotations. Whitefish and trout continue scarce. While oyster season is opened, even all wholesale dealers are not handling them yet, but will commence soon. Cooler weather will help trade a good deal.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—There is practically nothing doing in fish business at present. Exports are light and there is little fish in store here. Weather continues unfavorable for curing fish, and this may have effect on prices later on. Conditions in this respect are unprecendented, and outlook is not promising. It is stated that the fishermen have thousands of quintals of cod salted, but not dried, and that they must have fine warm weather to cure the fish. Scarcely a day passes, but rain falls.

Fresh herring are in good supply, but local demand for this class of fish is light. Salt herring is a better seller, and there is some good stock now on the market.

While some small hauls of mackerel are being made along coast in vicinity of St. Mary's Bay, fishing this season has been a failure. There are practically no cured mackerel of any size offering.

Catches of cod by inshore bank fishermen are small. Large quantities of Haddies are being exported. Smoked salmon are fairly plentiful. There is not much doing in the canned fish line.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG.—There is nothing to report in fish business all staple lines being steady and demand quite up to average. Oysters will probably be on market next week.

Domestic Peaches Now in Good Supply

Being Pushed for Preserving—Crawford Variety in This Week —Bartlett Pears Ready to Pick—Lombard Plums are Short— Lemon Prices Maintained—Little Attention to Oranges.

Home grown fruits occupy the centre of the stage at most fruit markets just now with peaches in particularly good supply. California peaches are being forced from the market by the flood of the Canadian stock which is running more and more to freestone varieties and is consequently being pushed strongly for preserving purposes. Crawfords made their debut this week but crop is light and prices are expected to rule quite high.

The Canadian pear is not yet far enough advanced to force American product off market. Oregon and Washington are sending some Bartletts but are now about done shipping. Canadian Bartletts are now ready to pick although rather hard as yet. Lombard plums which are usually a good crop are light this year. Damson plums will also be high.

Malaga grapes have been coming to Canadian markets from California. This week marks the arrival of some Canadian stock which will continue to increase. Canteloupes are plentiful but on some markets there are a lot of poor quality.

In spite of weather that does not work for as large a demand as usual, lemons maintain a steady position. As pointed out before, stocks are not large while there will be little or no stock coming along until arrival of new crop. Late Valencia is only variety of orange now available but owing to pressure of domestic fruits, they are not getting much attention just now.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—The market keeps active, with all lines moving out freely, even though some quotations are on the high side. Still the consumer is getting used to paying the upper figure so that the advance in cost does not present any great difficulty in the clearance of stocks. A large part of the country trade is being supplied by growers nearby, but nevertheless a large volume of business is being done locally. California oranges are easier. Available supplies of foreign lemons are lighter than during corresponding period of last year, but even taking this into consideration California varieties have not advanced to any extent. Of course the quality of the Californians offered may have kept prices steady, as the quality was not up to usual standard.

VEGETABLES. — Good supplies of Canadian vegetables of good quality are moving out just as quickly. The potato market is a little easier in feeling. Prices have dropped considerably within the past two weeks, and if supplies are as plentiful as at present there should be a further decline. New York leeks are no longer offered, while radishes are a little scarce.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS. — Domestic fall fruits still occupy a position of prominence. The glut of plums is over and for balance of season supply will only be moderate. Lombards which are usually such a large crop are light this year. There is a small quantity of Damson plums but owing to demand from North-West they are high in price. They are quoted at 70 cents per basket. Bartlett pears are ready to pick but will be quite hard for a week yet. For this reason Bartletts from Oregon at $3 per box are selling for table use.

Peaches are plentiful and running more to freestone. Crawford peaches will be ready at end of week but crop is light. Champion grapes are coming along at 30 cents per 6 qt. basket. Malaga grapes are a little lower in price.

VEGETABLES.—Corn on the cob is a little easier this week, selling down as low as 12 cents per dozen. Beets, beans and carrots also are lower in price while celery has a downward tendency.

Potatoes are lower in price and prospects for this year's yield are good. The opinion seems to prevail that prices will be below the usual standard, unless the present rainy weather continues long enough to rot the crop.

Cucumbers and peppers are in demand for pickling purposes.

Firmness in Lard at Several Centres

No Overplus of Spot Stocks—Hogs Light and Not Heavy Lard Producers—Fall Egg Season About at Height—West is Calling for Fresh Fall Eggs—Present Eggs Have Better Body—Butter Unchanged.

Firmness in lard is a feature of several Canadian markets and at some centres the strong front has already developed into slight advances in quotations. Immediate reason is probably scarcity of spot stocks. As one dealer said, "If we haven't got the lard we are bound to see higher prices." It seems that a considerable number of hogs too light in weight have been coming to market and light hogs do not make much lard. Another firming factor is approach of season of brisker demand for this article.

"The fall egg season is about at its height," said an Ontario dealer this week, "and deliveries are about at their pinnacle." He went on to explain that when deliveries reach a certain point, they again begin to recede and he felt that point was not far distant.

Eastern dealers expect to have a call from the west for fresh fall eggs. In fact this demand is already in evidence. Present eggs are in good request. For some time hens have been living mostly on "pick-ups," but at this, the season of harvest we begin to get "grain" eggs which have a better body and are probably better keepers.

Eggs still continue in good consumptive demand. Not long ago a wholesaler remarked "If we haven't enough eggs to supply the demand we know where to get them—right across the border." However, there are no U.S. eggs coming in, a firmer feeling having developed across line, while some shipments that did come in were not altogether satisfactory.

Pastures at any rate should be excellent after multitude of rains which we have been having but butter market indicates that there is no overplus of this commodity. In fact, production is not as large as a person would expect while some storing is still being done.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—There was not much doing in this market early in week owing to holiday but towards middle trade picked up, all lines of cooked meats selling well. Pure lard is none too plentiful, owing to dwindling of supplies of live hogs and an advance would not be surprising. Plate beef is not quoted at present, local packers having none to offer.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — There is a fair volume of trade being done in pork products, a feature of market being slight strengthening in certain lines. Firmer feeling in lard was pointed out last week. It still continues with some dealers quoting higher than present quotations. Season of brisk demand in lard is now approaching.

Long clear is also a little stronger, although there seems to be considerable difference in ideas of different firms, varying from 13½ to 14½ cents. Breakfast bacon is also slightly firmer. Live hogs are slightly firmer.

BUTTER.—The production of butter does not seem to be as large as one would expect considering the copious rains which have been general for some time now. However, there is a fair amount coming forward and a certain quantity is still finding its way into storage. There is really no change in immediate situation, as there has been no accumulation that would weigh market down.

EGGS.—We are now perhaps at about height of fall season in eggs. Deliveries have now about reached their pinnacle and will shortly begin to show a falling off. At least, this is what some dealers expect.

Some recent business has been done with the West as there will now be a demand from that direction for fresh fall eggs to supply the early winter eggs. Present supplies are mostly grain eggs, of better body and perhaps slightly better keepers.

A Provision Counter That Pays for Itself

Dealer Saw That Competitors Were Getting Some of His Trade So He Interposed—Leaks Stopped in Over Weight and Loss of Large Baskets—Figures Total Cost Carefully and Makes Sure of Profit—What Some Special Attention Will Do.

In a talk on his provision department recently, a retail grocer gave some practical hints in regard to its conduct that may prove of benefit to others in the trade.

This merchant, up to a few years ago and unlike his two competitors on the same street, did not have a provision counter. He saw considerable trade slipping through his fingers on this account. When many a housewife wanted a few groceries, she would go to the store where she could obtain her ham or bacon as well. He considered the problem for some time before he finally reached a decision; because with these two stores in the same neighborhood already well entrenched in the provision trade of the district, he was rather uncertain as to whether he would be able to work up a large enough trade to make it profitable.

Decides on Provision Counter.

However, he decided to make an attempt. He installed a counter especially for this line and gave it particular attention. The window was used occasionally to attract passing people, the department was brought to the attention of people who visited the store while the order men were instructed to push this line while on their rounds. The result has been the obtaining of appreciable regular sales, especially during the summer and at this time of year when cooked and smoked meats are given particular attention.

One of the important points to be observed, in his opinion in order to assure profit, is carefulness in weighing.

He recalls the fact that when he first opened this department that he suffered considerable loss through a careless clerk who when a pound was ordered, if there happened to be an ounce or so over would allow it to go as a pound. When all these undivided overweights were added up, it was found to amount to no little figure. That clerk was informed that he was not there altogether to see how quickly he could weigh and tie up a pound of bacon, without taking into consideration that some profit was needed to pay the expenses of the business.

Strict on Determining Cost.

Another point dwelt on by this grocer is the need of careful figuring of cost to ascertain what each line should sell at in order to give a living profit. Cost with him is not the amount set down on the invoice but the cost set down at his store plus an allowance for shrinkage and loss in weighing. Many lines of bacon, he says, dry out considerably, while there is always a certain amount of loss in cutting and weighing and these all have to be taken into consideration or profits are liable to be figured on too small a scale.

Many Points to Watch.

Carefulness is the key-note of his advice regarding this department. Care in weighing, care in slicing, care in storing to avoid drying out, has to be observed. He lays stress on attention to details if a fair profit is sought.

He gives an instance of one detail needing attention. He is situated in a town and gets a lot of meats in baskets, with which he is charged but which are returnable in good condition. On figuring it up he found he was not returning as many as received. The explanation was that the delivery boy who used baskets in delivering, seeing there were plenty of them, was somewhat careless, and many were lost and destroyed. Now he is allotted just a certain number for delivering and the rest as they come in are stored away until there are enough to return.

A NOTE OF WARNING.

There has been issued, by direction of the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, a conspicuous poster calling the attention of potato growers to the importance of examining their crop to ascertain whether or not it is infected with "Potato Canker." The hanger shows in natural colors a potato plant the whole yield of which is affected by the disease. It also shows the appearance of individual tubers in which the canker has started to work. Growers or dealers who discover suspicious symptoms of the disease in their crop are requested to send affected specimens to the Dominion Botanist, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

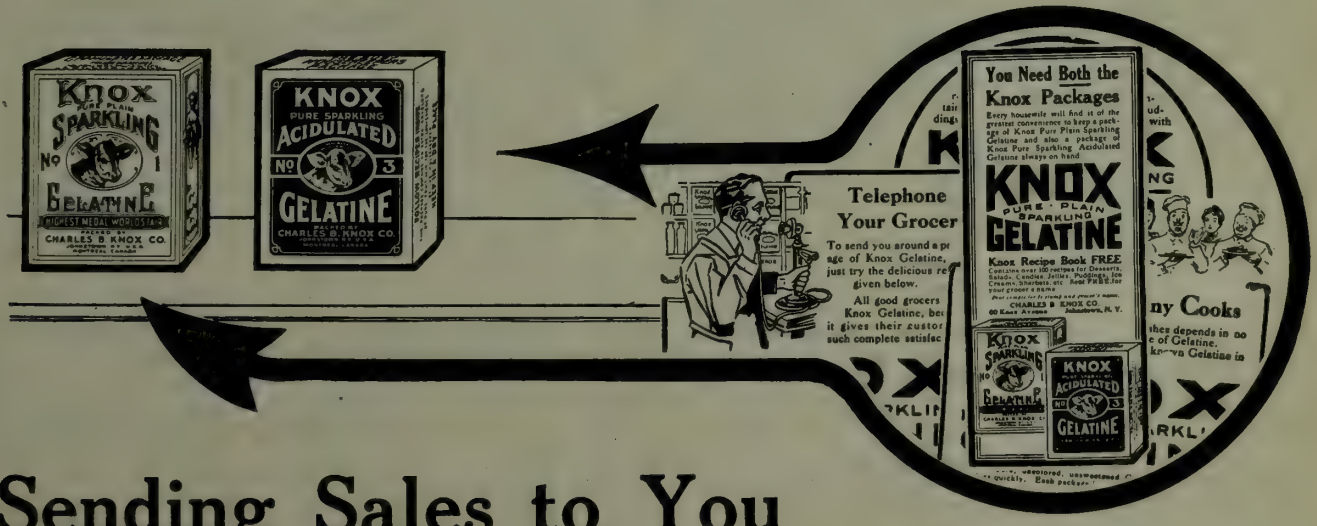
The only baking powder made with Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

No Alum, No Lime Phosphate

ALL grocers should carry a Full Stock of Royal Baking Powder.

It always gives the greatest satisfaction to customers, and in the end yields the larger profit to the grocer.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE



Sending Sales to You

Look at our advertising in the magazines and see how we're making KNOX GELATINE sell faster every day. All our advertising for this season includes mention of our ACIDULATED GELATINE and tells the housewife what a convenient package it is—two envelopes of gelatine, and an extra envelope of concentrated lemon juice in each package—two full quarts of jelly, including flavor in a convenient form, for 15 cents. This form of advertising is increasing sales of KNOX PLAIN SPARKLING GELATINE, as well as KNOX ACIDULATED GELATINE, and the profit you can make on the resulting large number of sales is a good reason to

"make KNOX your gelatine leader"

A Scientific Discovery

The mechanical process of homogenization is a recent scientific discovery by which milk can be kept indefinitely in any temperature but frost. It intricately mixes the milk and cream by the breaking of the little globules, which makes it more wholesome and nutritious than ordinary milk. When drinking it one has the sensation of drinking thin cream. It is always pure, sterile and sweet, and is the great boon to mankind by which every dealer can profit.

A fifty-year-old favorite—Quality counts.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

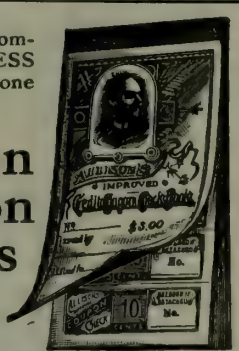
CREDIT customers make LESS trouble than anyone else, where

Allison Coupon Books



are used. Reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings—paying for themselves many times over.

How They Work

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

The Food That Serves the Appetite

Sardines preserved in the whole state in pure olive oil are precluded from contamination. Besides, the sardine has appetizing qualities, and where the appetite serves digestion follows.

"KING OSCAR" SARDINES

embody all the features that make sardines an appetizing and health-giving food. Careful selection of fish and always uniformly pure; sweet and well packed in pure olive oil.

They produce satisfaction and incidentally profit.

TWENTY-SEVEN GOLD MEDALS

BY APPOINTMENT

AND FIRST CLASS DIPLOMAS

AFTER years of experiment in the proper making of jams, Chivers & Sons are now the recognized leaders of the preserved fruit industry in the Old Country. Exhaustive investigation by the world's best critics has pronounced them "excellent."

PURITY—Cleanliness—Freshness—these three, are the hall-mark of this world-famed make of food products. Starting in a very small way with a mere handful of employees, Chivers & Sons have developed into a thoroughly organized concern employing thousands of people.

Chivers & Sons' Fruit Preserves

have a flavour that is unequalled, being composed of the choicest fresh fruit skilfully prepared. This delicious flavour may be attributed to their method of preserving and packing, almost immediately after the fruit is gathered. This is an advantage obtained by Chivers' factory standing in the midst of thousands of acres of orchards in the finest fruit-growing district of Cambridgeshire.

A feature that you will find as a selling point is the careful packing in tins or bottles. By a special process all the tins are prepared so as to prevent the possibility of any detrimental effect on the fruit.

You safeguard your reputation, Mr. Grocer, by stocking foodstuffs of perfect purity and quality—tried and tested. You will find it the means of bringing many repeat orders—at good profit.

Enterprise Accuracy and Enterprise Quality are in These Coffee Mills

It is best to consider well, in buying a coffee mill for your store, whether there is character under the brilliant finish—whether the machine will do the work perfectly and continue to do it. That is what are made to do. Enterprise Mills are made under our own patents. Expert mechanics make every part. The grinding system gives absolutely uniform, perfect results. There is no crushing of the coffee, but an even grind to the fineness you want—every time.

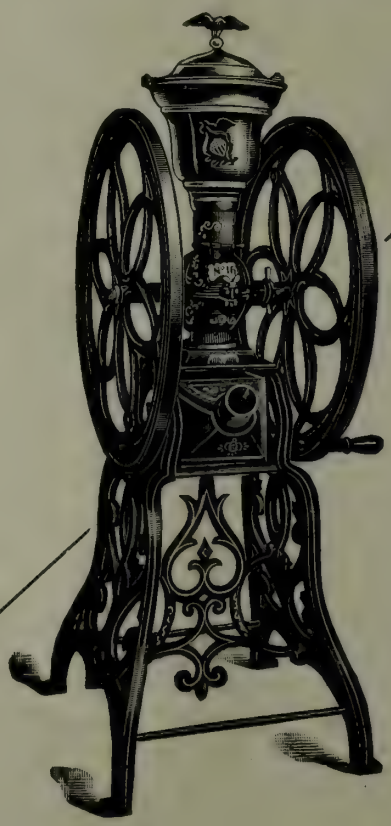
All parts interchangeable. And under our system of manufacture, there cannot be the deviation of the thousandth part of an inch. Replace a part next year—ten years from now—and it fits exactly. Strong, staunch, grinders guaranteed equal to steel do the work evenly and perfectly. New grinders can be put in your machine at low cost. The easiest running machines made. Better to be sure of good quality—service—first of all. The name Enterprise is your guarantee of both. Let us send you catalogue showing you the line of Enterprise machines—many styles in hand and electric power.



There is a maximum service in ENTERPRISE Meat and Food Choppers. The one right cutting principle — four-bladed steel knife revolving against the inner surface of a perforated steel plate. Cuts like shears.

THE REQUISITES ARE QUALITY

AND EFFICIENCY

It is important that you associate yourself with a source of supply that is unquestioned.

You understand that to compare a house treating oysters as a side line with a concern that makes it their only business, is a costly mistake to you.

There is one thing you cannot expect from a side line house, and that is that degree of efficiency and service that is characteristic only of houses treating the line as their only specialty.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

The oyster business is a business of itself, employing a great many million of dollars, and it is unreasonable to expect the jobbers to effect this efficiency when they are treating this business as a side line. We devote our entire organization to oysters. Our "Coast Sealed" oysters stand for more with the Canadian trade than all other brands combined.

We solicit your enquiry as to prices, etc.

Dear Sirs:

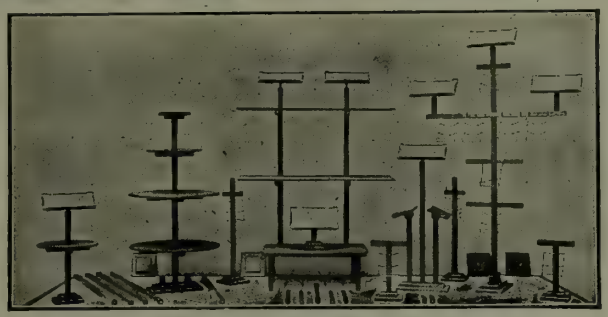
Please send us another set of ONKEN Wood Window Fixture YOUNITS. We have more windows to trim and therefore can use another set.

Since using the first set you shipped us for about two weeks, we have concluded not to use any other make of fixtures, as we feel there are none like yours.

They are easy to set up and can be used for the different kinds of merchandise we handle.

We would not be without the two sets for anything.

Yours truly,
MILLER BROS.



The Full Set No. 14

The above illustration shows the entire set of No. 14 YOUNITS, comprising 125 YOUNITS to the set. The entire set of YOUNITS is made of well seasoned oak and nicely finished. The display slabs are of distinct design, the edges of which are beveled and are fitted with tilting metal adjustment on back and front for holding them in various positions, also fitted with metal attachment for holding boxes on slabs. The base blocks are double thickness and of proper sizes, so that fixtures are not top-heavy. Upright, Cross Arm and Extension YOUNITS are in assorted lengths and sizes, which enable you to make HUNDREDS and HUNDREDS of window trims and as many odd and standard fixtures.

You Never Need A Tool.

ONKEN YOUNITS

Patented 1911 in United States and Foreign Countries.

The No. 14 set was used in making the window trims shown on this page; at no time was the entire set used in making any of these trims.

Nothing But The Best
The One Inflexible Rule For DOMOLCO

Every package of Molasses bearing this registered label must contain the BEST, nothing but the BEST, nothing but Molasses.

Offered as superior for table use to any other Molasses on the Canadian Market.

We know this to be a strong statement, but you will find the proof in every tin.

Every family on your list of customers should use Molasses, and the majority of them will purchase it regularly after trying

DOMOLCO

Show them quality plus modern package, and note the repeat orders.

Kops Ale & Kops Stout

(Non-Alcoholic)

Ideal Summer Beverages

Scientifically brewed from the finest Kentish Hops, retaining the healthful, clear principle derived from Hops only. They are, nevertheless, non-alcoholic and non-intoxicating.

There are no more wholesome, salutary, palatable beverages than these.

Possess distinct tonic and stimulatlng properties.

If you did not try them last Summer, we should like to make arrangements to supply a sample lot.

THE BEST FOR YOUR TRADE.

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service.

They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

THE "WANT AD."

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life, into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

The Barr does at least 16 Things Immediately

The good effect of the Barr Register is felt immediately you instal it in your store. It immediately begins to save money, save bookkeeping and save customers, and within a short time it has more than paid for itself and becomes an absolute money-earner for you. Here are some of the things the Barr Register will do for you in your store:

(1) It gives your customer a bill of his current purchase.
(2) It gives your customer a statement of his account to date.
(3) It does all your bookkeeping with one writing.
(4) It keeps your accounts always posted up to the minute.
(5) It prevents mistakes in bookkeeping.
(6) It prevents clerks from forgetting to charge items.
(7) It does away with the cumbersome, inefficient system of running monthly accounts.
(8) It prevents customers loading your books with bad debts.
(9) It prevents customers from running a bill beyond their financial ability to pay.
(10) It handles credit sales as fast as cash sales.
(11) It enables settlement of accounts to be made at any time.
(12) It enables you to set a credit limit upon all your customers and to know immediately when that limit is reached.
(13) It tells you immediately what your customers owe you.
(14) It establishes the confidence and respect of your customers.
(15) It has an immediate effect in reducing your outstanding accounts.
(16) It decreases the cost of running your business.

Is not a machine that will do this in your store worth while? Isn't it more—isn't it a necessity? Don't you see that every day you are without such a machine you are absolutely losing money. Every day you neglect to use the coupon below you are just throwing away so much money. You are neglecting to add to your store equipment something that will surely, without a shred of doubt, greatly increase your earnings at the end of the year. Act NOW. Use the coupon NOW.

Every merchant who has credit accounts needs a Barr Register. There is no contrivance yet placed upon the market that can equal it in efficiency. It is the latest and by far the best of such devices. It handles anywhere from 100 to 750 accounts, and the 750-account register occupies no more counter or floor space than the 100-account register.

If you want to earn money, use the coupon NOW.

Fall Housecleaning means a big demand for SOCLEAN. How is your stock?

Your customers will soon be busy with the fall house cleaning and every dealer has an excellent opportunity of cleaning up some good profits if he promotes the sales of the modern cleaning and sweeping compound. Soclean (the dustless sweeping compound) absorbs the dust, cleans floors, saves exertion, brightens carpets, kills moths and leaves a clean, fresh odor after sweeping.

The size of the 25c pail has been enlarged and the larger 50c and $1.00 sizes have been reduced to 40c and 75c respectively.

We aim to give the best in every respect—we could not better the quality so we bettered the quantity.

A window display in which symmetry of arrangement is given much prominence. It willalso be noted that only one line of goods is shown.

Making Customers Out of Passers-by

This is What Should be Made Every Dealer's Aim in Dressing a Window—The Advantage of Making Lasting Impression by Concentration—A Splendid Example of Regularity in Display—Best Windows Include Attractiveness, Originality and Selling Power.

To get the passerby to make the occasional purchase that leads to a future permanent customer, is one of the chief aims of every window trimmer.

When such has been accomplished the dealer can say with decision that he knows his window is a strong asset in business building.

A look at the above illustration shows a convincing display and one that is sure to bring in new business. It emulates the idea of the best trimmers—that each display should be confined to one line of goods. When a passerby observes such an array of jams and preserves, she has but one impression made on her mind. She doesn't have to think of soap, meat sauces or clothespins. She concentrates on jams and when she thinks of purchasing a jar of jam—if not at the time—that display comes back to mind and decides the store where the purchase is made.

Turn Energy into Profit.

Window dressing, if done at all, must be well done. It takes little more, if any, labor to make a neat, attractive, symmetrical display than a hap-hazard jumble of goods irregularly strewn all over the window. There is considerable jam in the above illustration but it would not take two clerks very long to arrange it.

The good window artist knows that mere attractiveness in a grocery window is not everything to be desired. Neither is originality. Of the greatest importance is selling power—power to create a desire on part of passerby to buy. The best windows are produced from a combination of all three.

Construction of the Window

A close study of the display shown here reveals the simplicity of its arrangement. At either end of the window is a circular arrangement of pails of jam piled one on the other. In the very centre is a similar arrangement from the floor up and between this central pillar and each side are three steps covered with white cloth on which are placed several pyramids of pails of jam. The floor in front is tastefully covered with jars of jam while five pyramids also are shown in regular array. It will be noted that symmetry was given special attention all the way through.

Here then is a window that commands respect. The display cards aid in impressing the onlooker with the fact that they are quality goods that can be depended upon; on the whole the display works for more business in this particular line of jams.

When the window trimmer learns something about the psychology of the human mind and discovers that lasting and convincing impressions are made by concentration on one object or series of objects of the same character, he has advanced considerably as a window artist. If he is imbued with a little originalty and love for neatness the rest is quite easy.

Editorial note:—The Canadian Grocer is anxious to receive from clerks and grocers photographs of good windows for reproduction on this page. Whenever an attractive display is used get your photographer to take a picture of it and send it along. Your ideas as to the value of good displays would be interesting as well.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WINDOW DISPLAYS.

The Grocer has frequently emphasized the advisability of dealers keeping a file for window photographs. If up to the present this has not been done, this issue would be a splendid one to begin with. This being the number containing many of the exhibits shown at the Canadian National Exhibition, there will be found some fine displays to preserve for future use. Clip them out for the window dressing file or scrap book and many of them will undoubtedly come in very handy.

In addition to their value as aids to window trimming, the exhibits and descriptions have a strong bearing on the business of every dealer. They include a wealth of information that is bound to assist in selling the lines exhibited and in conducting business with better profit.

We would, therefore, urge readers to study them carefully and use them. They will be found very useful.

LOWERING OF LIVING COST.

There is every reason to believe that next winter we will see a lowering of the cost of living. The world's grain and produce crops are on the whole good, and as prices in majority of cases depend on supply and demand, this condition of affairs should work for cheaper living.

In the United States in the third week in August the index number of all foods was 60.3, as compared to 68.4 in June and 61.2 for same period last year. These figures indicate a lowering movement already in living costs. This fact, of course, had an important bearing on wages and labor difficulties. The total in the cost of living index is 115.1 now, as compared with 121.8 in June and 112.9 in September last year.

Wheat and flour, of which we exported during the first three months of the present year over $27,000,000 worth as against under $10,000,000 at the same time last year should be cheaper during coming year. This will allow Canada to increase materially its export trade in these products during the present year. Although cost of living prices will come down, thus improving industrial conditions generally, the farming class will not be hurt owing to the large crops. Of course, individual farmers have been affected unfavorably in Ontario and in the West by the recent rains and may, in individual cases, not do so well this year as last, but on the whole production is large.

OPPORTUNITIES IN SOUPS.

After a lapse in demand caused by the warm weather, canned and condensed soups will with the advent of cooler weather once more return into public favor. As naturally to be expected, soups are not used so much dring the summer months, but they have now passed the period of inactivity for this year and from now on will be a daily article of diet on the table. Now is undoubtedly the time when grocers should swing this line into prominence and push it strongly.

Not only will canned and condensed soups be in greater demand with the cooler weather, but another fact worthy of consideration is the general increase in demand for these lines. The reason for this is that they are scientifically prepared, that is, they contain exactly the proper ingredients to produce the best flavor and at the same time contain the greatest percentage of nutriment.

For a long time the housewife thought it was not possible for anyone to put out in cans or condensed form a soup that could be compared to that made in her own kitchen, but this prejudice is fast disappearing, and will disappear entirely in a short time if the grocer will bring these points home to the consumer.

This can be done by personal talks to customers while serving them. The points may be emphasized briefly in show cards on displays or by giving "soup talks" in the newspaper advertisement. Point out their scientific preparation and urge customers who have never used them to try a package or tin.

They are steadily increasing in favor. There are great possibilities in their sale for the grocer who is ready to push them.

REWARDS OF EFFICIENCY.

In glancing through the "Situations Vacant" column of one of our large daily newspapers the following advertisement was noticed:—

> "Wanted—An experienced clerk for grocery store. Salary, $10.00 per week. Give references, age and experience. Apply Box 732."

Just under it another advertisement read:—

> "Manager wanted — For large wholesale house. One with knowledge of all branches. Salary no consideration to right man. Apply in first instance to Box 458."

As there was such a contrast between the two they were closely looked into, with the startling result that while for the former there were about a score of applicants, for the latter only two were received. A talk with the advertisers brought out the information that there were thousands of people who were only mediocre to every one who attained such a grasp of their work that they were able to direct others in their labors. When asked if they could account for these astounding circumstances, the answer given was: "Indifference. They are too easily satisfied with themselves. They are too ready to pat themselves on the back instead of striving to reach the stage where one is a leader in his work."

A great lesson can be taken by all young people who are out in the world to earn their way. Instead of doing things just because they have to be done, why not enter into the joy of your work and endeavor to learn all you can about each article you handle? Everyone likes to hear about a foreign article and how it is manufactured, but how few can ever give this information. Be one who knows!

Be a leader, strive to attain the highest point of efficiency and then your services will be in demand.

Recipe:—Concentrate, consecrate, work!

WESTERN CROP SITUATION.

The weather map of the three Western provinces up to well in the week showed generally fair weather with but few points reporting rain. The temperature has, however, been down to lowest yet recorded and thermometer has dropped close to freezing at many points, but no damage has been reported.

Under clear skies harvesting has made excellent progress during week and farmers have little fear that frost, which may come at any time now, can do much real damage.

Everything considered, crop prospects in the West look exceedingly promising. In spite of showers well distributed since harvest commenced, it has progressed favorably in all the provinces. Threshing is now general all over the Prairie Provinces, and the new grain will shortly begin to move to the head of navigation in large quantities. The estimates of the Grain Dealers' Association call for a wheat yield of 179,828,000 bushels, and an output of 220,290,000 bushels of oats. While the estimate on wheat is smaller than many of the earlier predictions, still the quality is on the whole good, and will from present outlook grade much higher than last year.

In fact, reports indicate that the color and general quality of the berry is much above normal, and grain men generally are in a state of feverish expectation.

The next problem is the moving of the crops.

WATCH THE ERRAND BOY.

Every dealer should be assured that his entire staff is working for him, not against him. Here is an actual instance illustrating the harm that can be done, thoughtlessly perhaps, to the business by an employe who has not been taught to look after the interests of the firm he is working for.

The errand and parcel boy in a well known grocery store in Toronto was asked by one of the customers how many pounds of sugar was given for a dollar. "Seventeen," was the reply, "but you can get nineteen at ————," mentioning a large department store in the same city.

No doubt the youngster was trying to oblige the customer, but he was doing it at the expense of his employer. He therefore became a liability rather than an asset. He did not, of course, know there were different kinds of sugar; that the department store was possibly selling the second grade at that price.

This is not a fairy tale, but an absolute fact, and it demonstrates the importance of the proprietor watching every employe in the store to see whether they are boosters and not knockers.

GIVE ATTENTION TO SHOW CASES.

A grocery traveler calls attention to the fact that grocers do not give enough attention to the trimming of show cases and silent salesmen. In this particular he is quite correct, so far as many are concerned. To view the display cases in many stores it would seem that the grocers regard them much in the same light as the space under the counter or in the cellar—merely to be filled up without regard for the manner of arrangement.

A show case comes under much the same heading as the show window. We have all frequently had the fact demonstrated to us that two windows, much the same, differ widely in their sales-creating value, depending on the manner they are trimmed and also on their location. It is the same with the display case.

In the first place they should be located in the most advantageous part of the shop. A show case hidden behind some other display fixture or at the back of the store loses a great deal of its value.

Attention must also be given to its arrangement to make it the powerful selling agent that it should be. Goods tossed in without regard to arrangement are not liable to sell themselves. An even, symmetrical and not too crowded arrangement with due regard to the proper blending of colors should be aimed at. Some attractive and business pulling displays may be made if proper care is taken in the work.

The Detrimental Effects of Parcels Post

Interview With Former Merchant in Wales Shows That the Trade in the Old Country Has Suffered as the Result of Parcels Post—Mail Order Houses Are Doing a Big Business—The Small Dealer Has Felt the Effects Most Directly.

Is parcel post beneficial to a country as a whole? No, it is not. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Parcels post has been in vogue in England for 20 years. In the motherland, it has proved a measure adverse to general business prosperity. It would probably prove even more so in Canada.

We have heard much in Canada in recent years about Parcels post, particularly from daily newspapers and legislators who are trying to hold themselves up as public benefactors. In their arguments they are prone to refer to the great benefits which other countries have derived from the adoption of the system and England is not infrequently held up as a shining example of its good points.

However, in their arguments they have largely selected those points which on the face may appear good and which can be talked up in such a manner as to appeal to public favor, but they have never sifted the matter out to see just how it really does effect the country as a whole. Let us, however, see just what the result of parcel post in England has been.

The statements of E. Lewis Evans, an English merchant now resident in Canada would indicate that parcel post in England has been a severe slap to business in that country. M. Evans had an experience of 15 years in the retail business at Rhyl, a North Wales town of 9,000 population where he was in business for himself. He is thus able to give an idea of how parcel post has affected the retail merchant as well as the general business of the country.

Perhaps the most significant feature, at least to the retail merchant, is Mr. Evans' statement that "since the adoption of parcel post in England there has been an enormous diversion of trade from smaller retail stores to the big departmental and catalogue houses in the larger centres."

Encourages Catalogue Buying.

"I do not remember just how the system was primarily instituted, but there is no doubt that the catalogue houses played an imporant part in having the measure put through," he states. "At any rate their catalogues are profusely distributed throughout the country and the cheapness with which goods may be shipped by rail played up so as to induce business.

"For instance any parcel up to one pound can be mailed to any part of Great Britain for 6 cents. There is a scale for all weights running up as high as 11 pounds. Five pounds can be sent for 6 pence—12 cents, while 11 pounds—the highest weight that can be sent cost 11 pence—22 cents. The aggregate length and breadth must not exceed 6 feet."

As Mr Evans states, parcels post has proved extremely detrimental to business of the retail dealers in the smaller centres, and beneficial to the catalogue houses. The country is flooded with catalogues, the institutions in the smaller centres upon which local dealers depend for no little portion of their business being especially looked after in this regard. These catalogues with their finely written descriptions and profuse illustrations lure the readers into buying. This sorely taxes the temper of the local dealers, but so much more so when they come to him to look after their repairs—which show little or no profit.

One Advantage.

"There is also another side to the question," reasons Mr. Evans. "It is handy for the dealer once in a while if he wishes to get a small shipment of goods in a hurry. But it has been bad —extremely bad for the small trader, and what is detrimental to the small traders, which means practically all the business men, is detrimental to the country as a whole. A country cannot prosper unless the merchants ro."

Does It Pay For Itself?

There is another important point brought up as to whether it would work in Canada. It is not known really whether it pays for itself in England as it is mixed up with regular postal business. However, when first insti tuted it meant a costly change and enlargement of postal facilities."

"Even if it did prove profitable as a government business in England, it is a question whether it would do so in Canada. Canada is an enormous country and the distance parcels would have to be transported in some cases would get this unprofitable business. The express companies would get the shorter and profitable hauls."

Conditions Are Acute.

Since the institution of parcel post in England conditions in some trades have gradually been growing more and are now indeed acute with the smaller dealers. This is shown by Mr. Evans' statement that, "You can't realize the state of things in certain trades of the Old Country. There may be certain portions flourishing, but as a whole the trading class is suffering.

Price Cutting Prevalent.

"There has been so much trade taken by the mail order houses that there is keen competition among local deal' ers for what remains. There is an awful lot of price cutting. It has got to such a point in hardware for instance, that a dealer wouldn't think of allowing a customer to go out of the store without buying even if he had to cut the article in question down to cost price.

"If a man is going to build a cottage, he makes a canvass of the local trade to get them bidding against one another. He will go to one dealer and say, 'I can get it for so much from so and so. How much will you take?' Thus price cutting is carried on.

"I could give you instances of good men with good experience dragged down to failure—just by unflourishing conditions. It was not so 15 years ago."

It would, therefore, seem that England is a very poor example to hold up as showing the benefits of parcel post. True it has been beneficial to one factor—the large departmental and catalogue houses. It is not the catalogue houses that make the country, however, It is the smaller retail dealers. Therefore, swat the parcel post.

SOME CO-OPERATING NEEDED HERE.

A dispatch from Calgary, Alta., says that the retail grocers of that city may endeavor to eliminate the wholesaler and deal direct with the manufacturer. The matter was broached at a recent meeting of the Calgary Retail Grocers' Association. The contention was made that the wholesalers' profit are extortionate and the retailer must bear the burden of separating the public from its money.

Evidently there is room for co-operation between the wholesale and retail trades in Calgary in order that a correct understanding of one another may be secured.

Features of the Canadian National Million Mark Not Yet Attained, But 1913 Will Probably See It—Some Improvements From Year Ago and Others Suggested For the Future—Visitors From All Parts of Canada—Some of the Manufacturers Exhibits.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Toronto, Sept 12. (Special.)—The 1913 Canadian National Exhibition has passed into history. The object of the men behind was to reach the million mark in point of attendance, and had the weather been more respectful there is no doubt this number would have been realized. As it was the attendance was estimated at 962,000 as compared to 926,000 of 1911. Again next year the million mark will be the object to be striven for and with the present rate of increase it will require more than every-other-day rains to defeat that object.

Greatest in the World.

Those merchants who found it possible to attend the Exhibition readily realize its importance on the National educational and commercial life of the country. The Canadian National is recognized as the greatest annual exhibition in the world and we Canadians are all proud of it. Its instructive character is exemplified in every building and that it develops our ideas of things and enlarges our views is beyond contradiction.

Every Province Represented.

The importance of the exhibition lies in its national scope. Every Province of the Dominion was represented by visitors and exhibits of natural resources and manufactured products. The Prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba were conspicuous with their wheat, and British Columbia with its fruits. The resources of Ontario and Quebec and Maritime Provinces were also well exhibited, and to one not fully acquainted with the wonderful country we have all was a great revelation.

From year to year improvements are made in the grounds, buildings, etc. Last year the streets were paved for the first time and the advisability of having this done was well exemplified during the numerous rains which fell during the fortnight.

Since a year ago the new Government building shown above was erected and in itself contained a wealth of educative material.

No sooner was the Exhibition closed than improvements for next year were discussed. It is quite likely that a couple of thousand benches will be added and that there will be some new cattle and horse sheds.

The handsome new entrance seen this year is a splendid acquisition to the Exhibition. Particularly at night did it show up to great advantage.

Many Exhibits Illustrated.

In succeeding pages of this issue are a number of illustrations of food products and store equipment lines shown by manufacturers. Those who did not visit the Exposition will be interested in them and will get a great deal of knowledge about goods they sell.

FOSTER CLARK'S CREAM CUSTARD AND EIFFEL TOWER LEMONADE .

There were few livelier booths at the Canadian National Exhibition this year than that of Foster Clark's Cream Custard and Eiffel Tower Lemonade, conducted by their agents The Harry Horne Company, grocer brokers of Toronto.

The exhibit was in the Manufacturers' Annex and every day for two long weeks a steady stream of people passed, to whom was explained the merits of the widely known Foster Clark specialties.

The demonstrators in the booth had a busy time of it during the fortnight, but Foster Clark's Custard and Eiffel Tower Lemonade are known to thousands more Canadian people than before.

The efforts of the Harry Horne Co. this year were concentrated solely on creating a wider knowledge for these specialties. That they were successful is evidenced by the fact that 10,000 souvenir tins of Foster Clark's Custard were given to Canadian women. Everyone who tasted it was unanimous that it was superior to anything they had ever tried. This cream custard is certainly a dainty dish, and besides it is one of the most economical desserts that any woman could wish for. A 10 cent tin makes four quarts of delicious cream custard, a 15 cent tin makes seven quarts, and a 25 cent tin, twelve quarts, by simply adding milk and sugar to the cream powder. It can be made ready in ten minutes so that there is no wonder this exhibit was one of the most attractive to the Canadian women who attended the Exhibition.

Dealers who have already stocked and sold Clark's Cream Custard have long since found it a splendid selling line when once introduced. The Foster-Clark Co. is an O'd Country manufacturing firm with a high reputation for turning out quality products and co-operating with the retail grocer, so that dealers who have not yet stocked their cream custard should do so at once. It means many extra sales and extra profits.

None the less important is Foster Clark's Effiel Tower Lemonade. This is a lemonade powder of an exceptionally good quality and is known all over the world. It was also demonstrated at the Exhibition and won thousands of new friends.

Here are two lines that every grocer in Canada should handle. With the extensive advertising done at the Exhibition as well as that being carried on at all times they are bound to continue leading sellers for this class of goods.

The Harry Horne Co., 309 King street West, Toronto, will supply full particulars.

MELAGAMA TEA AND COFFEE.

"MELAGAMA" means the highest quality and best trade winners to the Canadian trade in teas and coffees. "Melagama" has long since held the most prominent position on the shelves of the grocers, because of the satisfaction and merit they give to the tea and coffee drinking public.

stands for have been wafted from coast to coast.

The demonstration was the best ever held, and broke all previous records, as to the thousands that sampled and enjoyed the excellence of "Melagama," and naturally the delightful and delicious flavor appealed to the multitude, and they were loud in their acclamations

The fact that many comments were heard as to the quality of "Melagama" will undoubtedly assist the dealers who handle this high-grade package tea and coffee, and that they will follow the example of a great many other marchants, and make "Melagama" their leader.

The exhibit of "Melagama" Tea and Coffee, which are being featured by hundreds of Canadian grocers.

Again this year at the National Exhibition was "Melagama" Tea and coffee attractively exhibited and effectively demonstrated at their booth in the manufacturers' Building. This means that the name "Melagama" will have a much greater and wider signficance in the homes of thousands of customers all over the Dominion. The name "Melagama" and the excellent beverages it

LEA'S PICKLES AND CONDIMENTS.

There was no more compact or attractive display in the Manufacturers' Building than that of the pickles, salad dressing and olives manufactured by The Lea's Limited, of Simcoe, Ont.

The Lea's Limited is a somewhat new concern, having been established since 1907, when the business was bought from Mr. Lea. The demand for their goods has increased to such an extent as to warrant the building of a new cement factory on a railroad siding with the most up to date conveniences for handling the product, as well as the employees.

A visitor to the main plant at Simcoe is always struck with the scrupulously clean appearance of the female employees, who wear blue and white striped aprons and white caps; also the precision with which the goods are packed. The Lea's lay particular stress on the flavor of their product, which they have made their slogan.

The factory is situated in a district which has been referred to as the Garden of Canada, some 400 acres being cultivated for vegetable product. It is interesting and surprising to see the great loads of cucumbers, etc., coming into the factory, being automatically sorted and stored for further processing.

As a further evidence of the pride they take in their products, The Lea's, Limited, served thousands of visitors at the Exhibition with their delicious Sweet Pickles and many were the words of appreciation for their appetising flavor.

Exhibit of Kelloggs Toasted Corn Flakes—"The sweetheart of the corn."

KELLOGG'S CORN FLAKES.

At the National Exhibition this year, the Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes Company continued along their same progressive methods that have been of such great assistance to the retail grocer in bringing him a steady and increasing sale for this "the Sweetheart of the Corn." Girls in attractive dresses, blue plaid waists with white aprons and red trimmings, a replica of the popular "Sweetheart of the Corn" posters, demonstrated the particular merits and good qualities of this breakfast food to the throngs that invaded the booth daily.

T. M. Sibbald, 31 Front St. East, is the Toronto agent and was in charge of the exhibit at the Exhibition.

STIMPSON COMPUTING SCALES.

There is only one manufacturer making automatic counter computing scales with a capacity of 100 pounds. That is the Stimpson Computing Scale Co. This is a handsome scale with plate glass platform, low base, electric flash-light attachment if desired, 23 agate bearings and fine enamel finish. That this 100 pound scale is a popular one among grocers is evidenced by the large number that have been placed on the counters of some of Canada's most progressive dealers.

A word should be said about the superiority of the computing scale. A merchant using the old weight and pan scale faces handicaps every day. He has to put a little merchandise back and forth into the package being weighed to get the correct balance. He loses time and money and at the same time creates the impression upon customers that he is close and exacting in his methods.

If a grocer is not careful to balance the old variety of scale correctly, he is giving away goods little by little with every weighing and this is one of the

you have on the scale and also gives at the same time the correct price and value.

At this exhibit in the Industrial Building, the uses and advantages of the Stimpson Scale were demonstated to scores of retail dealers, many of whom left their orders. Stimpson Scales are being used by thousands of grocers all over America, and the great satisfaction given is proof of their superiority. They have realized that money spent on this scale is money wisely invested because of the great saving of time and Exhibit of the Stimpson Scale Co., the only firm to manufacture an automatic hundred pound capacity computing scale.

A feature of this scale is that the computing chart is located always directly in front of the user, so there is no chance of a mistake in computing as on some styles of chart scales. Every dealer should consider this in the purchase of a computing scale. It is exceedingly handy in testing weights of hundred pound sacks or less purchased or sold.

"small" leaks which looms large at the end of the year.

With the Stimpson Automatic Computing Scale this toss is entirely and effectively eliminated. It is never necessary to take anything out of the package being weighed and it is a positive check against the giving of overweight. The Stimpson Automatic Scale shows instantly exactly how much merchandise

The Stimpson Scales are guaranteed to comply with the Weights and Measures laws. They are sold on easy monthly payments without interest or with a liberal discount for cash.

The ocean scene at the background of the "Ocean Blue" exhibit was very attractive. "Linoleo" floor polish and "Gipsy" stove gloss were also shown here.

HARGREAVES BROS. & CO.

"The success I have achieved," once said a shrewd grocer, "is largely attributed to selling goods in which I believe, articles upon whose merits I would stake my reputation, and therefore could safely recommend to customers."

Included in this category would surely be "OCEAN" blue, "GIPSY" stove gloss, and "LINOLEO" floor polish, a strong trio of trade-winners which deserve the attention of every progressive Canadian grocer, and are making astonishing headway wherever introduced. These articles are essentially "quality" specialties, and are heartily recommended to any enterprising merchant who is in business for more business.

Profit and retail prices—not less important than quality—make the handling of "OCEAN" blue, "GIPSY" Stove Gloss and "LINOLEO" Floor Polish worth while. Add to this attractive packages and labels and eye-catching show cards, and it is little wonder that Hargreaves Bros. & Co., Ltd., Hull, England, are finding their specialties daily increasing in popularity with the trade and the consumer.

At their exhibit in the Manufacturers' Annex "OCEAN" Blue demonstrations took place and thousands of people were impressed with its value. A strong selling point for dealers is that it will impart superior snowy whiteness to linens and other white goods, and it contains nothing that could possibly injure the most delicate fabrics. "OCEAN" blue is sold in small cartons and is made up in little bags all ready for immediate use.

"GIPSY" Stove Gloss is put up in two cans under the one cover so that it does not get an opportunity to dry out. A good feature of it is that it will not burn off the stove quickly.

"Linoleo" floor polish is used for polishing hardwood, parquet, stained floors, linoleums, oil cloth, canvas, etc. It will be found a most attractive line to handle as once tried repeat orders are assured.

The booth in which this trio of "Willing Servants" was shown was a most appropriate one for the leader, "OCEAN" Blue. A glance at the illustration shows the ocean background.

Messrs. J. T. Berrington, P. A. Calderhead and R. E. Edwards, the Canadian representatives of Messrs. Hargreaves Bros. & Co., conducted the exhibit during the fortnight. The Ontario agents of the company are Messrs. F. E. Robson & Co., 25 Front Street East, Toronto.

THE DOMINION REGISTER CO.

The accompanying illustration shows how prominently the McCaskey Account Register was exhibited at the great Canadian National Exhibition this year by the Dominion Register Co., of Toronto. Scores of merchants all over the Dominion visited the exhibit, where the value and advantages of the McCaskey Register—undoubtedly the superior of any on the market—were demonstrated. Many old friends dropped in and voiced their satisfaction with the McCaskey, the register that has eliminated the cares and worry attached to operating the old-fashioned daybook, journal and ledger system. The Dominion Register Co. manufacture the McCaskey in their own factory at Toronto and they are also large manufacturers of Counter Check books, both duplicate and triplicate, as well as the celebrated Surety Block Back Counter Check Book, which is clean and gives a perfect copy.

The great value of the McCaskey Account Register lies in the fact that it handles every account with but one writing. Credit sales are made just as rapidly as cash sales. Every time a customer makes a purchase you give him the itemized account of the sale and the total amount owed to date. This is done simply by bringing forward the total of the past account and adding on the amount of last purchase.

With the McCaskey system every customer receives the entire amount owed you, so that your clerks are bound to be correct. It compels them to be careful. You can see instantly what any slow payer owes you, and in five minutes what a hundred good customers owe. You have a record of all money received on account and from whom. With but a few moments work you can tell the amount sold for credit each month to the cent, and the grand total for the year. In short, the McCaskey Register is a collector of accounts. The effort is automatic and satisfactory, obviating unpleasant relations.

A glance at the above advantages of the Dominion Register clearly shows how the dealer can save hours of labor worrying over books, posting up and sending out accounts. When the store closes at six, eight or nine o'clock, at the end of the week or month, every customer has his or her account up to date.

In case of fire, proof of loss can be made instantly and insurance adjusters satisfied absolutely of the amount of stock carried at the time of the fire.

For full particulars of this greatest of all aids to the merchant, write the Dominion Register Company, Ltd., Toronto. The McCaskey is "made in Canada" and its high merits have made its success.

WAGSTAFFE, LIMITED.

As in other years Wagstaffe, Limited, of Hamilton, had one of the most attractive exhibits in the Manufacturers Building. The fine display of pure jams, jellies and preserves was a splendid lesson in window dressing to any grocer, particular about this feature of his selling plan.

"Purity" is the motto of this firm. Wagstaffe, Limited have never manufactured compounds, so that every dealer who purchases their products has confidence in the quality and purity of every jar of fruit he sells a customer. Now that there is a strong agitation on all over the country in favor of the general use of only the purest of foods, the merchant who handles nothing but the best he can buy is building up a permanent and profitable business.

Throngs of people stopped at the booth every day, where demonstrations as to the quality of Wagstaffe products were held. Thousands tasted the delicious flavor of the strawberry and raspberry preserved with all their original flavor. The various lines were shown in glass cases while large jars of particularly tempting fruit were displayed throughout the exhibits.

Retail dealers should know that the Wagstaffe products are prepared in copper kettles and boiled in silver pans in one of the most cleanly and sanitary food factories in Canada. Nothing but rich, ripe fruit is used, and as stated above every line put on the market is guaranteed to be absolutely pure.

There has been a great deal of talk about the scarcity of strawberries this year, and some factories are not filling all their orders. This is not the case with Wagstaffe, Limited. This firm made a special effort to secure sufficient strawberries to permit thm to fill 100 per cent. of orders. To do this in a year of scarcity meant the outlay of considerable money as fruit had to be purchased at high prices. In face of this, prices to the trade are but a fraction above a year ago. A hundred per cent. of raspberry orders is also being delivered.

Here, therefore, are a number of good reasons why Wagstaffe's Fine Old English Jams, Jellies and Preserves should be given special prominence on the shelves of the grocery stores. They are absolutely pure; they contain the original true fruit flavors; they are made in a modern, clean, sanitary factory; they are known all over Canada to the general public and they are backed by the guarantee of the firm which have an enviable record as jam, jelly and preserve manufacturers.

BULL DOG AMMONIA AND BLEACH-O.

The exhibit of the Jno. B. Payne Co. in the Manufacturers' Annex was a centre of attraction for thousands at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Considerable attention was given to the introduction of a new product called "Bleach-O." This preparation, as shown by practical demonstration, instantly removes all kinds of tea, coffee, cocoa or fruit stains from even the most delicate fabrics and bleaches woollen underwear absolutely white in color. Judging from the numerous sales made after each demonstration "Bleach-O" seems to have made a decided "hit."

Over 200,000 samples of "Bull Dog" Ammonia Powder and other Bull Dog specialties were distributed. The company is anxious to co-operate with the trade in pushing their goods. The goods are well advertised, and give the dealer a very substantial margin of profit. The sale of these goods brings satisfied customers back to your store with repeat orders. Many cases can be cited where merchants have built up a very large business in this line of goods by featuring the "Bull Dog" specialties. This advertising will insure an increased demand for these popular lines and the trade should prepare by stocking at once—"Ask your jobber."

Hundreds of dealers have long since recognized the advantages of handling "Bull Dog" Ammonia, and now that so many people at the Exhibition were told of its uses and presented with samples, dealers all over Canada should push it strongly, as it will be readily accepted when offered. With the fall housecleaning campaign now on, large sales can be made right away. It is only necessary to give some special prominence in the window, on the counter and on the shelves to create sales for Bull Dog Ammonia and Bleach-O. There is nothing superior to them for their respective purposes and they are therefore, sure sellers if given some attention and positively will bring repeat orders.

Messrs. Paine & Williams who were in charge of the exhibit, greeted many of the trade from all parts of Canada, and presented each with a dainty souvenir watch fob.

This illustration shows how effectively Bull dog Ammonia and Bleach-O were displayed.

The Red Rose Tea exhibits, where a cup of "good" tea was obtained by thousands.

RED ROSE TEA.

Among the many attractive exhibits in the Manufacturers' Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year that of Red Rose Tea was well to the forefront.

A corps of girls each wearing a red rose served to the many callers sample cups of 40c Red Rose Tea.

The attractively decorated booth, and daintily arranged tables made it a centre of interest which the high quality of the tea served fully justified.

Red Rose Tea has, through its maintenance of a high standard of quality, gained an enviable position among the consumers of Canada, and has given Mr. Estabrooks the respect and confidence of his customers.

This year the firm sent out complimentary tickets to all their customers in Toronto to attend the booth, and many were the friends who gathered there and enjoyed the hospitality extended through the firm's travelers, and those in charge of the booth. Also they had, through the columns of The Canadian Grocer, extended a hearty invitation to all their customers to visit their exhibit. Many thousands took advantage of this, and expressions of appreciation of both the tea and the exhibit were heard on all sides.

As usual, while 5c was charged for a cup of the delicious Red Rose Tea, it was returned to the customer in the form of a coupon worth 5c when purchasing Red Rose Tea, thus insuring to the dealers numerous extra orders for Red Rose. These coupons are redeemed by the company directly or through their travelers.

It was easily seen by the number of orders left at the booth that this means of introducing and further acquainting both the trade and the public with Red Rose worked well. Not only will the sales of dealers handling this line be increased by the added demand for this popular tea, but many who did not stock it before will find it necessary to do so now. The popularity of Red Rose Tea has grown to such an extent that it is now the universal favorite with the tea-drinking public.

MacLAREN'S "IMPERIAL PRODUCTS."

The exhibit of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., in the Manufacturers' Building caused considerable favorable comment, both for its neatness and cleanliness, and also for the taste shown in the decorations in honor of Imperial Year and his Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, and this, being Imperial Year, made "IMPERIAL PRODUCTS" the centre of attraction.

The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., found it necessary, after last year's experience, to increase their demonstrating staff to cope with the crowds of visitors who always seem anxious to taste "IMPERIAL PRODUCTS," which in itself is a sufficient guarantee that the public appreciate their quality.

"IMPERIAL CHEESE," of course, comes first and needs little introduction, as it is known the world over, and the demand for it is steadily increasing at every point to which it is exported.

Perhaps the line which attracted most attention was their latest production, "MacLAREN'S PIMENTO CHEESE."

MacLAREN'S IMPERIAL PEANUT BUTTER was greatly in favor, especially with the children and young people what a tasty and nourishing article of diet this is and what delicious sandwiches it makes.

Mr. W. H. Wilson, Canadian manager of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. was in charge of this exhibit and had the pleasure of meeting many old friends.

This exhibit of MacLaren's Imperial Cheese was a most appropriate one for Imperial year.

The booth where "Knorr's Soups" were shown was decorated with flags of all nations.

KNORR'S SOUPS, ETC.

One of the new exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition this year which deeply interested a number of the visitors was that of "Knorr's Soups" in the Manufacturers Building in a well-located and beautifully constructed booth of solid oak, hung with the flags of all nations, and beautifully draped in Imperial colors in honor of his Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught.

Knorr's ready-made soups in squares or sausage shape (Erbswurst) were entirely new and very interesting to the visitors who called at this booth. Quite a number had been in the habit of using Erbswurst for camping and prospecting, and were much pleased to learn of so reliable a make as Knorr's.

Their soups comprise thirty different varieties, including tomato, and their latest production asparagus, which is becoming extremely popular. A five-cent package of soup will make three platefuls, and of course the grocer's strong talking point is that they are so nourishing and delicious and yet so easily prepared.

This firm is one of the largest, and probably the oldest in the prepared food manufacturing business, having grown from very small dimensions until to-day each of their departments would in itself be considered a large concern, as in addition to soup, squares and soup rolls, they manufacture dried vegetables, Knorr Sos, noodles, Macaroni, Vermicelli, consomme cubes, digestive flours for soups, etc.

This exhibit was in charge of Mr. W. H. Wilson, Canadian manager of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., who are Messrs. C. H. Knorr's Canadian agents.

GORMAN, ECKERT'S "CLUB HOUSE OLIVES.

When a dealer thinks of olives he knows that it is a good profitable line to handle. Olives are sold chiefly among the high-class trade, and the dealer who handles quality olives can be sure of good profit.

One of the most striking exhibits in the Manufacturers' Building was Gorman, Eckert & Co., London, Ont., in which were shown their Club House brands of olives. Everyone was impressed with the massive effect which was produced, of nothing but olives. It fairly made one's mouth water to see so many luscious olives—olives filled to suit the taste of the most particular people, and packed with the same careful attention from the highest priced lines to the smallest package which they turn out. Gorman, Eckert & Co. import only the choicest Seville olives and by careful handling, packing and inspection produce a product of which any firm might be proud.

Club House Brand is the name that the consumer is having impressed upon him. This line consists of olives packed in many different ways, of which the following are a few:—Pimento stuffed, Nutoliv, Banquet Queen, Lunch Queen, Manzanilla, Imperial Mixed (three kinds) California ripe, Celery and Pimento, Celery stuffed, Queen stuffed with Manzanilla.

The Gorman, Eckert Co. was the pioneer in Canada with the olive and still retains its lead by a long stride in the matter of quantity sold and quality of manufactured products. This is because "Club House" brand is the finest produced. Dealers should know and point out to their customers the value of "Club House" olives as food value as well as a delicacy. Their sales should be promoted at all time and their use encouraged by window, counter and shelf display.

G. A. Witmer, of London, was in charge of the exhibit, and he and his assistants were kept busy answering the thousands of questions about olives. Their little booklet "Olive Facts" was eagerly taken by visitors at the booth. This booklet gives many interesting facts in regard to the olive industry, also some receipes for delicious olive dishes, showing that olives produce the finest flavors. These recipes will undoubtedly produce a large number of requests for "Club House" olives.

Club House brands of olives are here shown. They are the finest that can be purchased.

HOLBROOK'S LIMITED.

Those who visited the National Exhibition this year no doubt carried home a mental picture of one exhibit in particular—that of Holbrook's, Limited, in the Manufacturer's Building. Their booth was an outstanding one that no doubt did much to impress the many thousands who passed it daily.

It was built along the line of an English house, bringing out the important feature that the firm has been long established. In fact "Ye House of Holbrook's" was founded in Birmingham, England, in 1798. The various lines of goods sold by the firm were displayed within as well as in display counters at the front.

It was not the booth, however, that they attempted to bring prominently before the people. It's appearance served to attract them, but it was the purity and quality of their goods that was then given prominence by the salesmen in charge. The good points of their products were explained; people were allowed to "taste and try" various lines of goods, and urged when purchasing any of them to "always ask for Holbrook's." That visitors were pleased with their product when they had tried them and had their good points explained is shown by the deluge of orders given at the booth to be delivered through their grocers.

Holbrook's Worcestershire Sauce, now so widely known throughout the world, was one of the chief lines shown. This firm has the largest sauce factory in the world. In Canada it is fast becoming known in every household along with the adopted slogan "Imported Absolutely." Only the purest and best malt vinegar is used in its manufacture and it takes over two years of careful preparation and ageing to produce the rich, mellow, flavor which it possesses.

Holbrook's pure malt vinegar was another line prominently displayed. It also is made in their own breweries on the banks of the River Stour, Worcestershire, England, and they have the reputation of laying claim to the largest vinegar brewery in the world.

Holbrook's pickles, sardines and Punch Sauce, all lines which are making rapid headway in America, were also shown. This, however, does not end the list of goods they sell; for quite important also is their olive oil, renowned for its purity, as well as their cocoa, jellies, custard powder, rice, flour, etc. In fact they are constantly adding new lines to their already extensive array.

Their products are widely and extensively known, for, as shown on their booth, they have offices in London, and Birmingham, England, Toronto, Montreal, Chicago, Cape Town and Sydney.

This beautiful English house, containing display of Holbrook's, Limited, products, was a feature of the exhibits in the Manufacturers' Building.

Display of Borden's Milk—Agent, W. H. Dunn, Toronto.

BORDEN'S MILK PRODUCTS.

That the health of the family depends to no mean extent on the purity of the milk consumed, no wise housewife will gainsay. Borden's Condensed Milk has solved the pure milk problem, and the best grocers everywhere and consumers alike agree on its high standard of purity. For purity, richness and flavor, Borden's Condensed Milk is unequalled and the grocer who does not stock it is overlooking a line which positively guarantees repeats. Still the development in the demand and enormous increase in the output from the factories, go to prove that few dealers have passed it up in preference to any other.

At the Canadian National Exhibition this year again, the Borden Booth, in the Manufacturers' Building, was one of the central attractions, and it is safe to say that the display has gone far towards arousing a further interest which will later be turned into dollars and cents for the dealers' benefit.

The thousands who learned more about Borden's Peerless Evaporated Milk will no doubt see that they are never without it in the household. It is the purest form of milk, and therefore should be found in every home. Gathered under the most sanitary conditions Borden's Milk is simply the pure, fresh milk from the cow, evaporated without anything being added whatsoever. It is rich dairy milk evaporated to a creamy consistency by the Borden superior process. It can be put to all uses of fluid milk when diluted, and dealers should remember it is the only tinned milk that can be used for all the purposes of ordinary cream.

The same high standard of purity is also reached in the St. Charles Evaporated Milk, which, as every dealer knows is now one of the Borden family. Were there any dealers round this booth during any hour of the day they could hardly do anything but wonder at the huge interest the public took in these lines of pure milk in tins.

None the less interesting, though, was the demonstration of Reindeer Coffee, which also must be counted among the Borden products, and dealers can count on a good run on this line as thousands tasted and expressed entire satisfaction in it.

Reindeer coffee is simply a combination of true flavored coffee essence, sugar and cream and one spoonful added to a cup of boiling water is enough to make a delightful cup of coffee. Think how useful this tin must be to the roomer who feels a chill at night, or hunger's nip before retiring, or to the housewife who is not inclined to spend time at the stove or range. Just a spoonful as aforesaid in boiling water and your coffee is ready. The grocer should be able to build up a big trade in this line as Reindeer Coffee is so rich and tasty and always ready by simply adding boiling water, and it should be remembered that when the tin is opened it does not go bad, but retains its full flavor for an indefinite period.

Here are three lines which the dealer should give prominence to on his shelves. He is assured of them being of the highest quality, obtainable. In addition he will be able to sell them much more easily in view of the thousands and thousands who tested them at the Exhibition. Once an article is known to the public and is of a high quality it is easily sold and brings back the repeats which mean permanent success.

Borden's Milk Products are recognized on every hand to be the highest standard available. The universal sale and use of these lines is a point of special stress demonstrating beyond all doubt their superior qualities. They are absolutely pure and unequalled for richness, flavor and general use. Cleanliness is the key note of the manufacture of the milk from the moment it leaves the cow. All milk is carefully examined by fully qualified inspectors as it enters the factory and after inspection is not touched by hand until opened by the purchaser.

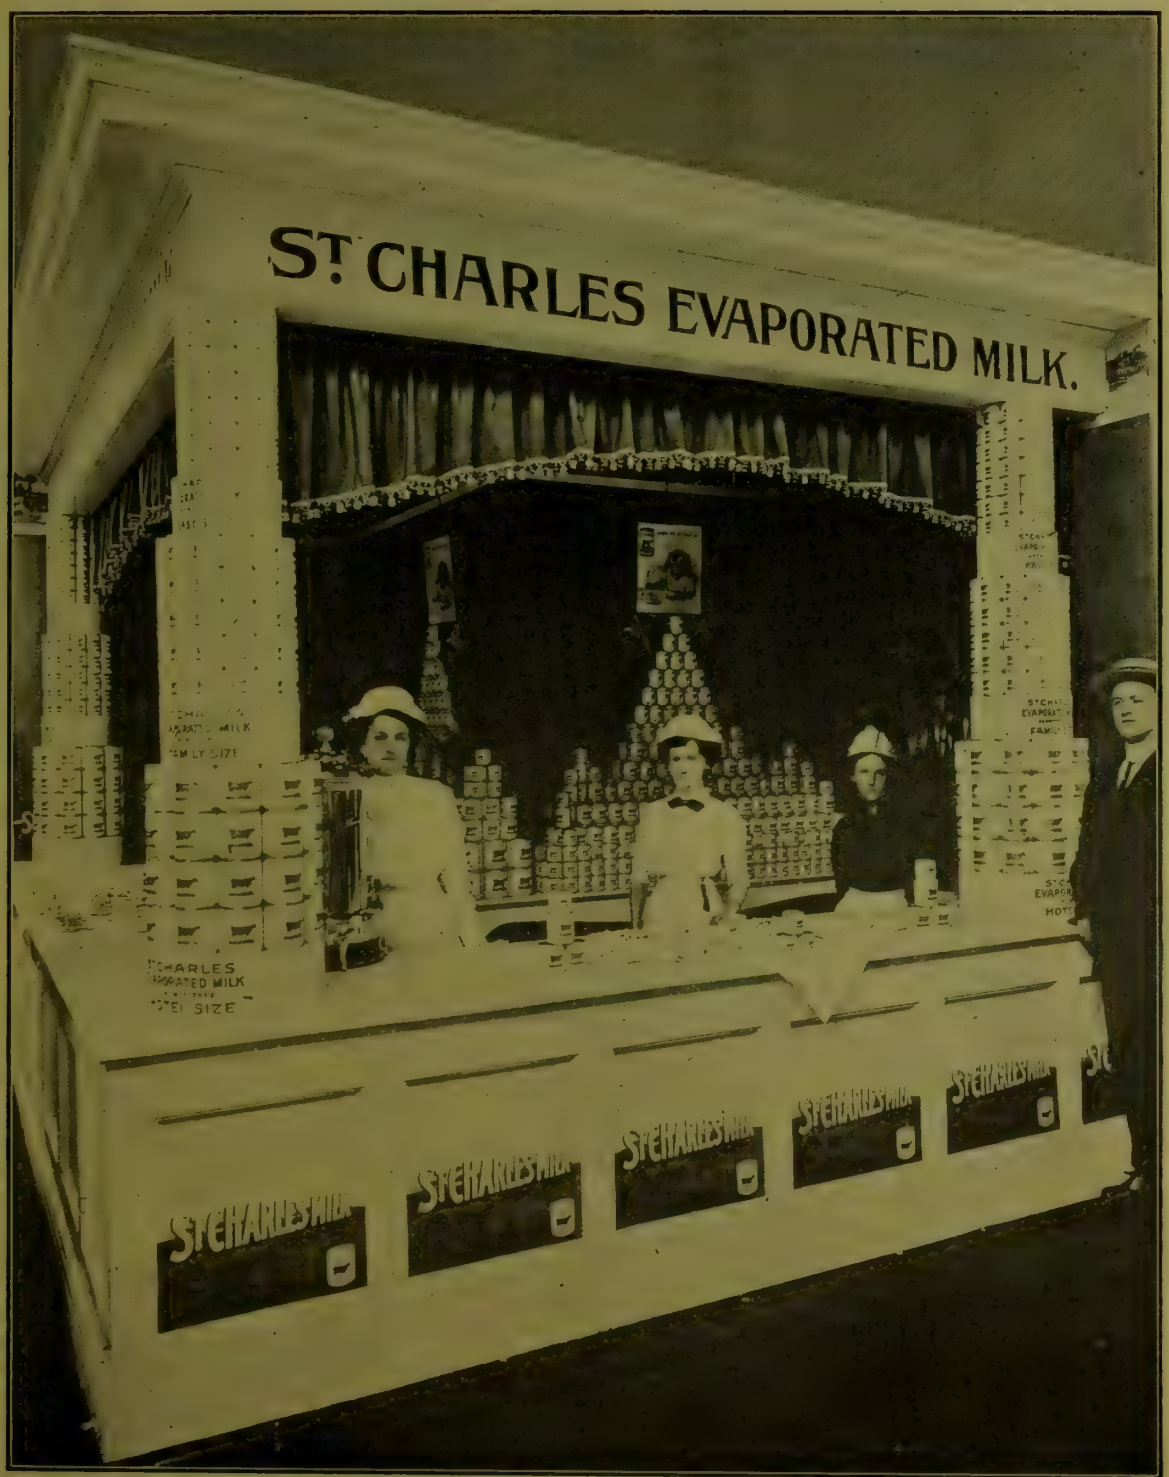

Exhibit of St. Charles Milk—Agents, Dane, Hortop & Co., Toronto.

Exhibit of the T. A. Lytle Co.'s "Sterling" Brand products showed to advantage the qualit y of this firm's goods.

"STERLING BRAND" PRODUCTS.

Retail grocers throughout Canada are rapidly recognizing the merits of Sterling Brand products, so much so, that the large and modernly equipped factory of the T. A. Lytle Co., Ltd., Sterling Road, Toronto, is unable to keep up with the demand, and in order to better take care of their customers, are building an additional 80 feet to their factory. Dealers should, therefore, place their orders as early as possible to meet their respective requirements for the fall and winter trade. The factory is busy putting up this season's pack and as always, only fresh, luscious, carefully selected fruits and vegetables are used, together with the usual discretion as to cleanliness in preparing and packing—this is one of the big points that has brought Sterling brand to the front. The demonstration of sweet pickles at their exhibit at the big National Fair was one of the centres of attraction of the masses during the fortnight of the exhibition. Here many thousands of visitors from all parts of Canada had the opportunity to sample the delicious "Sterling Brand" Sweet Pickles. Supplemented to this introduction of the goods was the distribution of some 35,000 buttons and glass mustard spoons.

Pickles and catsups were the feature of the exhibit though the other lines of the big range and varieties of Sterling Brand goods were also well represented. These included orangeades, lemonades, lime fruit juice, grape and port wines, extracts, crushed fruits, mint sauce, chow chow, white onions, jams, etc.

Everything in fact, about the booth was pleasing and attractive, the background was in purple and white and all the goods were well displayed, and many comments of admiration were expressed. T. A. Lytle & Co's., "Sterling Brand" products are everywhere advertised and this exhibit was just another move on the part of the company to assist the dealer in making the goods still more widely known, and make the sales easier because the goods have already been introduced. The dealer who always keeps a stock of this brand of table delicacies shows good sound business judgment—it takes little talk to make a sale and the demand will last because it is built up on a quality basis and the dealer makes a good profit on his investment.

SNAP COMPANY, LTD.

The accompanying photograph of Snap Company's exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition shows one of the most original advertising ideas seen at the fair this year.

These are not really Snap cans you see but are fac-similes of the cans brought out as a wall paper design. At a little distance the deception is complete, thousands were attracted to the booth where they were told something about Snap.

The exhibit being located at the entrance to the women's building, was visited by multitudes of ladies; in addition, it was a literal Mecca for the army of exhibition attendants in the Manufacturers' Building, some of whom put Snap's cleansing powers to a severe test.

Many thousands from all parts of Canada were "tagged" during the two weeks. The tag consisted of a pasteboard imitation Snap can. These were carried by men, women and children. (25,000 children were tagged on Labor Day alone) and should prove a very forceful advertisement. In addition, those who called were presented with a sanitary drinking cup, which may be folded and carried conveniently in the pocket. The whole exhibition advertising campaign was very carefully planned and most successfully carried out. There will certainly be an increased demand for this already well known antiseptic hand cleaner.

It has a steady sale during the whole year, sells at a popular price and brings the dealer a substantial profit. If you have not already stocked, order from your jobber at once. You will be pleased with results because you will have satisfied customers.

The "Snap" paper on the walls of the "Snap" Hand Cleaner exhibit was an interesting feature.

"NUGGET" SHOE POLISH.

"Nugget" polishes, now a world-wide product, and celebrated for their waterproof qualities were demonstrated in the usual effective manner at the Canadian National Exhibition again this year.

The chief object of their exhibit this year was to demonstrate convincingly to the public that "Nugget" Polish is absolutely waterproof. This was done by actual test, for seeing is believing. A shoe was polished until it showed the usual excellent shine produced by "Nugget." It was then submerged in a dish of water. When removed and wiped off with a cloth, the shine still remained and besides there were no stains on the cloth.

This shows that it will do no harm to clothing. Another feature is that "Nugget" Polishes are frost proof, and will not dry out while in stock. These are all points which have assisted in making "Nugget" a public favorite and can be used to good effect by the dealer in pushing their sale.

The slogan adopted this year was "When you buy shoe polish say "Nugget." Souvenirs were given with every tin, and a shine given gratis to visitors. The company sell "Nugget" black, tan and paste, white cleaner, creams, harness polish and "Nugget" furniture paste, all of which allow the dealer an attractive basis of profit.

The "Nugget" polish exhibit, where thousands were shown the high quality of this polish.

PUTZ CREAM AND SILVA PUTZ POLISHES.

Mr. B. A. Burke, the popular sales manager of the American Metal Polish Co., of West Somerville, Mass., was again in charge of the company's exhibit on "Polish Avenue" in the Industrial Building.

Putz Cream Metal Polish and Silva Putz silver polish have stood the test of competition for over thirty years, and are to-day unsurpassed. Putz Cream is free from acid, and gives a quick lasting polish to all metals Silva Putz is guaranteed to polish all kinds of silver, gold, jewelry, cut glass, etc. It contains nothing that will scratch or injure in any way, and being in paste form is very economical to use.

Samples of each of the company's products were put in neat pasteboard boxes and distributed to thousands. The company received many unsolicited testimonials from those who received samples in previous years, and have been since using the goods for various purposes.

"Putz" polishes were introduced to many who took samples, and who were referred to their retail grocer for further supply. Many grocers report that they are already feeling the effects of this method of advertising and are ordering increased stock in anticipation of a very brisk fall trade.

Display of the Litster Pure Food Co. Note how prominently the Litster mark stands out.

LITSTER PURE FOODS.

The significance of the trademark of the Litster Pure Food Co., was hammered home to the thousands of people who visited and passed their attractive exhibit in the Manufacturers' Building. Every day for two weeks, a steady stream of humanity saw the demonstration of Litster lines arranged in appealing array, and representing the mark that always stands for and guarantees food purity and satisfaction. Among the lines shown were Litster's jelly powders, extracts, spices, puddings, icings, gelatine and baking powders.

The success of Litster products has been due to a careful, close study of the chemistry of food by the men behind and the resulting superior excellence and satisfaction they have always given.

The retail dealer of to-day who is intent on business-building for the future knows the folly of handling and pushing goods that have no reputation and cannot be depended upon. This is just where foods bearing the Litster mark excel. They are the result of years of study in producing the highest quality and they can be positively and absolutely guaranteed to the consuming public.

At the exhibition, attractive informative and recipe booklets were given away to assist in making the Litster mark and products better known to thousands of Canadian homes. This is bound to aid the retail dealer who stocks and gets behind these goods with his selling power.

Purity in foods is one of the most talked of questions in household circles to-day. People are realizing the inadvisability of purchasing and using cheap, inferior, unwholesome food products. They know such are injurious to health and in the long run prove expensive. Every department of the Litster Pure Food Co.'s factory is surrounded with the same clean and wholesome conditions as a well-kept store or home. There can be no question as to the purity and cleanliness of Litster foods, because the work is clean by system with superior facilities and carefully trained helpers to carry it out.

The work that Litster Pure Food Co. are doing to impress on the public the high character of their goods and the co-operation they are showing the dealer, will certainly mean more sales, more satisfaction, and more profit to the merchant who stocks and displays prominently the Litster lines. The trade mark itself, standing for purity and satisfaction, will be a big feature in creating sales.

H. P. SAUCE.

The well-known products of the Midland Vinegar Company were again prominently and well exhibited at the National Exhibition this year. Demonstration of H. P. Sauce, H. P. Malt Vinegar and H. P. Pickles was again carried on and without doubt will result in a still greater increase in the sales for this sauce. This accounts for it's increasing sales.

It might be well to explain the meaning of the letters "H. P.," This sauce is used continually on the dining tables of the Canadian and British Houses of Parliament, hence the title. It is a high class appetizing sauce, possessing great digestive properties, and if a gallon is allowed to leave the factory until it is twelve months old. This gives it a uniform quality and adds a mellowness that is essential of the best vinegar.

The H. P. Pickle prepared from the choicest ingredients is a delicious appetizer, as all who have used it know. It, as well as the sauce, was served to of these lines, which have met with such great success in Canada.

This illustration shows how exceedingly attractive the exhibit of H. P. Sauce and Midland Vinegar looked.

The popularity of all their lines must indeed be pleasing to the manufacturers and agents. H. P. Sauce takes first place with the public, and is quite a household word throughout Canada. Various titles have been given to the two intials "H. P." by the public. "Hungry People" is one of these, and there is no denying the fact that people who have once used it are really hungry customer wants a really good sauce, the grocer should readily recommend H. P.

Nearly as well-known and advancing by leaps and bounds is Midland Pure Malt Vinegar. Perhaps no better recommendation could be given it than that it is used in the manufacture of both the sauce and the pickle. It's purity and mature age is winning public favor. It might be well to mention that two million gallons of Midland Vinegar is kept stored in Birmingham, and not a thousands who visited the booth during the exhibition. That the public were favorably impressed is shown by the large number of orders which were left for the goods, both by householders and grocers. Besides serving these lines, thousands of samples of the celebrated H. P. Sauce were distributed to visitors.

Exhibit of the Canada Sugar Refining Co., the Canadian pioneer in the sugar business.

REDPATH SUGAR EXHIBIT.

One of the entirely new features of the National Exhibition this year was the striking exhibit of the famous "Redpath" Sugar, made by the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Limited, of Montreal.

It was only to be expected that this company should be the first to exhibit at the Fair, as they have been the pioneers of the sugar business in Canada from the beginning. Their's was the first granulated sugar produced in the Dominion, and last year introduced the latest improvement, the two pound and five pound sealed cartons.

These attractive looking cartons were much in evidence in their exhibit, and made a fine showing. The big sign over the booth flashing forth "Redpath Sugar —The Canadian Standard since 1854," the striking photograph of the big Redpath Refinery in Montreal, and the samples of different sugars on exhibition made the Redpath Booth exceedingly interesting to every man, and more particularly to every woman.

The demonstrator made very clear the superiority of "Redpath" sugars, illustrating it with samples. The pure crystal whiteness of Redpath, when compared with ordinary white sugar, must have been an eye-opener to those who had been in the habit of accepting the ordinary kind.

The two pound and five pound cartons naturally attracted a great deal of attention, and the comments made must have been gratifying to those in charge. One could not help seeing the great advantage in buying sugar, as one buys tea, spices, breakfast foods and so many other groceries, in sealed cartons, which protect it from contamination of any kind. The cartons are very convenient, too, for keeping the sugar in the pantry.

The unanimous approval expressed by the thousands of visitors to the booth promised a demand for "Redpath" Package Sugar much greater even than at present, which means a great deal, for the cartons have sprung into popular demand almost overnight.

When Canada's finest sugar is thus put up in the most attractive way, and vigorously advertised, it simply cannot fail to be a splendid success. Grocers who feature "Redpath" Sugar are enjoying a most satisfactory trade, and those who have not previously paid much attention to "Redpath" are waking up to its possibilities.

Exhibit of the scale that has "no springs" and gives "honest weight"—the Toledo.

Fine display of "2 in 1" Shoe Polish shown by F. F. Dalley & Co., Ltd., of Hamilton.

TOLEDO COMPUTING SCALES.

"Do you know what scale you just got weighed on?" asked The Canadian Grocer scribe of a man who was moving away from the booth of the Toledo Computing scale Co., where he had just been weighed on the big automatic scale — the only one of its kind in the world.

"Why, yes, the Toledo, and I am going to see if our grocer uses the Toledo when I get home. A person can certainly be sure of honest weight when they are used. Mr. Collins has just been explaining their good points to me and I can see plainly why every grocer should use them." Just then The Canadian Grocer bumped into a merchant who was leaving the booth with a happy smile on his face. He had just purchased a Toledo scale, and was happy in the thought of the money it was going to save him.

He was not the only one either for the number of scales sold by the Toledo Co. at their booth in the Manufacturer's Building this year was simply astonishing, demonstrating beyond doubt that the Toledo is the recognized standard. An extensive variety of models were shown up to good effect in their finely decorated booth. One model which attracted particular attention was an electric Toledo which besides lighting up the scale when weight is placed on it, also by an electric attachment lights up signs which may be placed at different positions of the store. These signs may be changed by the merchant whenever he desires and have an appreciable advertising value. Another new model shown was a counter computing-scale with 105 pound capacity.

The Toledo Scale played an important part at the Exhibition. Thousands of people were weighed free of charge at the booth and impressed that Toledo works for honest weight. A Toledo scale also weighed the babies at the Baby Show and was used in official tests of fruits. They are the recognized standard.

TWO IN ONE POLISH.

F. F. Dalley & Co., Ltd., had an excellent exhibit of their famous "2 in 1" shoe polish in the Process Building at the National Exhibition this year in their usual effort to make their product better known throughout the continent, and thus help the grocer to sell this polish that gives "the shine that won't rub off."

Actual demonstration is the best method of convincing the public of the good quality of an article and this was the method used at this booth. During the whole Exhibition a free shine was given to anyone who wished it. The superior qualities of "2 in 1" were thus hammered home in a convincing manner, and people were urged when buying shoe polish to get "2 in 1" if they really want the best. Samples were distributed for visitors to take home with them.

"2 in 1" is quite appropriately named, for, as the name implies it does the work of both a cleaner and a polish. It contains no turpentine and can be recommended by the dealer for the finest of leather.

There is no doubt that the demonstration given at the Exhibtion this year will still further increase the fame of "2 in 1" polish, already so widely and favorably known. This will mean more business for the dealer who handles and pushes "2 in 1."

jellied meats, canned meats, lard and shortening, eggs, butter, cheese and dressed poultry. Gunn's, Limited, make a feature of paying special attention to the developing demand for the very highest class of food products. Gunn's Maple Leaf hams and bacon are from specially selected hogs. Every hog won't do for the Maple Leaf brand. Only about one out of every twenty is chosen. Their cure is exclusive, the rich juices and all nutriment of the ham and bacon being retained.

Inquiries for Gunn's Quality Wafer more appetizing display at the Exhibition than Gunn's cooked meats. Their Produce Department, too, has developed wonderfully. The three well-known brands of butter, Gunn's Brand, Pon Honor and Willowdale are the acme of butter manufacturing. They put up also Gunn's "Fancy New Laid" marked egss in specially attractive cartons, every egg guaranteed.

Gunns control the "Cooked Roulette" brand of roast and boiled ham which was originally put on the market by them and now registered.

Gunn's "Pon Honor" Food Products display in the Dairy Building.

GUNN'S "PON-HONOR" PRODUCTS.

There is no firm doing more to raise the standard of its manufactured products than Gunn's, Limited, the widely known packers and refiners of West Toronto. Their good work was well demonstrated at the Canadian National Exhibition, where they had three fine exhibits—one in the Dairy Building, a second in the Manufacturers', and a third in the Horticultural.

In the Dairy Building were shown their fresh and cured meats, cooked and Sliced Breakfast Bacon are coming in every day. It is put up in handsome cartons of one pound net. In fact, Gunns are now selling lard, Easefirst Shortening, Breakfast Bacon and Gunn's Quality Sausages in cartons, a feature, judging from the remarked demand appeals to the consumer from a sanitary point of view. The general public are realizing more and more the value of clean, sanitary foodstuffs, and none better than "Pon-Honor" products can be recommended them. There was certainly no

This progressive firm are also going into canned meats. They will soon put on the market Gunn's pork and beans, plain and in tomato and Chili sauce, potted ham and tongue, corned beef, roast beef, jellied hock and brawn, in all different sizes. The labels are especially attractive and with the well known Gunn's quality large sales of these lines can be confidently expected.

In the Manufacturers' Building a number of young ladies were kept busy during the two weeks demonstrating Easifirst Shortening, Quality Mincemeat and Quality Cooking and Salad Oils. The orders booked for delivery through grocers for these articles in both city and throughout the country were very numerous and far beyond expectations of the company. In fact they extended as far west as Vancouver. The two- pound tins in which the Quality Cooking and Salad Oils are put up is very attractive and the only one of the kind put up in Canada.

In the Horticultural Building, Gunn's exhibit showed many lines which every merchant should introduce to his farmer customers, especially Gunns' Shur-Crop Fertilizers, Shur-Gain Stock and Poultry Foods; all of which have made exceedingly rapid progress since placed on the market.

Gunns, Limited, are a purely Canadian firm of 40 years standing. The company neither own nor control any retail stores, confining themselves strictly to the trade. The wonderful growth of the business may be attributed to this progressive and independent policy. They are represented by brokers in all the larger cities in Eastern and Western Canada, while their selling staff of 48 salesmen look after the Toronto and Ontario trade.

Where "Mapleine" with the "flavor de luxe" was shown. "Mapleine" is an exclusive concentrated flavoring.

MAPLEINE DEMONSTRATION.

One of the newest and most attractive displays at the Exhibition was that of Mapleine—"the flavor de luxe." Its sales have developed wonderfully in Canada because it is an article that brings customers back for more. It is an exclusive concentrated flavoring to be used in everything from a soup to a custard. It is used for flavoring cakes, candies, bon bons, ice cream, nut bread, icing, blanc mange, jelly and for making delicious Mapeline syrup—a two-ounce bottle of Mapeline makes two gallons of syrup.

"Mapleine" is not a substitute for, not an imitation of maple, but an original, pure and wholesome preparation of roots and herbs producing a rich creamy flavor that is better than the real maple itself. It is guaranteed under the pure food laws of America to be absolutely pure and free from all injurious ingredients.

It is favored by the housewife and caterer because the flavor will not cook out of pastry and because it is impervious to atmospheric changes. It will not freeze and is not spoiled by heat; neither is it volatile.

These are some of the strong selling points for "Mapleine" and they can be used effectively by the grocer anxious to increase his trade. To assist in acquainting the housewife with "Mapleine," thousands of recipe books entitled "Mapleine Dainties and How to Make Them" were given away at the demonstration booth. The courteous attendants also distributed thousands of samples of sugar and syrup made from Mapleine. The exhibit was the first shown by the Crescent Mfg. Co., at the Canadian National Exhibition and it undoubtedly created a great deal of interest which will help the grocer to increase his sales.

Samples and all information can be secured from the agents, F. E. Robson & Co., 25 Front street east, Toronto, and Mason & Hickey, Winnipeg.

NATIONAL CASH REGISTERS.

National Cash Registers were demonstrated at the Exhibition in the Manufacturers' Building to scores of visiting merchants. The practical advantages of the cash register and the necessity for it in the store were brought home to them through actually seeing for themselves the registers in operation.

However, other store equipment may be regarded, there is no question that the National Cash Register is an absolute necessity to every keen business man. The installation of a cash register is one of the best investments a merchant can make. It relieves his mind of numerous details, some of which are bound to be forgotten. It shows him exactly amount of cash and credit sales each day, amount of money received on account, and amount of money paid out. It prevents by the "get a receipt" plan, the merchant or his clerks forgetting sometimes to charge goods sold on credit. It shows the amount of sales made each day by each clerk; it increases the efficiency of each clerk through friendly rivalry, and it gives an additional inexpensive advertising medium through the receipt, which is most beneficial in times of special sales.

The advantages gained from this knowledge, protection and advertising are great. They enable the merchant to check up his business from time to time and thereby eliminate the weak and develop the strong points.

The old cash drawer under the desk is but a relic of by-gone days. More money has been lost by the average dealer who has used this method for any length of time, than would pay for a National Cash Register two and three times over. Forgotten charges and cash losses of all kinds would be surprising if they could only be known.

The Cash Register enables the merchant to KNOW and does not ask him to GUESS things. With the National Cash Register he knows which clerk is most valuable to the business; he knows whether one or another is entitled to the "raise," requested or not. He prevents mistakes and losses by knowing who makes mistakes, and he develops the greatest efficiency of the clerks by knowing what each is doing.

The exhibit demonstrated that various sizes and types of registers are made by the National Cash Register Company, to suit any business. Any one of them would be a handsome acquisition to the store in addition to their great practical value, and the dealer who has not yet installed a "National" should not delay getting fullest particulars and information. The head office for Canada is at 285 Yonge street, Toronto, and their Canadian factory is in the same city.

N.C.R. KINEMACOLOR MOVING PICTURES MADE A BIG HIT.

Another "exhibit" of the company in a separate building just south of the Art Building scored heavily for the company at Toronto Exhibition. Fitted up as a lecture hall, with seats and music, hundreds of people were entertained with the hourly "shows" of colored moving pictures and slides showing the rise and development of the wonderful plant and now world-wide business of the N.C.R. Co. Of wonderful interest were the pictures showing the company's "well fare" work, how by means of flowers, gardens, country clubs, classes, sports and libraries the company is seeking to make better men and women of its employes—which insensibly re-acts on their product and means better Registers for the world's merchants.

The beautiful house exhibit of the well known O. K. Sauce and Pickle.

O. K. SAUCE AND PICKLE.

If there was any booth at the National Exhibition this year worthy of the favorable comments bestowed upon it, it was that of Mason's O. K. Sauce and Pickle in the Manufacturers' Building.

The construction of the exhibit was unique, to say the least and attracted a great deal of attention. It was in the form of a small cottage surrounded by a plot of grass. Inside, there was a table daintly set for four persons, two of the articles of diet prominently shown on it being O. K. Sauce and O. K. Pickle. Samples of the sauce were distributed to thousands of people and the high quality of both lines pointed out by those in charge.

O. K. Sauce is an absolutely pure and delicious condiment calculated to create and promote digestion. One of the strong points emphasized by the manufacturers is the purity which is absolutely guaranted.

O. K. Pickle is the other condiment of the same firm. The company when placing O. K. Pickle on the market confidently looked to a large sale and their anticipations have been more than realized. The trade can recommend this pickle to customers as something quite distinct from the ordinary variety.

O. K. Sauce and Pickle made many more friends at the National Exhibition. They are manufactured by Geo. Mason & Co., Limited, of London, Eng. The Turnbull Co., Winnipeg, are the Dominion agents.

Exhibit of the Cowan Co. Iced and hot cocoa was served here, making it one of the busiest in the Manufacturers' Building.

COWAN'S COCOA AND CHOCOLATE.

"Music hath charms to sooth the savage breast"—but, oh, it was hot out there in the sun, listening to even such music as the Scots Guards Band can pour forth. Leaving my seat, therefore, to be eagerly seized upon by some weary bystander, I made my way to where I knew could be obtained the coolest and most delightful refresher in the whole Exhibition — Iced Cocoa. Struggling through the dense crowds in the Manufacturers' Building, I at last arrived at the Cowan Exhibit. No wonder the half dozen assistants were as busy as bees serving the constant demand for "Iced Cocoa." Surely it was inspiration for this well-known Canadian firm to put that all-satisfying and refreshing beverage—Perfection Cocoa—before us at the Exhibition in ice cold form. I managed to get my order placed, and how good it was to feel the well-known friend of breakfast and supper time trickling in an icy stream down one's parched throat. So different to many of the Fair drinks, some of which seem to be only temporary thirst-quenchers, and to give one a greater thirst than ever before long.

Mothers — with their eager offspring round them—were a strong feature of the patrons of the Cowan Exhibit. Most of the children seemed to know what was good just as well as the little Cowan boy and his genial grandpa, whose faces smile at us from the newspapers and billboards. Certainly they were as keen on the Maple Buds—and why shouldn't they be. Pure milk, pure sugar, pure chocolate, as the buds are, cannot harm the kiddies. Another sweetmeat in great demand was "Almond Nut Bar"—Milk Chocolate. This is the latest Cowan delicacy. I tried a bar and found it excellent. The nuts tasted fresh and the milk chocolate was really good, making a delightful confection. Noah's Arks were there, whose animals went in two by two, but would come out one by one, to enter the waiting mouth of some happy child; for were they not made of chocolate?

Flanking the booth were huge chocolate models of donkeys—source of wonder and delight to the young folk. Milk chocolate in sticks—Maple Buds—Medallions—and every other kind of chocolate —in small dainty packages or the most artistic boxes, were being sold at a great rate. In fact, for variety the Cowan stand was a Chocolate and Cocoa Exhibition of itself.

What lent added zest to the spending of their nickels and dimes was the fact that every child received some novelty with its purchase as a momento of this: Canada's Record Exhibition.

The Cowan Company must have been intensely gratified at this extraordinary demonstration of the popularity of their goods. To have so constant a demand from all classes of people, old and young, means that their policy of high class manufacturing methods, coupled with the use of only the choicest Cocoa Beans, is the right one.

The Cowan factory, situated in Toronto, is one of the finest Cocoa and Chocolate manufacturing plants on the continent, and—what must be very satisfactory to the patriotic purchaser — the Cowan firm is a purely Canadian firm. Their policy of making only the highest quality of goods has placed them in an enviable position with the people of Canada. The Grocer bespeaks long continued prosperity to this aggressive concern.

SYMINGTON'S SOUPS.

The demonstrators at the Symington booth deserve great credit for the courteous and generous manner in which they distributed thousands of dishes of delicious soup to the eager spectators, and thereby added a multitude of friends to the already lengthy list of users in Canada of these high quality soups. Symington's soups and table delicacies are MADE IN ENGLAND and sold extensively throughout the British Empire. They are used in the House of Lords and in the House of Commons.

Symington's soups have a very big sale with hundreds of Canadian grocers because of their merits. They are put up in concentrated form in nine different varieties. A full quart can be made from every package, while the cost is only 10 cents. The simple manner in which they are prepared for use is another strong reason why they have met and are meeting with such universal favor. As Ellen Terry says, "I find them delicious they always give satisfaction."

The packages in which Symington's soups are sold are very attractive in color, design and size and these all assist the dealer to sell them readily. Messrs. Symington & Co., are a firm which gives every co-operation to the dealer by manufacturing high quality soup, putting them up attractively, assisting to get them to the consumer by demonstrations such as were given at the Exhibition, and last but by no means least, by allowing the dealer a good margin of profit.

A large number of very ingenuous puzzles were given away at the booth which were responsible for familiarizing the name of Symington with thousands of visitors. The agents, F. E. Robson & Co., 25 Front street East, Toronto, have a special offer for the trade in this regard and any grocer who did not visit the booth should write them at once. Take this opportunity of sending for samples of Symington's Soups if you have not already stocked them.

The "Symington Soups" display. The picture of Ellen Terry, who says that these soups "also give satisfaction," is conspicuous.

Products of the West Indies Exhibited

Various British Islands Well Represented—Raw Sugar, Molasses, and Rum Among the Interesting Exhibits—St. Vincent Arrowroot Also Shown.

In referring to the many splendid and interesting exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, a word or two must be said of those from our sister colony, the British West Indies. Products of the various Isles were shown in the new Government Building and as they were not so familiar to Canadians as wheat, oats and potatoes and apples, the exhibit was a Mecca for the thousands of visitors.

The British West Indies include British Guiana, Trinidad, Grenada, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Barbadoes, Dominica, Montserrat, Antigua, Bermuda, Jamaica, St. Kitts and many others.

As everyone knows the most important product of West Indies is sugar and it is probably the most important line handled by the wholesale and retail grocer in view of its extensive sale. Sugar in both the raw and refined state was shown. With its by-products, molasses and rum, the total value of sugar produced by the British West Indies amounts to some $14,800,000 per annum. Sugar cane growing and manufacturing into raws, forms the chief industry in British Guiana, Barbadoes, Antigua and St. Kitts.

Cacao, lime juice, cotton, bananas, oranges, grape fruit are the leading products in other islands, all of which were represented in the exhibit.

The St. Vincent Arrowroot Growers' and Exporters' Association were also represented, the exhibit of arrowroot being a particularly interesting one because of its increased demand. In addition to above there were coffee, nutmegs, spices, sweet potatoes, cocoanuts, etc.

The West Indies exhibits were in charge of Mr. Pickford, of Pickford & Black Steamship Co., which operates between St. John and Halifax to the Islands.

Retail Grocery Exhibits at the Fall Fair

First Prize Display Shown Last Year at Collingwood—Advantages of Such An Exhibit —Creates An Individuality For the Store Showing It.

That the Fall Fair presents a splendid opportunity for grocers to do some special and effective advertising is recognized by many. Now that the season is with us again, dealers should give some consideration to this matter and arrange if possible to have displays of the goods they sell, on the grounds.

The illustration shown herewith represents the exhibits of E. Fawcett, at the Great Northern Exhibition in Collingwood in 1911. It won first prize.

An exhibit of this character is sure to increase sales. It gives the house a reputation that will last. The words "Pure Food Grocery" is a strong drawing card in these days when wholesome food sold under the most sanitary conditions is demanded. The array of food products in this booth is one that reflects credit on the proprietor. It is attractive, inviting and compelling.

And why should not the retail grocer take advantage of the Fall Fair as well as the manufacturer? The retail dealer should strive just as much as the manufacturer to create an individuality about his store that would give him a reputation for selling good goods.

Those dealers who exhibit at Fall Fairs should pay particular attention to two things. They should first have an attractive display of good foods and they should have an expert demonstrator in charge.

An exhibit by a retail grocer which took first prize at a Fall Fair last year.

A fruit display which will attract considerable attention.

An attractive method of showing vegetables.

A display of this nature would pay for a week-end sale.

Auto Delivery Experience of 15 Months

A Dealer who Has Given It Fair Trial Is Satisfied with Results—What Two Machines Have Done— Cost of Maintenance and How It Has Been Reduced—A Limit To What Any Machine Will Do.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

In these pages, on May 12, 1911, I detailed the circumstances that led to my purchasing two automobiles to take the place of three horse-drawn wagons. I outlined a program on which I had based the purchase. After upwards of 15 months' experience, I am so satisfied with what I have got out of machines, that I have bought another. I am moved to write up what I have done particularly by a review of various opinions which I recently read, one of which ended with the statement that the writer felt he was out just about $1,000 during the past year because he had gone into automobiles.

Big Demand for Chauffeurs.

Shortly after I bought my machines, circumstances compelled me to leave my store and turn the management over to another. Our town has gone almost altogether to motor cars during the past three years or so, hence there was great scarcity of drivers a year ago. Almost anybody who thought he could "drive a car," could get a job on his own terms. That is, he could get $12.00 to $15.00 a week; and he could demand the services of a "helper" to ride with him and do all the work except simply drive the car and give it such "expert" attention and care as he felt fully capable of giving it.

Our town has one strict ordinance against leaving the car unless the engine is stopped. The cranking of the machine is somewhat hard; and it was therefore easy to convince an inexperienced owner that the "chauffeur" could not run the car and deliver too. I had some ideas on this subject my self, but, as stated, I had to leave so soon that I had no opportunity to work any of them out. Add to all this, that many of our streets were badly cut up for new pavement and that the winter was one of exceptional severity, and you have a combination that it was truly hard to beat.

Went Through the Deep Snow.

To judge from reports I got, the expense was terrible and the worry past understanding. The cars seemed to be in the shop most of the time. It looked like they would be a pile of junk at the end of the first year. They were, and are— air-cooled cars, with high wheels, so they did not freeze up and they did go through the snow—20 to 28 below zero and plenty of snow, if you will remember. Many days the engines were started at eight a.m., and ran without one stop until 6.30 p.m., or so—which was some test of endurance, if you stop to think of it.

So it was when I returned and took hold again, sixty days ago. Since then I have been doing a few things.

Cost of Maintenance.

My first investigation into Facts not fancies, revealed the facts that the cost of repairs had been $15 per month, per car; and gasoline and other supplies had run up to $20. So it had cost me $35 per month each car, or $70 per month for the two. Next I found that the cars had run in places and circumstances where horses could hardly have gone at all. Then I found that they had done the work of four single horse wagons. Basing the drivers and helpers on two to the car, I had the same number of employees on that work that I should have had on four wagons at about the same average pay, so that played even. Figure it out for youdself and see how the expense compared.

Drivers' Expenses Cut Down.

But I was doing better than that, for during the year many more men had become educated to run cars, so I could readily get all the good help I wanted. Then those men had found it less easy to get work, because the men had come along faster than the new cars had come into service, so they had suddenly discovered that they were perfectly willing to run the cars and also deliver; thus, two good, bright boys, at $12 and $13 per week respectively, were— and are— running the two cars, and delivering the goods, unless on such big loads as it pays me to give them helpers to get the work done speedily.

So it looked to me as if I were already getting the cars run at less expense than four horses would cost and at not more than 60 per cent. of the wages cost of four drivers.

What the Repairs Had Done.

But the repairs were still too high— needlessly so, it seemed to me—and there was the question of what was the real condition of the cars themselves; that is, whether the abuse to which they had been subjected throughout the formative period had not in fact made the depreciation a prohibitive charge. So I got busy to satisfy myself on that head. Here I was again pleasantly surprised. For I found that the heavy repairs had operated to actually replace such parts as had been broken or shaken loose, and a moderate overhauling would really put the cars into condition to run probably for four or five years more, with such ordinary good care as greater experience on the part of the drivers would enable me to get.

So, when the smoke had all cleared away, I concluded that my investment of $1,500 had been a good one. Then I proceeded to buy another car of a somewhat later model, but still of the same make and kind, a little more substantial in build, for $850. Now I am having all the cars put into first class shape, cleaned up, painted and made like new, preparatory for the winter of 1912-13. Moreover, I have instituted a system of routine care of the cars which up to date has reduced my repair bills to about 10 per cent. of what they had been; and, with the new car to work in for changing around, I believe I can reduce that item of repairs to such little things as are entailed by a horse picking up a nail, or dropping a shoe. So I feel that I am excellently fixed for the future and am well pleased with my delivery outfit. Add to this that I can use three fine cars on busy days, and I have reason, indeed, to feel completely satisfied with my experience.

The Routine Details.

Next week I shall give you full details of the daily routine of which I have spoken, for it deserves a separate article. Meantime I want to outline some of the points on which we should think before we jump to hasty conclusions on this automobile question.

First, we are in a transition stage in this matter of motor delivery. We shall have some troubles; but they are new troubles and are therefore liable to seem more puzzling than old ones to which we have become accustomed through long years of familiarity. For instance; we have had a horse die of colic, and have looked upon the loss as one of those things which "cannot be helped" in our business. We have had a nice little mare step into a manhole and break her ankle—had to be shot. That was an "act of God" and must be borne with. Let us offset these old things with some of the new ones and we shall get on better—also lose less sleep.

A Limit to Everything.

Second, just because a motor car is made to run, it is not well to conclude that it will always run automatically, No horse will do that. No locomotive ever goes out on a run until it has been completely overhauled from the previous run; and even then it sometimes gives out. Yet locomotives have been found economical as a general proposition. Years ago, railroad men used to take some chances with locomotives; but they found it was expensive to do so. We have long known that it is expensive to take chances with horses. Let us give the auto a chance by being just a little bit careful and foresighted with it.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Third, do not blame the boys. Look into things and plan a little bit yourself. You can hardly expect a young man to "take an interest" in a machine you neglect entirely yourself.

Effect of Weather on the Western Crops

Report From Edmonton States Wheat is All Ready to be Cut —Quality Likely to be Better Than Last Year — Insuffiient Harvesters a Handicap—Wet Weather Delay Helped Twine Supply.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. .—Since writing last the West has been experiencing a period of very wet weather which has very seriously retarded harvesting operations. In this northern country the grain is nearly all ready to cut but on account of the heavy downpour it has been almost impossible for the farmers to make any headway. The grain that is uncut is, so far, the best off, there having been few heavy rainstorms or hail to injure it, while that in the shock, on account of the continued damp, is beginning to grow, and unless the weather continues fine as it is today very much of it will be seriously injured.

Hope for Quantity and Quality.

However, there is no very widespread damage done yet, and if the weather takes up now the yield will be good both in quantity and quality.

Through the West generally the reports are very conflicting as to the amount of damage done, but the prevailing opinions of those best able to judge are that although harvesting and threshing have been seriously retarded by the wet weather there is so far no great cause for alarm, but it is admitted that a continuation of present conditions for a week or ten days longer will have very serious results, and both farmers and business men through the whole West are feeling very anxious about the general situation. Had it not been for the wet spell threshing would now have been in full swing, and large quantities of grain would be finding its way to the lake ports.

Farm Laborer Question Serious.

The help question is a serious one at many points, not enough harvesters having come from the east this season to supply the demand.

The binder twine supply is lately more plentiful, large quantities having been shipped in from Chicago and other points. The delay caused by the wet weather was a big factor in relieving the situation. If it had not been for this the shortage would have been acute.

A FINE OF $20,000.

The American Sugar Refining Company has been ordered by the Treasury Department to refund to the United States $20,000 due the Government as the result of fraud committed by the officers or employes of the Sugar trust. Suit to collect the amount will be filed by the Government if the trust does not make payment within a reasonable time, it is said.

The alleged fraud was committed at the port of New Orleans and covers a period of years. Agents of the departments of the Treasury and Justice have found that during this period considable sugar was admitted which did not correspond to the samples which were submitted to the appraiser of the port. The officers of the port have been directed to reliquidate these entries to the amount of $20,000.

TRACING BAD EGGS.

In a certain town in Ohio the grocers have devised a scheme to protect themselves from financial loss entailed by replacing ancient eggs with good ones when customers complain. These dealers have adopted the system of assigning a number to each wholesaler or farmer from whom they purchase. Each egg, when it enters the store, is numbered corresponding to the name of the seller. If the housewife finds an egg that offends, she calls the grocer, gives the number, the egg is replaced and the original seller is required to make good to the grocer.

A store cannot qualify in the elite class if the floor, where customers are expected to walk, is littered with boxes, baskets, barrels, etc.

Experience Necessary for Good Success

A Man Unacquainted With a Trade Cannot Expect to Make a Success of it—The Story of a Farmer Who Saw a Fortune in the Grocery Trade But Failed to Secure it—His Methods Spelled Failure—A Lesson for Clerks.

"The man in the grocery business needs to know something about it," remarked an old grocer the other day. "In fact," he added, "a man cannot expect to succeed in a business with which he is not acquainted.

"It is true that there are men who have entered the grocery business without experience and by means of careful application and study have succeeded but chances are all against it. In such cases, it is safe to say that if their early training had been in connection with this trade, their success would have been even greater."

Farmer Seeks Other Fields.

Down near a progressive Eastern Ontario town there was a farmer, and a good farmer too, who had managed to make considerable money in the tilling of the soil. Like many another man he saw better futures in other lines of endeavor and yearned to give up the farm for one of them. In this case the bag of gold which dangled before his eyes was to be secured in the grocery business. A nice little corner grocery with plenty of customers was his ideal. He had seen other men engaged in the business making more money than he was. He had not taken into consideration that these men had made a careful study of this line, which, if he only had known, explained the reason for their success.

Goes into Grocery Business.

His spirit kindled with the fire of discontent, he sold his farm and began to look around for a place to locate in business. It came too, for a good block in an excellent location was being opened in the town in question. He secured a clerk supposed to be well acquainted with the grocery trade to take the helm while he secured some slight insight into the trade in which he had decided to launch.

The clerk was entrusted with the buying of the stock. Apparently, he believed that a good sized stock was the main thing in business, and he bought heavily, all lines of goods and in large quantities. Under these conditions, with a much larger stock than was really needed the store was opened. Then the clerk, puffed up with importance of the position he held, demanded an enormous salary which the farmer-grocer refused, so he left.

The proprietor decided he would look after things himself. He could not, of course, weigh or parcel correctly or rapidly and seldom knew the price of any article so that when a customer enquired a price, there was a long waiting spell while he looked up the necessary figures.

No Advertising Done.

He attempted no advertising. Probably the idea never occurred to him. As regards window displays, it consisted mostly in keeping that portion of the store well filled with goods which were seldom changed. It is hardly necessary to say that in a city where competition is keen, using unprogressive methods, or practically no real methods at all, the business did not prosper. At the back of the store eating peanuts or employed in some similar task, he sat, waiting for business to turn up.

Made an Early Sale.

The end of the story lies in the fact that business continued without improvement, he found himself falling farther behind and he was forced to sell while there was yet time to save a little of the money he had invested. The experience he secured in the grocery business had been costly. He is now engaged as a day laborer, making much less than he did while on the farm. Thus, is shown the folly of discontent and bearing out the fact that fields far off look green, but often are not.

The merchant who took over the business was acquainted with the grocery trade. He has done well so far and is destined to make it a good paying proposition.

FOOD INSPECTION DISTRICTS.

Order in Council Passed Establishing Them in Canada.

Ottawa, Sept. 2.—An order in Council has just been passed establishing certain districts throughout Canada under the adulteration of food act. The Maritime and Prairie Provinces each composes a district in itself. Ontario is divided into six districts—Ottawa, Kingston, Northern Ontario, Toronto, Hamilton and Windsor.

Toronto comprises the city of Toronto and the counties of Simcoe East, North and South; York Centre, North and South, and Ontario, North and South.

POSTPONED PICNIC A SUCCESS.

Four Thousand People Enjoy Outing With the London Grocers.

London, Ont., Sept. 12.—(Special)—After being postponed for a week, on account or rain the Retail Grocers' picnic at Springbank Park, was attended by four thousand people. It was an ideal day, just warm enough to make one want lemonade and ice cream cones, and the committee saw to it that everyone got what he wanted. The programme was replete with features of unusual excellence. The playing field was roped off so that all could see the big event of the day, the Johnston-Flynn fight was staged as near to the real thing as possible, Jack Anderson played the part of Jack Johnston and Charley Meyers that of Jim Flynn. Four fast rounds were fought, and to make the event as realistic as possible seconds were in attendance between rounds. The seconds were Harry Ranahan and Thos. Shaw, and Ed. Ryan and Wm. Mullins, respectively Despite the efforts of the police the "fight" was finished at the end of the fourth with "Johnston" the winner.

Bun eating and watermelon contests kept the crowd in roars of laughter, as well as the boxing in barrels. Wm. Mullins sustained the injury of a broken thumb in the last named event.

The bay show which included 42 entries, was looked after by Harry Ranahan, who claimed the finest babies in London were entered and it was difficult for the judges to make their decisions.

The Irish and Scotch dances in costume were great attractions, as good as any seen on a vaudeville stage.

Gordon Drake and Robt. Collins looked after the refreshments and saw that the boys had all they wanted. The committee who deserve credit for all the details and hard work were, Pres. John Diprose; Treas., Thos. Shaw; Secretary Jas. McKenzie; J. A. McFarlane, H. Fountaine, Harry Ranahan, Wm. T. Mullins, G. B. Drake, J. W. Eddy, M. A. Young, Norman McLeod, and E. J. Ryan, chairman of committee.

Notes on the Day.

It was a touching scene to see Adam Palmer bid good bye to his wife as he left to judge the babies.

The grocers from Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford were missed, and the guests' race had to be eliminated. The weather man was certainly unkind to them.

Some of the local travelers acted at judges.

The ball game between grocers and butchers was won by the latter.

Current News of the Week

Ontario

H. B. Clement, grocer, Burlington, Ont., has sold his business.

Mrs. J. A. Ewing, grocer, Hamilton, Ont., has disposed of her business.

M. J. Crowley, grocer, Peterboro, Ont., has sold to H. O'Rourke.

Norman Edwards of Hamilton has sold his grocery business to Daniel Mahoney.

Spencer Smith of Toronto has sold his grocery business to E. S. Calder.

Hot weather and a flood of supplies caused 700 baskets of fruit on the Hamilton market to spoil on Saturday last.

John A. Ewing has sold his grocery and butcher business at Hamilton to Geo. Robert.

E. F. Mason, grocer, Peterboro, Ont., visited the Canadian National Exhibition on Friday last.

E. J. Ryan and Gordon Drake of London, Ont., were in Toronto last week attending the exhibition.

Frank B. Sheidy's grocery store, Welland, was broken into recently, and about ten dollars worth of tobacco and cigarettes were stolen.

Thos. Marion, general merchant of Rapids Des Joachings, Ont., was in Toronto last week attending the exhibition and making fall purchases.

An executive meeting of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association will be held in the Board of Trade Building, Hamilton, on Wednesday evening next, Sept. 18, when the different committees will report on their progress and the work to be done during the fall outlined. All members of the Association whether on the executive or not are invited to be present and take part in the discussions.

Quebec.

A. W. Hugman, A. W. Hugman, Ltd., attended the Sherbrooke Exhibition and superintended the firm's booth there.

R. Hendery, Rose & Laflamme, Ltd., Montreal, has returned from a business trip through Ontario.

J. Strike of L. H. Packard & Co., has returned after a fortnight's vacation in the Laurentians. He reports that the trout were in a "taking" mood.

A. G. Snowdon, of Snowdon & Ebbitt, commission merchants, Montreal, has returned after an extended trip through the North-western Provinces and Ontario.

A. H. Brittain, president of Maritime Fish Corporation, Limited, Montreal, has left town for Westport, N. S., on business. Harold G. Connors of same firm has returned from his honeymoon trip.

The Asch Co., Montreal, at present located at 1486 St. Lawrence Boulevard, will soon occupy their four storey building situated on same street and will manufacture the new A. B. C. mop and other grocery specialties.

Joseph R. Wilson, manufacturers' agent, Toronto, has been appointed sole agent for Canada of the Tenney Candy Co., New York. This firm manufacturers fruit and nut chocolates and a standard line of chocolates as well as small package goods.

F. H. Anson, for many years connected with the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, has resigned, and last week his departure was marked by two presentations. On behalf of the company and the directors, a handsome silver tea service was presented, while the employees made him the recipient of a solid gold cigarette case. Brief addresses were made referring to the manner in which the retiring superintendent always fulfilled his duties.

Western Canada.

Mrs. A. M. Roff, general dealer, Morse, Sask., has sold to Pitcairn & Sharman.

Stock of the estate of John Manners, grocer, Winnipeg, has been sold to Geo. T. Grant.

Max Hayman, general dealer, Calder, Sask., has been succeeded by the Calder Supply Co.

Arthur Hemingway, general merchant, Arrow Park, Sask., has sold to B. M. Bawran.

The Canadian-American Egg Company, Limited, are erecting a plant at Canora, Sask., for the preserving of eggs by a Danish process. They propose to establish plants in Regina, Sask., and Calgary, Alta.

Sir Max Aitkens and R. B. Bennett, M. P., of Calgary, have purchased a string of eighty grain elevators in Western Canada, with a total capacity of 3,000,000 bushels. The elevators were owned by U. S. interests.

William Wilson of the Winnipeg factory is the manager of the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co.'s new factory at Vancouver, B. C. Before leaving he was presented with a solid gold watch by fellow employees in the Winnipeg factory.

The first of a dozen fishing boats to cost $16,000 each for the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Company, Ltd., of Prince Rupert, is nearing completion in Vancouver. The vessels will be built on the same uniform design. Geo. H. Collins, managing director of the company, states that fishing operations will be started early in the new year. A $500,000 cold storage plant with a capacity of 12,000,000 pounds was recently completed at Prince Rupert. Three trawlers, each costing $45,000, were recently launched at Grimsby, England, and will reach the coast in December. A plant for the manufacture of boneless and dry salt cod fish is now under construction for the company at Prince Rupert. It is also proposed to erect a fertilizer plant next year on an island in that vicinity and supply it with the non-edible fish caught in connection with fishing operations.

CURRENT MARKET NEWS.

Reports from Almeria indicate a short crop of grapes. Last year Almeria sent away 2,500,000 barrels. This year it does not expect over 1,600,000 perhaps 1,800,000. Bad weather is given as cause of the shortage.

Reports from Cape Cod, Massachusetts, are to the effect that the cranberry crop in many sections of that state will be small during the coming season. The crop was first damaged by frost and later the hot weather and drought caused the fruit to wither.

Conditions in Florida have been favorable for oranges, and it looks as if there would be good crops. The season, it is stated, is about three weeks earlier than usual, or about Oct. 1.

California's walnut crop will exceed that of last year by about 2000 tons, it is said. This would make the yield about 12,665 tons.

California is having the largest almond crop in its history. It will exceed that of 1910, a banner year, that witnessed a yield of 3,000 tons, valued at $750,000. The increase is due to larger acreage and favorable weather.

The Markets---Big Demand for Sugar

For Preserving Purposes—Fruits are Plentiful in Most Sections—Sugar Market Fairly Steady at Moment—Fancy Cheese Lower in Montreal—Canadian Sardines and Herring Easier—Cotton Twine Steady.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.
Valencias f.o.s.—Up 1 cent.
Fancy Cheese—Lower.
Canadian Sardines—Down.
Canadian Herring—Down.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—There seems to be some prospect of lower prices on some lines just now, as the present high cost covering practically all lines has undoubtedly proven an incentive to greater production. Again, the world's crops of grain are generally conceded to be very large this year, and this must go far towards reducing prices on a number of food stuffs.

Fancy cheese shows a decline, that is the Limburger and Edam varieties, the price for the former being 19-20 now instead of 24-25, while the latter is selling at $10 per dozen instead of $10.50. Gruyere cheese on the other hand has advanced.

More lines on the "mark down list" are Canadian pack herring, five cents having been knocked off, making prices now 90 cents per doz., while Canadian sardines which once sold as high as $3.50 per case are now quoted at $2.80.

SUGAR.—The market is steady at present, there being a good demand. Wholesalers expected an increase following advance of raws in New York but refiners evidently felt that the stiffening was more a result of speculation owing to a temporary scarcity, it being the end of the season. Needless to say the period between arrival of new crop and tail end of season for old crop affords a good opening for the speculative elements to get to work. What lends further strength to situation though, is the fact that U.S.A. have been obliged to import certain quantities of European sugars until the domestic new crop is supplied. It is stated that some 25,000 tons of good quality beets were imported from Hamburg. But it is hardly likely that a similar shipment could be secured on same money basis as its effect on the European market is reflected in the advance which took place there. It is too much of a problem for us to state definitely what the future trend of the market will be, suffice it to say that at time of writing the tone of market is generally steady with a tendency towards a stiffening.

MOLASSES.—The market continues firm for molasses, grocery grades having sold well, due no doubt to the cooler weather which has set in.

Syrups are also selling well, the scarcity of maple, having stimulated an already good trade.

DRIED FRUITS.—Considerable harm is reported to have been done to fruits drying on the trays throughout the coast districts with the result that several quotations have been withdrawn. But too much weight should not be placed on this statement as late advices go to show that no very heavy rain has fallen, the weather only being "unfavorable for drying." If the latter be correct we do not look for any curtailment of the season's output whatsoever. Local brokers are not alarmed and report that they will not take anything for gospel until they get authoritative statements on the situation.

Valencia raisins f.o.s., have advanced owing to scarcity this being the end of season and the amount on hand at various points being insignificant.

Apricots and peaches are none too active nor do prunes show much movement. Of course as reported previously the outlook for prunes is none too good nor do the latest advices from Oregon give us any more reason for optimism as the rain lately experienced there, has certainly done harm.

New crop Greek currants are on the way but the supply is not large though of course fuller shipments will follow. The market for spot is weak but for futures decidedly firm, though the demand is only normal. Smyrna figs are also coming along in small quantities. Towards the middle of October Persian dates should arrive as the weather has been remarkably good at centres of production, the result being an earlier ripening.

TEAS.—Second crop Japan teas are now arriving the quality comparing favorably with last year, and the price being somewhat lower. Local jobbers report a good sale for Japans, the cup quality being generally conceded excellent. China teas now coming to hand are dearer, though, due no doubt to the high rate of exchange. Considerable difficulty has been experienced with banking transactions, the growers in troubled districts in many cases refusing to part with supplies unless for spot cash from purchaser.

COFFEE.—It is quite a problem to decide the weather question as far as Brazil is concerned so conflicting are the reports, but one conclusion we can come to and that is, the bulls and bears are "at it." It is locally thought, though, that the recent reports about damage from frost, etc., were greatly exaggerated. However, in a very short time there will be official reports to hand which will be thoroughly reliable.

Demand here is good and though some of the houses are finding the business too unprofitable to go after business hard, others who are stronger financially

RICE.—It looks as if there will be little relief in this market as conditions in the Far East, are still strained though the suffering among the poorer class has been somewhat mitigated by imports of cheaper rice into the various affected centres. It is reported that the United States Government intends holding an inquiry into the rice situation in the Philippines with a view to devising means for increasing the production. Now that the world's markets have been depleted and will hardly be replenished for a few years yet, it looks as if there should be a successful period ahead for planters in the western world.

NUTS.—The crop of Tarragona almonds has turned out small and prices will be higher, in fact an advance has already taken place in the primary market, the general report being that growers have no inclination to get rid of their crop but are disposed to hold for future high prices. Of course the jobbing interests are none too pleased at this disposition, having already booked substantial orders which must be filled at a loss.

Brazil nuts are a little easier but Bordeaux walnuts have advanced owing to scarcity of stocks at this the end of the season.

The approach of the Jewish New Year festival has created a movement in the local nut market and some extra business is expected.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Big demand.

Rice—General steadiness.

Cotton Twine—Quoted at 29c.

Toronto, Sept. 12.—Sugar is a big selling line at present time, and is expected to continue so for some time yet. There is a plentitude of preserving peaches and plums coming forward now and a good deal are being canned by the housewife. Accordingly there is a big demand for sugar. Pears are also opening up as are grapes as well and altogether it looks like a big fall preserving season. For this reason, retailers should look carefully to their stock of sugar as well as sealers and other associated lines which will be in demand. Pickling is also getting underway and deserves considerable attention from the grocer.

Cotton twine still holds a steady position in sympathy with cotton. It is quoted at 29 cents per pound now.

SUGAR. — There are no outstanding features to sugar situation at present time. Raws have continued to hold a strong position in New York, but this has had no influence on Canadian refined. A bullish factor has been the scarcity of available sugar on this side of water and it is evident that sugars from Europe are to be required to some extent at least to tide refiners over until new domestics and Cubas become available. This fact is being taken advantage of by speculators. On the other hand, while new crop beets are also firmer, Europe reports fairly favorable weather with indications that beet roots are of full weight, although reports vary as to saccharine contents.

Although opinions differ as to fall trend of market, at present there is a steady tone.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Trade in molasses is as good as it usually is locally at this season of year. Greater briskness is expected later on.

A fair seasonable movement seems present in corn syrups, but cooler weather will help them.

DRIED FRUITS.—New Valencia raisins are on the way and should arrive in week or ten days. Quality of advance samples has been fairly good, but they can hardly be sized up until regular stock is examined. As pointed out before, Valencia raisins are on high level this year.

New crop currants are also on way and advices seem to indicate that there will probably be considerable poor quality fruit. Currant market is rather unsettled on account of pending change in retention percentage. Figs are also on the way.

There is a good deal of business being done in California raisins as they are lower than for several years. There are reports on local market this week that heavy storms in California have been detrimental to raisins, causing a big change in situation, but these reports have not been confirmed.

Evaporated apples continue favorable with prospects of a good yield.

TEA.—There are no new features to tea locally, but a tone of steadiness is maintained in all varieties. There is some interest in second crop Japanese, which holds a steady position.

Reports from Colombo state that shortage of labor in Ceylon has caused large supplies of low quality rough leaf, there being insufficient pluckers to deal with the heavy flushes and coarse plucking was unavoidable.

There was a remarkable scarcity of really good Ceylon tea during July. As a rule a marked improvement in quality is noticeable during July; the improvement, however, has been late this year, and it was only quite the latter end of the month that any real change took place. A very decided difference is apparent in the teas being manufactured now and there is no doubt this month will produce some very fine quality, and very high prices will be paid.

COFFEE.—Local coffee market continues the even tenor of its way, with a tendency to steadiness in spite of the fluctuations which continue on other markets. Both the United States and European markets are as variable as the wind that blows, although Brazils, which continue firm, lend a steadying hand.

There are plenty of rumors as to cold weather and too frequent rains in the Brazil coffee districts injuring the August flowering, as well as the September prospects, but they apparently have no real basis of fact to support them. The period of frost danger will soon be over, and if within next two weeks no killing frost happens, the blossoms will be saved from injury from that source.

"The new crop now in its most critical stage," says a coffee report, "is the chief point of concern. If it escapes any serious climatic injury between now and October, it will serve as a restraint in forcing up prices beyond a reasonable basis, and the trade can count on a market assimilating more and more to the actual relationship between supply and demand."

SPICES.—Despite reports from other centres that spice trade does not measure up to sales of last year, no complaint is being made by local jobbers and grinders. High prices may have somewhat of a curtailing effect, but a fair seasonable trade is being transacted. Mixed pickling spice is one line in urgent demand at present time.

General firmness prevails in most lines. However, the incoming crop of pimento is causing an easier undertone. This is the big season for celery seed, which it will be remembered has made sensational advances during the year. In January it sold locally at 16 to 18 cents. To-day's price is 50 cents and upward. It is scarce and cannot be purchased f.o.b. New York for less than 45 cents. October prices are, however, on a more reasonable level.

BEANS.—Fact that spot beans are scarce is becoming an old story. Some jobbers are completely cleaned up and are finding it difficult to get supplies to tide them over. There are some more Austrian beans on the way, but it will be some little time yet before their arrival.

Many opinions are expressed regarding prospects for Ontario bean crop. Outlook in Michigan is promising, a recent report being that prospects are the best the State has ever seen. A recent canvass by Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association indicates an average condition as 80 per cent. and average acreage 106 per cent. With continuation of warm dry weather, conditions will improve, and it looks like a banner year.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—There have been really no big packs in any lines of canned goods so far reported this year and interest is accordingly being directed to progress of late fruits and vegetables. Recent weather has been of a quite favorable nature for tomatoes and corn after the many rains and packing of these lines is being rushed. The outturn in these two lines depends to no little extent on length of season. The weather man holds the key to the situation. Peaches and plums are giving promise of fairly good results.

While some firms are only delivering 60 per cent. of peas, made up 35 per cent. of standards, 15 per cent. of early June, and 10 per cent. of sweet wrinkle, others are delivering a full hundred per cent. made up of the various kinds while some other jobbers are doing even better and are giving a full 100 per cent. of standards. In order to do this of course, it has been necessary for them to make additional purchases, so that the brands will naturally not be the same as originally ordered.

It is difficult to get a line on exact value of canned peas if they were purchased now as jobbers are not offering any until they see how they stand. Ideas seem to favor prices above the opening on both peas and beans.

The supply of Scottish tinned fish is likely to be short. The fishing season was unsatisfactory and the high price of raw fish has prohibited the packers putting up quantities. Some of them will hardly be able to fill contracts already made.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Sept. 12.—Business conditions in Western Canada continue most satisfactory. There is a steady active movement in fall goods, sorting orders coming in satisfactory volume. The greater part of wheat crop is cut notwithstanding unsettled weather and what new grain has come in has graded high. Threshing should commence in most districts next week with a continuance of present fine weather.

In the grocery business wholesalers report the volume of August business as having been most satisfactory, greatly exceeding that of the same month last year.

There are no changes of importance to note in prices of staple lines. Oriental rices are a little dearer and brick cod fish is up ½ cent per lb. Both Rangoon and Patna rice have advanced.

Many new retail businesses have opened up in the rapidly growing suburbs of the city and the volume of cash trade is still maintaining the season's high average. Country collections are only fair, but will no doubt improve when the grain begins to move.

DRIED FRUITS.—Situation in Pacific Coast dried fruit lines may be summarized as follows: In future sellers are refusing to accept bids on a 3⅞c four-size bag basis on all October shipments. Wires refusing bids quoted a 4c four-size basis on 40s to 90s inclusive. There is a good deal of irregularity in the offerings. Prices are made on different assortments of sizes with no two offering the same percentages. In most cases the assortments offered are equal quantities of 40s to 70s or 40s to 90s inclusive, but in all cases there is a premium of ¼c to ½c on the large sizes.

The tone is easy in peaches. This applies to both spot and futures. The market on apricot futures is steady, while 5½ cents is offered for seeded raisins for October delivery. Sales at present for spot cash are at 6¼ to 6½.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Sept. 10.—Market dealings during week have been quiet. The exhibition held this week was a splendid success and greatly enlivened trade in general. There were thousands of visitors to the city and the dealer reaped the benefits. Fine weather added to this, made business still more satisfactory. So far as quotings are concerned there was nothing of particular interest in the way of changes.

In country market dairy produce came in a little more plentifully and demand was brisk. Butter still remains high and dealers are not looking for marked change downwards. It is expected that the price during the coming winter will be decidedly in advance of any paid for years. Eggs remain about the same, a little firmer possibly, and cheese is also firmer.

Following items are from The Canadian Grocer of September 16, 1892:—

"The grocers who were losers in last week's fire in Montreal were: Louis Simard, R. Bertrand, August Morin, Francois Lemaire and Wm. Cantin."

"The fruit preserving factory at Chiliwack, B.C., declines to purchase any more plums for canning, the reason being that owing to the extraordinary abundance of the crop, plums have been offered in greater quantities than the works could handle without neglecting other varieties of fruit."

Editor's Note.—The twenty years have brought forward many changes and history is not likely to repeat itself in this regard, with such an increasing population.

"The Trades and Labor Council meeting at Montreal, approved of the bill for the early closing of stores and other business places, presented at the last session of the Quebec Legislature."

Editor's Note.—Early closing is still an important question among the trade, but wonderful strides have been since the above was penned. Twenty years hence early closing will be universal in Canada.

"The Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association at a meeting held at their rooms in London, Ont., on Saturday evening, decided to ask the Toronto Association to join them in having a Provincial sanitary inspector appointed for hotels. . . . Some of those present at the meeting were W. J. Reid, S. N. Sterling, J. M. Dillon, J. Marr, S. Screaton, C. E. Perry, Wm. Gray and W. S. Case."

WANT TO ABOLISH GROCERS' LICENSE.

Montreal, Sept. 12.—The license committee recently appointed by the Gouin government to enquire into the liquor traffic in Quebec held its first session this week. A deputation of temperance workers demanded the total abolition of the saloon bar and the grocers' licenses.

Another Drop in Rolled Oats Probable

Bearish Opinions Expressed on Market—Good Crops Have Depressing Tendency—Better Quality Wheat Than Last Year Expected—U.S. Government Report Is Quite Bearish.

From present indications, it would seem well for retailers to watch the rolled oats market and conditions affecting it quite closely. It will be remembered that prices were reduced 25 cents per barrel two weeks ago. Crop prospects still continue favorable and are exerting a bearish influence on the market. If nothing crops up to mar progress of western oat yield, opinion is expressed that we will have lower prices on rolled oats before long. The Northwest Grain Dealers' Association estimates the oat yield at 220,290,000 bushels, and while this is considered rather high by some dealers, there is no denying the fact that it looks like a big yield.

For the same reason there is a bearish tendency in flour, and if nothing happens to change the complexion of affairs, it is felt that lower prices on wheat and wheat products will probably be seen. The wheat estimate of 179,828,000 bushels is little better than last year, although quality is to date much better. That the major portion will be so is however not to be banked on until the harvest has progressed farther. However, conditions at present time are excellent and grain men and millers generally are in a state of feverish expectation.

September crop report of U. S. Department of Agriculture is bearish. It is estimated that final total production will be about 300,000,000 bushels, compared with 191,000,000 bushels harvested last year, and 201,000,000 harvested in 1910. Oats are estimated at 1,290,000,000 as compared with 922,000,000 bushels harvested last year and 1,186,000,000 in 1910.

A feature of markets at present time is continued active demand for both bran and shorts even in the face of excellent pastures. Many mills are behind in orders for these lines and at moment there is an undertone of firmness.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—There has been a slight improvement in demand from across the water and some pretty good business has been transacted. Demand locally is good and a fair volume of business is passing at steady prices.

CEREALS.—Rolled oats market is steady at present, with an inclination to easiness. With good weather during next fortnight prices should weaken considerably and we are inclined to look for a decline very shortly. Dealers should therefore follow western crop reports and weather statistics.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There is no particular activity to demand for flour at present time, trade being principally for immediate needs. Interest in Western crop prospects continues quite keen and with general bright conditions reported, dealers see nothing to be gained by taking hold just now.

There is no special change in winter wheat flour, wheat still coming forward tardily. There is no denying that yield of winter wheat was poor and farmers apparently believe prices will be maintained. It is, however, probable that deliveries are held back because farmers are busy. Export demand as has been the case for some time continues quiet.

CEREALS.—Lower prices on rolled oats of a few weeks ago have not stimulated demand to any great extent. Feeling that still lower prices may be seen is probably the cause of quietness, although general business may detract attention from this line. At any rate approach of new crop is apparently causing an undertone of uneasiness, and many jobbers are of the opinion that lower prices will prevail in near future.

MILL FEEDS.—Demand for barn and shorts still continues brisk and a firm undertone characterizes market. So urgent is the demand for these lines that one big mill is several weeks behind in its orders. Some others are sold ahead for some little time while there are reports of one mill trying to buy from another in order to fill orders. Not withstanding excellent grazing season, demand keeps up.

FLOUR AND CEREALS.—There is no change expected in flour until the new crop affects the market when a decline is not improbable. Rolled oats and oatmeal are in moderate demand.

Time to Push Fruits for Preserving

Preserving Peaches and Plums at the Flood—Pears and Grapes Moving Into the Limelight—U.S. Fresh Fruits Continue In Good Demand—Lemons Continue Steady — Demand for Pickling Supplies.

Now is undoubtedly the right time to push most late fall fruits for preserving purposes. At least this is true in many sections of the Dominion. The preserving peach is now about at the flood with freestones moving forward in goodly quantities. Plums have also reached the critical stages, while pears are on the way, although for some varieties of the latter there is probably some time yet to spare. Grapes are now at a more reasonable level and are fast becoming an important feature.

Notwithstanding that Canadian fruit is plentiful, fresh fruits from United States points keep in quite keen demand. California is sending plums to some sections of Canada. Bartlett pears are arriving from Oregon, fancy Elberta peaches from Colorado and Malaga grapes from California. These all belong to the fancy varieties.

Lemons still maintain their position of steadiness. Warmer weather has caused a revival in demand and this has caused an even stronger tone at certain centres. Oranges, too, hold quite a steady position for good quality stock. Late Valencia is the only variety coming along now.

Now is the time that retailers should begin to push picking supplies. This trade is worth going after. The housewife will be demanding such lines as tomatoes, cucumbers, pickling onions, gherkins, peppers, etc.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—There is no change in price as far as green fruit lines are concerned, nor has the demand been any too strong, though generally good business has been done. Bananas, as is customary, are moving out freely, the quality of recent arrivals being good. Lemons are easing off some, due to the early arrival of cooler weather. Basket fruit is in good demand at reasonable prices.

VEGETABLES.—Considerable activity marked this market last week, and all dealers have reported a pretty encouraging business. Potatoes seem likely to get a little cheaper, though of course sweet potatoes are very scarce. Radishes are not over plentiful and a slight advance has taken place, while carrots are coming forward better, the size of bunches varying considerably. Cabbage is now sold by the basket.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—The juice stained and soaked floors at several sections of the fruit market on Monday was plain evidence of a glutted fruit market at the end of last week. "The warmer weather brought fruit on in a hurry," said one dealer this week, "and shippers thought that because exhibition was on, we could sell any quantity. The truth is that people couldn't be induced to purchase fruit for preserving during exhibition, but I expect them to start in now."

Plums and peaches were the lines that came in too freely, peaches of a non-desirable quality selling as low as 20 cents. One man sold 50 baskets of plums of off-quality at 5 cents per basket.

Preserving is now expected to commence in earnest. Late Crawford peaches are arriving, while Elbertas of excellent quality are starting. There is a wide range in prices on pears and plums. Grapes are down to 17½ to 20 cents, fancy varieties bringing 25 cents. Notwithstanding that local fruit is plentiful, fancy quality from across the line continues in demand.

A firmer feeling as intimated as probable prevails in lemons, and for 300's from $5.50 to $6 is asked. Oranges are also steady for good quality stock.

VEGETABLES.—Potatoes have still a tendency to easiness, Ontario stock selling around $1.15. Some fine New Brunswick Delawares are being sold at $1.25. Prospects seem excellent for a generally good yield of potatoes this year and if nothing crops up to mar situation, it is likely that prices will be on a much more reasonable level than last year.

Pickling supplies are now in good demand, cucumbers, pickling onions, tomatoes, green peppers, etc., moving out. Tomatoes were a drug on the market on Saturday last when a flood of supplies sent prices down as low as 13 cents. Prevailing price is 17½ to 20 cents per basket. Sweet potatoes are quoted at $1.90 per large hamper.

Bumper Potato Crop in New Brunswick

Yield This Year Expected to be Record Breaker—Acreage Was Large and Yield Will be Heavy Except in Few Districts Affected by Wet Weather—Prices Beginning to Ease—May Not Need Any Foreign Stock This Year.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 12.—(Special.)—It is now practically assured that the potato crop of 1912 in New Brunswick will be in every way a record breaker. Large quantities of the early arrivals are now in the market and being rapidly bought up. At present the selling price is about $1.50 but it must drop in a few days to at least $1.25 if not cheaper because in central districts, Hartland for instance, potatoes are bringing only $1 per barrel, so abundant is the supply. There is now no reason to believe that stocks will this year advance to the remarkable prices attained last year because the yield in general is above the average and buyers will be more careful in the storing of their supplies.

The opening of wider markets in Upper Canada and Cuba, the fact that potatoes could be sold for as high as $3.50 a barrel and the enormous demand created through shortages elsewhere, last year, were all weighty factors with provincial farmers in sowing their crops this spring and seeding was carried on on a scale almost double that of last year, which was particularly great and much above the general standard. The yield per acre was expected to be nearly twice as much as was the case in previous years. And from present indications there appears to be every reason to believe that the optimistic hopes of the farmers will be for the major part, verified.

Rainfall Did Some Damage.

Of course in some sections of the province there has been a falling off. For several weeks there was continual rainfall and in some places a wet rot set in and growth was impeded, in fact many barrels were lost. This refers mostly to the territory embraced in farmlands between St. John and Westmorland counties where heavy rains interfered with what would otherwise have been an exceptionally heavy harvest. The coming of a finer stretch of weather just saved the potato crops from utter destruction. But throughout the upper St. John River valley, through York, Carleton and Victoria counties, particularly, the harvest has been most encouraging; the return per acre has been surprising, and with few spoilations in the yield, there should be an abundance of all kinds of potatoes on the market both for local and foreign consumption this year.

In the Aroonstook districts potatoes can now be bought for $1 a barrel. Excepting on the lowlands there was little rot and the farmers are now hustling their stocks to market and seem ready and quite willing to dispose of them at this price. Buyers from St. John, and other centres are already busy canvassing for first place in purchases, and many large orders have been given. The fact that in the up-river sections this low price is ruling will soon force local quotations to nearly the same figure and at that price the storing away will begin.

Where West Bought From Last Year.

Last year the North Shore of the province proved the Mecca of interest to Upper Canadian buyers and car after car was sent forward to Montreal and other places. Long after it had become necessary to make importations of potatoes from the Old Country the farmers throughout the North Shore districts continued to market their products and receive prices far in advance of what their confreres in other parts of the province had procured. They had stored their stocks away securely awaiting the certain coming of higher prices and when the time arrived they sold at tremendous profits.

A prominent local wholesaler who has been most active in potato dealings for years past, said to-day that he did not expect to see any foreign pommes de terre on the Canadian market this year, unless there was a great shortage in some other part of the Dominion or in Maine. The fact that the crop in the lower sections of New Brunswick had fallen below expectations through rot, would not matter so much in the general marketing for the abundance of the harvest in other parts of the province would easily make amends. The North Shore yield is estimated as being splendid, though the harvesting will not begin for a fortnight or more.

FACTS ABOUT MACKEREL.

THE MACKEREL.—The mackerel differs widely from the haddock as far as the features which naturalists take into account are concerned, but it is economically as important. The average size of the fish is from 14 to 16 inches long, weight for this size being about 2½ pounds. In May and June the fish move towards the shore to spawn. They come near the Nova Scotian coast, and then move into the Gulf of St. Lawrence from a south easterly direction. Up to the middle of July it is difficult to get them to take bait, the truth of the matter being that they lose all desire for bait during period of spawn. It has been proven that in practically every instance the fish coming into Pleasant Bay, early in July and going up the north shore (Quebec) as far as Point de Monts, about the end of July, are spawning or partly spawned. June and July cover the period, though the fish remain and feed in the Gulf and along the Canadian shores until the end of October. The spawning fish when caught and marketed are none too toothsome but the fall mackerel, after recovery feeds up, and becomes fat and firm and therefore is superior in every respect.

The mackerel cannot be called a truly migratory fish, nor are there such differences noted in the various schools along our coasts as can be traced in those noticed in European seas. The mackerel largely confines its movements to coming into shallow waters from deeper water and vice versa.

A few words about the eggs may be of interest in passing. They average about 40,000 to each female fish, but 200,000 have been taken from one fish, while the largest mackerel according to one eminent authority would produce 1,000,000. The egg itself is a small transparent sphere over 1-25th of an inch in diameter. In about six days the young fish hatches out and at first a few specks of yellowish color are seen near the eyes. The yellow specks later appear mingled with black spots over the head and body and form an irregular line along the back, these spots being a blue black. After the eleventh day the young schools come inshore and vast numbers may be seen off Prince Edward Island and the Bonaventure coast during August and September. In November when 6 or 7 inches long they move into deeper water and are not seen again until they reappear as "tinker" mackerel 8 or 9 inches long, abounding in harbors and bays. In short, a one year mackerel is as long as the finger.

Interest Developing in Smoked Fish

Season Getting Under Way—Wholesalers Carrying Larger Supplies—Retailers Making Inquiries—Halibut Continues Scarce—Some Montreal Houses Shipping Frozen Stock—White Fish Scarce.

Greater interest is developing in smoked fish and the season is getting under way. Wholesalers are beginning to carry larger supplies and varieties and inquiries are coming in from retail dealers. As pointed out last week rainy weather interfered with curing of fish on east coast for a time and it is felt that this may have some slight effect on prices later on.

One of the features in fresh fish is the shortage of halibut. Situation on the Pacific Coast is quite acute with supplies shorter than for many years. The catch is also poor on the east coast. Montreal has small supplies and some wholesalers are shipping out frozen stock instead.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Haddock and cod are in good supply and prices remain the same, but swordfish is scarce and prices advanced. Lake fish are now arriving more freely. Brook trout is also in good supply. Mackerel prices are firm owing to poor supply, while halibut is also none too plentiful, a number of wholesalers shipping out frozen stock instead. The smoked fish season is open and inquiries are coming to hand.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—The getting under way of the fish and oyster season has received a temporary check by reason of the warmer weather of the past week, but this is not expected to continue for long and with advent of cooler weather, trade is expected to become more interesting.

Warm weather is preventing oyster trade from making any rapid headway but trade is described as fair for September. More interest is being shown in smoked varieties, haddie, fillets, kippers and bloaters being offered. Trout is more plentiful of late but white fish is still scarce. Halibut still continues in quite short supply.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Because of the fact that most of the fishermen from bay ports have been busy during past week in catching pollock for the West Indies market, there has been but a small supply of fresh fish on the local market, but the demand has been brisk.

Clams and oysters are coming in better, and season promises well. Season really opened for them this week. The establishment of a commision to investigate the shell-fish industry in Maritime Provinces may prove of vast benefit to the producing of better results in so far as the fishing and cultivation of growth is concerned. The commission is now at work.

MANITOBA.

Winnipeg.—Oysters came in with September and are quoted by local jobbers at $3 per gallon. Halibut has advanced ½ cent per lb. dearer. Demand for all lines is steady and supplies sufficient.

Produce & Provisions

Warm Weather Helps Provision Trade

Revival in Demand for Smoked and Cooked Meats—Pork Products Have Been Gradually Attaining High Level—Firm Front to Lard—Butter Holds Steady in Face of Good Pastures—Eggs Vary at Different Centres.

The warmer weather which has been experienced in most sections of the Dominion of late has revived the trade in provisions to some extent. At least this is the case in certain lines particularly smoked and cooked meats.

Summer is acknowledged as the big season for both these lines but this year has not been particularly favorable on account of rather cool weather which ruled for a greater portion of it. However, a normal trade was transacted, for as one dealer points out these lines are becoming staples and not merely summer foods. At one time cooked ham sold only during the warm weather. Now, it is established into an all-the-year-round seller.

A feature which is becoming quite noticeable is the high level which pork products are gradually attaining. The upward movement has not been particularly rapid but it has been steady following in the wake of live hog values, so that comparatively high prices have been reached on some lines. Lard even at the moment holds a firm position, with advances being made at several centres.

The butter market continues rather puzzling for with the copious rains and excellent pastures one would naturally expect a tendency to easiness. Such does not prove to be the case. In fact there is quite a firm tone at some centres. Production of butter continues to fall below what one would naturally expect, while Western Canada's demands prevent any accumulation on Eastern markets. From some districts have come complaints of quality of butter attributed to the excessive moisture of the grass at present time.

Eggs vary at different centres. For instance Toronto would look for tinge of easiness while Firmness is reported from Montreal. There is at least a particularly good consumptive demand.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS. — General steadiness prevails in this market, there being no particular change in price, but undoubtedly a better demand, no doubt the result of the warmer weather. There is an average business passing for all lines of smoked meats, while lard is also in demand and an advance in the near future may be scored.

BUTTER. — There is no change in prices locally but an advance is not far off, as supplies are pretty short and there is little hope of any improvement. The English market pretty well controls the situation as it is hardly likely that imports will be large as the tendency over there is also for higher prices. Again, while the bulk of the Danish production usually was forwarded to Great Britain, still Germany is now competing for this supply as she seems to be unable to produce enough to fill the growth in demand.

Prices in the country centres have stiffened up, as high as 27½ cents, having been reached. The next few weeks should show an interesting situation.

EGGS.—Prices have advanced a cent all round this week and it looks as if a few more points will be scored if supplies are not more plentiful. Shipments coming forward this week were over 1,000 cases smaller than last, though the total shows a slight advance over those received during corresponding period of last year. The market is firm in every respect, under a good demand.

POULTRY.—There is no change in price, nor can we report an encouraging demand, things being particularly slow. Supplies are not good either, and it is quite certain that under conditions prevailing this week, if a firm demand sets in, quotations would ascend a few points. However, a heavy business is expected in the course of a few weeks.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—The warmer weather experienced of late has added more life to trade in smoked and cooked hams. This has not been an over brisk summer in these lines but on the whole a normal busines has been done.

As noted last week, there is a firmer feeling in certain lines. Rolled bacon for instance is up to 13¾ to 14 cents while long clear as intimated last week is selling higher, 14¼ to 14½ cents being asked. In addition to this a strong undertone still marks the last market and some firms would quote even as high as 14 cents in tierces. Gradually but steadily pork products have been mounting to a high level following the trend of hogs which are worth quite a stiff figure.

BUTTER.—In spite of the excellent pastures, there is no change in butter prices. "Nor can it be sold any cheaper," said one man this week, "because no concessions can be secured from sellers in the country." There appears to be considerable stock coming along but it is apparently being well cared for. There has been a good deal stored this year.

"It is difficult to say for sure," said one dealer this week, "but it seems to me that they may be overdoing the storing of butter. There is a lot in storage and there may be some sleepless nights ahead for some dealers."

EGGS.—With exhibition over and a somewhat lessened demand combined with warmer weather which may work for larger production, there seems to be a slightly easier undertone to eggs. There is the fact, however, that warmer weather will probably bring a larger shrinkage in receipts.

"Prices should be a shade easier," said one egg man this week. "Our price in the country is 24 cents and that is the limit we are paying. Buyers for a time have been slightly overstepping that mark."

POULTRY.—Poultry has been in quite good demand with a considerable volume offering. There is a little easier feeling which will probably continue until weather becomes cool enough to make storage possible. There are several Jewish holidays during September that will cause a brisker demand for poultry.

Displays Provisions at Front of Store

Has Slicing Counter Farther Back—John Laird, Galt, Ont., Divides Department Up so That Provisions May be Shown in Prominent Position Without Taking Up Too Much Valuable Space—Importance of Clearing Out the Ends.

There is no getting away from the fact that the front is the most desirable part of the store to show goods if you want to sell them. It is forever the cry of manufacturers to the retail dealer, "Why don't you put my goods out where the people will see them. Then you will sell them."

The biscuit man wants every dealer to show his goods at the front and so does the provision man and the baking powder man and so on, down the line. Every retailer is being constantly urged to place some particular line to the fore. He is in somewhat of a quandary as to which lines are best to place in a position of prominence.

Provisions Need Display.

Now, perhaps if there is any line which needs to be shown in the store, it is provisions. For this reason, it is well to have provisions to the front, but against this, it is argued that a provision department takes up a good deal of space and this many a grocer can ill afford at so important a part of his store.

John Laird, of Galt, Ont., has attempted to solve this problem by dividing up the department, having his display part at the front and his slicing counter farther back. Thus, the object arrived at—that of bringing provisions prominently before customers—is accomplished with the taking up of the minimum amount of valuable space at the front.

The display portion of the provision department is just at the right hand as customers enter. Here for a space of about six feet a couple of rows of shelving have been removed, and in the recess so formed, provisions are shown. Meat hooks to hold hams, breakfast bacon and other lines are placed at the top. Various kinds of meat are shown on white platters below. During the summer a screen covers the front, thus preventing the entrance of the fly. Farther back in a less important part of the store is the slicing counter, where a meat slicer is used. It requires a few more steps to take the meat to the slicing counter and to return it, but this is made up for by the extra display space secured at the front.

"One of the difficult problems in the provision department," says Mr. Laird, "is to tell if any money is being made. This is an easy matter in a store properly departmentalized, but this is hardly possible in a small store. You can tell exactly how much you make or do not make when a whole ham or side is sold, as we always weigh our meats as they come in. When they are sliced, however, it is not always possible to tell how much you have made.

Clears Out Ends.

"One of the important parts in handling meats," he continued, "is to clear up the ends. Every end which is left unsold means a deduction in profit. I don't try to slice them right up to the end, as there is bound to be a certain unsaleable amount left. Instead, I try to work off the ends in a piece, and I think it is better to clear them out, say at 20 cents than slice at 25 cents, for as I said, there is bound to be a piece left."

Butter forms quite an important part of the produce and provision section of this store. An interesting feature is the change in late years. When Mr. Laird first started in business, there was lots of butter available from the surrounding country. This is not so now, as about 300 pounds of butter has to be purchased weekly from outside sources.

Demand Quality.

"People of to-day," states Mr. Laird, "demand the best quality butter, even if the price is high. There is no sale for poor butter. If you tell a customer you have some butter of not quite so high quality at a lower price, she will refuse it. This seems the case even with poor customers. They all want the best regardless of price."

There is an improved style this year in the natural Japan tea leaf, reports indicating that second and third crop teas are good from a cup quality standpoint.

LUDELLA

On account of the high price of teas during the past few months, we have been compelled to keep withdrawn from the market our Blue Label twenty-five cent retailer. Of course, had we been indifferent about the quality of tea which we put into it, we could easily have continued it and still made a profit, but we desired to retain the high reputation which this priced package has attained, and retired it.

The tea market has now eased off sufficiently to enable us to again pack this line with the old standard of quality, and we now have pleasure in announcing that Ludella Blue Label, to retail at twenty-five cents the full pound in lead package, is here for you at a cost of twenty cents net, and we solicit your orders.

ROYAL ELECTRIC COFFEE MILL
The Mill that "cuts" the coffee

One of 72 styles

Royal Coffee Roasters enable the progressive merchant to roast his own "coffees," no experience required—saves the cost of cans, boxes, labels, advertising and selling expenses. Builds up a permanent store patronage. Everybody wants fresh roasted coffee.

Royal Electric Coffee Mills "cut" the coffee according to requirements for any style coffee pot, percolator or urn.

Is it worth my while to have my line represented in Sunny Alberta ?

Every day this question is being asked by manufacturers, and the most direct answer is given below. We are located in the heart of a splendid field of trade, and being the oldest commission firm in Alberta, are in thorough touch with the trade. There is rapid and unlimited development in Alberta and it will pay you, Mr. Manufacturer, to let us distribute your lines. We are distributors for many good firms.

Don't be hobbled—

Cut Loose From Poor Flour

WHEN a flour stops pulling, Brother Grocer, it drags. How can you forge ahead with poor quality neutralizing your efforts?

Are you working for your competitor or for yourself? Stop wasting your energy, your planning, your enthusiasm.

Cut loose from poor flour once for all.

For the very best salesmen you have can't make bad flour good, nor can it ever make good itself.

Cut loose from dissatisfaction, impatience, apologetic explanation, from dreams that never come true.

Consider now FIVE ROSES flour, Brother Grocer.

Ever since 1888 it has helped realize the hopes of the best retailers, brought back the customer and done missionary work outside.

Many a grocer has changed the drag into a pull by merely changing his brand to FIVE ROSES.

What else could you expect from a flour that has jumped its sales from 800 barrels to 10,500 barrels?

Customers with the same flour needs as you write us that FIVE ROSES sales are going up, always going up.

Are you going to be held back any longer?

Ask your jobber or write our nearest office.

Better Clerks and Protected Profits

This National Cash Register enforces records which show the sales of each of your clerks.

It makes them more efficient, because it promotes interest in the work. They know you can reward according to proven merit.

Its enforced records protect your profits by fixing responsibility for every transaction.

It stops mistakes, removes temptation and increases trade.

It keeps you in every-minute touch with the sales end of your business, frees you from uncertainty, and saves your time and energy.

Increased earnings and greater efficiency immediately result from its use.

It is built to stand on the floor or set on counter or stand.

It may be built with any number of cash drawers and corresponding counters up to nine.

This is what the medical press says:

The "Medical Times":

in commenting on Professor Thompson's experiments with "Bovril" which proved its great nutritive value, says: "The results were simply startling."

The "British Medical Journal:"

after the 1911 experiments says: "In the case of human beings, the body-building power of Bovril was even more marked than had been previously shown in the experiments with animals."

These Experiments

are becoming known to the public, and our sales of Bovril have increased enormously. There are indications that our sales during this next winter season will be record sales. See that you get your share of the business.

The Facts Behind the Figures Determine the Value and Popularity of "Simcoe" Baked Beans

The significance of a large steadily increasing sale bears directly on the quality and popularity of a food. Quality is the feature predominant with all Dominion Canners' Products.

Popularity is another word for "economy." Baked Beans are really economical; a can of Simcoe Baked Beans contains as much nourishment as one pound of beefsteak. Notice the difference in price. That's just one reason why Simcoe Baked Beans are popular. There are many others.
Feature the 3's family size---a larger tin at a smaller price.

From a Hard Headed Business Standpoint

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service. They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

DOUBLE YOUR SALES OF MARMALADE

Most of the marmalade that is sold is bought by those who come into the store and ask for it. A little creative salesmanship would easily double the sales of marmalade.

For instance you could double your sales of by instructing your salesman to tactfully suggest to customers that Shirriff's Scotch Marmalade is very appetizing, delicious and healthful. That it is made of selected Seville oranges and best granulated sugar. And has the keen, stimulating tang of the bitter Seville orange blended most deliciously with the sweet of the granulated sugar.

They could suggest that Shirriff's marmalade spread on toast or crisp soda crackers tastes very good at breakfast. And some people enjoy it spread on hot biscuits. Others with pancakes.

They could suggest, too, that marmalade steam puddings, marmalade pies and marmalade tarts are delightful.

Just try the above suggestions and see how quickly you will double your sales of Shirriff's Marmalade. It's to your profit to do so.

MR. GROCER!

Don't let the hot weather interfere with profits. Investigate the merits of the new

"WALKER" Refrigerator Counter

IT is just what you need for the economical handling of cooked meats, fancy dairy goods, fresh fruit, vegetables and seasonable delicacies.

IT combines perfect sanitation with economical refrigeration, and so temptingly displays your goods that customers will crowd around this counter to buy.

IT will boost your sales, win public confidence, individualize your store, and quickly pay for itself in a saving of waste alone.

Let us tell you more about it. Drop us a card for particulars and we will immediately get in touch with you. We manufacture the best in modern grocery fixtures—"Walker Bins."

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

23,000 CUPS

About 23,000 cups of the 40c quality of Red Rose Tea were served at the Toronto Exhibition.

Many very complimentary remarks were made about the tea and the way it was served—(for the latter we must thank a most efficient and obliging staff of girls) but the remark most often made and not consciously intended to be flattering was—"How do you make the tea so good? I can't make it this way at home."

Now anyone who will take the 40c. quality of Red Rose and make it according to the simple directions in each package—serving it with thin cream—will have a cup of tea just the same as we served at the Exhibition.

It wasn't the way it was made but the quality of the tea that gave such pleasing results.

It is very safe to say that the ladies who thought they couldn't make as good tea at home were not using 40c Red Rose but a poorer tea.

Perhaps some of them were your customers. We beg to suggest that you make a prominent display in your windows, or on the counter for the next week or two of 40c Red Rose Tea. If you think the suggestion worth acting on, drop us a postal card and we will send you an appropriate display card.

AND EFFICIENCY

It is important that you associate yourself with a source of supply that is unquestioned.

You understand that to compare a house treating oysters as a side line with a concern that makes it their only business, is a costly mistake to you.

There is one thing you cannot expect from a side line house, and that is that degree of efficiency and service that is characteristic only of houses treating the line as their only specialty.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

The oyster business is a business of itself, employing a great many million of dollars, and it is unreasonable to expect the jobbers to effect this efficiency when they are treating this business as a side line. We devote our entire organization to oysters. Our "Coast Sealed" oysters stand for more with the Canadian trade than all other brands combined.

We solicit your enquiry as to prices, etc.

TEA BLENDERS TO THE TRADE

J. F. EBY, President. HUGH BLAIN, Vice-President.

Poor, Low-Grown Teas are Cheap
Fine, High-Grown Teas are Dear

A customer remarked to the principal of this firm a few days ago, that we were not suffering as much from the price of tea now as we were a couple of months ago, and was greatly surprised when informed that the blend of "SALADA" Brown label—30 cent tea—and Blue label—40 cent tea—was costing us more money to-day and was more difficult to get than it had ever been at any period.

He then said he had heard that teas had dropped in price, and he was told that this was so of common teas: that the "London Grocers' Gazette" had recently stated that worse tea had been sold at Auction in London lately than any that had ever before been offered and these bad teas were sold as low as nine cents per pound.

When all teas were fetching high prices, practically every planter in the low-grown districts, where poor trees are produced, commenced "plucking coarse," which provided large quantities but lowered even their poor quality very much. The Grocers' Gazette of the 7th of September says of the last auctions: "There was again some considerable quantity of rubbish, but happily not so much as previously." "Any invoice with quality and sap in the cup was well watched."

We had bids in at the Auction in Colombo at last week's sale which were higher than anything we have hitherto offered, yet we got only very small quantities, so that we have had to advance our bids again this week and have not, at time of writing, heard the results.

Good and fine teas are bringing very high prices at Auction in London and Colombo.

THE EDWARDSBURG STARCH CO. LIMITED

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

A window display used by a Hamilton grocer, showing nothing but olives.

Promoting Olive Sales by Display

Attractive Window Containing Nothing But Olives—The Use of Show Cards and Price Tickets—Goods Shown on Which Profits Are Fair—Making The Window an Index to Interior Arrangement and Appearance.

"The largest and most complete stock of Olives ever shown," reads the show card in the centre of the above window. It is that of A. G. Bain & Co., Hamilton, Ont., and illustrates the importance Mr. Bain and his partner, J. T. Price, place in olives as a seller and profit producer.

Olives is a line that Bain & Co. show in their window practically the whole year round. This is because they have a high-class trade and because olives show a fairly good return on investment.

Many Sales Are Made.

"The window certainly sells a lot of olives," remarked Mr. Bain recently to the writer. "You would be surprised to see the number of sales made whenever we put in an exclusive olive window."

It will be observed from the above display that much attention has been placed on attractiveness in arrangement. The bottles of olives are neatly placed in carefully arranged groups so that all groups are symmetrical when the entire window is taken into consideration. This aids wonderfully in getting and holding attention. There are also a number of well written combined display and price-cards giving the name and price of the various kinds shown. Bottles priced as high as $2.50 were displayed and others 25, 40, 50, 65, 80 cents and a dollar a bottle to suit every purse and family, large or small.

Stopping the Passer-By.

On many occasions The Grocer has emphasized the importance of the window in interesting the passer-by. Here is a splendid example of the results to be obtained. The chief requisites are a clean storefront, a neat, well-arranged, inviting display, a few show cards and quality goods.

Now that the fall season is on and buying will, so far as the majority of families are concerned, be carried on on a larger scale than usual, the dealer should pay especial attention to the window. The display thrown together is practically useless. It does not promote concentration and therefore is looked at and forgotten. But a window as shown herewith is one that will attract and hold attention and will create sales long after it has been distributed.

Fine Interior Arrangement.

Bain & Co. pay the same careful attention to inside displays and have always a number of most attractive arrangements of bottled and canned goods. The window brings in the passer-by and the interior display makes extra sales, all of which so frequently lead to new permanent customers.

The window, too, bespeaks the nature of the interior as any observant person much have long since noticed. And wherever one finds a neat, compelling window-display backed up by careful interior arrangement, there is almost sure to be found a successful merchant. The average person likes to buy where buying is a pleasure and where good goods can be depended upon.

A Mayor Talks on Need of "Middlemen"

Demonstrates in Simple, Positive, Truths Why the Middleman Must Continue to Exist—There Must be Someone to Distribute the Goods, He Says — How Deputations Asking for Elimination of Middlemen Have Been Treated —Cause of High Cost of Living Explained.

The middleman—that is the man who comes between producer and consumer, and the retail grocer must be considered as such—is still being harassed by a certain clique, doing its best to charge him with the high cost of living.

It is pretty nearly time certain daily newspapers and others called a halt to this unfair and unfounded talk about the retailer standing is the way of lower prices on foodstuffs. "Eliminate the middleman," they say, "and prices will come down.

But the middleman cannot be eliminated. He is a necessity to the community, and must exist. On the face of it, it may appear that if the producer sold direct he could make more money and still sell less than retailers' prices. But when the surface is thrown off, quite a new aspect of the case arises. The producer can sell direct but he cannot get all his money. He has open accounts with a hundred and one different people, some honest and others not. He has a burdensome bookkeeping system to maintain; he loses time and time is money particularly in harvest time; he has extra tear and wear of vehicles to contend with; disputed accounts, long delays for money which he wants immediately, etc., etc.

So he sells to middlemen, gets his money at once—and sometimes in advance—eliminates losses, saves time and has an altogether happier and contented time.

Mayor Gaynor's Apt Address.

Mayor Gaynor, of New York, hit the nail on the head some time ago in an address to commission men assembled in convention in that city. His opening statements are particularly poignant so far as the necessity of the middleman is concerned. His exact words were:—

"The chairman just tells me that you come from a large number of cities throughout the country, probably from all the States or most of the States, and that you are commission merchants. I know what that means here. Some people call them middlemen, and now and then a delegation comes up to the city hall and I receive them and find their object is to abolish the middlemen altogether and get rid of him. They simply want him knocked on the head. They accuse him of high prices and everything, and of course I have to listen to all that whether I believe it or not, the same as you have to listen to me now whether you believe me or not. And they make out a very bad case against you as far as words go, but the last two that I received I took the opposite side with them to some extent,—as much, in fact, as I dared to. I suppose if I was a candidate for the Governorship or the Presidency, or something, I would not have dared say a word. They do not want you at all here in this city—a great many people. They say they want to buy directly of the producer or the farmer and get rid of you, and I told the last delegation that I had no objection at all as Mayor that they do that.

Position of the Producer.

"At the same time I had to remind them that the farmer had to bring his stuff here to sell it. He had to send it here, and when it got here, there had to be somebody to receive and handle it and bring it to my basement door somehow or other, so I could eat it. Meanwhile they had to hire a place and pay rent to store it in, or a stall in a market, and if some was left over they had to keep it for next day or next week or next month, and they do tell me, really until sometimes the next year, now that the cold storage method is in vogue. I told them this and told them that the farmer was at perfect liberty to come down here himself, or to send his son or his hired man to do all this if he wants to, but that there must be somebody here to do it, and whoever was here would have to pay rent and take care of the goods and hire help and cart it about our streets, and so on. And if he had a great lot of it he would have to build a cold storage house to keep it in, too.

"It is very easy to talk, but when you come to analyze the complex affairs of life then you have to measure your mind and measure your words accordingly. This is the case in a nutshell. Somebody has to do it, and it is quite impossible for everyone to get in direct connection by parcels post or any other way with the farmer. If you want a barrel of apples here in the city you have got no place to keep it except a hot cellar. We have to buy everything by the quart and the peck and the pint.

Difficult to Get Rid Off.

"So to carry out that system we have the markets and the commission merchants and the handler of the goods and the corner grocer, who is a middleman also, and I must say I do not see how we are going to get rid of you at all. It does not seem to me a very easy job. If you know any way I suppose you will keep it to yourselves. And another reason they gave for wanting to get rid of you was that you were all getting enormously rich, your exactions were so great. But I discovered that your exactions amounted to probably less than 3 per cent. on the average, and the next time I stated that fact. And I had to hold a long correspondence with another man, and we argued it out by letter. These letters have not got into the newspapers yet, some way or another. I suppose I will wake up some morning and see them. But, finally I said to him: "If the profits are so enormous and they are all getting so rich I would advise you to join that business right off, because that is what we are all looking for."

Thus does a prominent citizen of a large city place in concise form reasons for the existence of the middleman that cannot be contested. His address was so interesting that it is difficult to refrain from quoting it all. Lack of space prevents this but here are some further excerpts:—

The Rule of Supply and Demand.

"And then some say you are the ones who are responsible for the high cost of living. There is a terrible indictment against you down here in New York, but I may as well give it all to you. I will conceal nothing, however your feelings may be hurt. The high prices, they say, are caused by you. There again you have the great rule of supply and demand to regulate it all. I do not know anything not regulated by that rule. Even rents are regulated by that rule. Some people tell me that when the taxes go up in this city the rents go up, and they abuse us accordingly, and I have to reply, 'My dear sir, if we were to double the taxes in the city, the rents would not go up a dollar. They would be more apt to go down than to go up, as they depend on the supply of houses and stores, and on nothing else.' If high taxes made high rents the landlord could whistle at the tax collector. What would the landlord care about it He would simply throw it on his tenant, that would be all. But he knows very well that he cannot do it; that although his tax bill goes up his rent bill is just as apt to go down.

World Wide High Prices.

"And so the talk goes on. Take it home with you and see whether you are the cause of all these evils. We do pay high prices. Prices are high all over the country. Some of the statesmen, candidates for President and otherwise, who come here and get interviewed—get interviewed, most of them, give this reason or that reason for high prices and condemn the high prices severely. Some say it is the tariff, and some say it is this and that, but local to this country. They always give a local cause. But it so happens that these high prices are all over the world as well as here. They are talking about it in Europe, London, Paris, Berlin and Rome, just the same as we are talking of it here. Everybody is condemning high prices and everybody is trying to get the highest price he can all the time. So none of them seems to stop to think whether high prices are evil at all.

"A good many years ago I read the history of prices in several books and by different authors, and the history of the production of the special metals, and I am able to say to you and you can verify it for yourselves by getting any work on the money metals, such as Walker's work on Bimetallism, or any you want to name, that all the periods of prosperity in the modern world—I will not go to ancient times—have been periods of high prices brought on by the large productions for the time being of gold and silver before silver was demonetized.

"The periods of prosperity are periods of high and rising prices. The periods of adversity are the periods of low prices and falling prices. Wait, you ladies and gentlemen, for twenty-five years or less, until the period of falling prices and low prices sets in, and then you will see hard times and you will have reason to complain. No man wants to do business on a falling market unless he is a mere gambler. If he buys anything to-day he wants to sell it at a little more to-morrow, and if prices are falling and he has to sell it at less it is only a question of time when he is out of business. He has reason to complain of low prices, that man."

In the above Mayor Gaynor has given some sound reasoning—reasoning that many of our newspaper writers on high cost-of-living causes would do well to think over. They need to be enlightened.

Troubles in Evaporated Apple Business

There is no Government Inspection and Some Goods Are Packed in Inferior Manner—Chief Troubles Are Too Much Moisture, Causing Fermentation and Cores and Seeds—Matter Being Taken Up With Government and Packers—Three Grades Are Suggested.

That the evaporated apple business of Canada is not on as satisfactory basis as it might be, is known to many a wholesaler throughout the Dominion as well as foreign importers. The trouble seems to be due to improper attention paid by packers. Cars of evaps have been known to ferment on account of too much moisture; cases have been sent out containing seeds and cores, and apples dark in color and badly peeled have also been found.

There is, however, every possibility that improvement in the packing of evaps will be soon effected. W. H. Millman, of W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto, has for some time been looking into existing conditions and is now in touch with the Federal Government and particularly with Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, to see whether the packing and marketing of evaporated apples can be placed on better basis.

Mr. Millman returned recently from a month's trip in Western Canada where he went particularly into the condition of evaps when they reach the wholesale grocers of the West.

He has written a letter to manufacturers of evaporated apples in Ontario calling attention to the troubles experienced through inefficient cure and packing, and suggesting remedies. In this letter he states that not less than ten different buyers asked him to look at some of the goods they received from Ontario.

"Some of them," he adds in that letter, "condemned the goods in very strong terms; a few of their remarks I would scarcely like to see in print. Of one thing I am quite convinced, if we continue sending the goods like we have sent into that country, we shall lose the business entirely.

Some Heavy Losses.

"I saw no less than five different cars in the West that were fermented, caused by not being properly cured when packed. These will be almost an entire loss. Three cars were rejected and stored to the order of the shipper, in these cases, of course, the shipper will have to stand the loss which will be almost the full amount of the invoice.

"There were many complaints that the apples were dark in color, badly peeled and cored, and small pieces of cores and seeds left in; but the worst feature was too much moisture."

"All these things must be remedied and at once.

Has Interviewed Government.

"I felt ashamed when opening a number of boxes to see that our Government allowed such goods to be shipped. I have already intimated to our Government at Ottawa that some remedy must be put in force in order to retain this profitable business, which amounts to a very large amount of money every season for the Ontario grower, and I sincerely trust that before another season passes a law will be enacted as to grading, weights and all other vital points.

"Western buyers still prefer good Ontario stock to the California goods, but the packers of the latter put their stock up more uniformly and it is cleaner, in fact, nicer in every way, so that it is up to you to improve the standard."

Mr. Millman goes on to show how neatly dried peaches and apricots from California are packed and advocates packages containing 12½ and 25 pounds as well as 50's.

Three Grades Suggested.

He is asking the Government to have a law passed making each factory register, receiving a stamp so as to identify the pack, and so that the packer may be identified if he ships inferior fruit, the fruit to be graded into three qualities, say "Choice," "Prime," and "Standard." All boxes could then be inspected to determine whether the guarantee of weight and grade are correct as stamped. This, Mr. Millman claims, would put the evaporated apple business on a sound basis. It would allow the manufacturer who puts up choice goods to get a choice price for them, whereas the man who packed only standard goods would have to suffer so far as price is concerned.

Conditions Favor Inferior Goods.

As the matter stands now there is no encouragement for a manufacturer to pack good fruit. The price is all the same, and in a carload it would probably mean a hundred dollars less to the packer to be a little careless. Competition is keen and lowest price is accepted so that an agent for a packer cannot afford to raise the price even if the goods he offers are better. With the grading as indicated above, a buyer will not object to paying more for good stock if he has a market for it.

That the evaporated apple business in Ontario is important is seen from the fact that some 200 carloads are packed annually averaging nearly $2,000 per car—$400,000 in all.

ROLLED OAT SITUATION.

It has been announced by millers that rolled oat prices will be advanced 25 cents per barrel on Saturday of this week. This upward movement was not anticipated. Indeed, the general impression seemed to be that lower prices were in order.

The explanation of the pending advance seems to be the scarcity of old oats of milling quality. This has been a feature for some time and certain men in the trade wondered at the recent decline in the face of this fact. The approaching new crop no doubt was the weakening factor. However, shortage in milling oats has become more acute. Some mills have not had enough to keep running. Thus the advance.

The trade are now concerned regarding what can be expected of the future. The oat crop in Canada promises to be large, although there has been some talk that frost may impair the milling quality of unharvested crop. Indeed this was offered in part by some millers as cause of present firmness. In a good many places unripe oats are being cut for green feed but in as many more places farmers have not yet abandoned hope of saving balance of the standing crop.

It is still held that crop promises quite well, the yield across the line is large and this should work for easiness when new crop starts to move freely. However, much depends on detrimental effects of adverse conditions now making their appearance.

LEMON PRICES HIGH.

Following last week's warm weather which stimulated demand considerably and cut further into already well depleted stocks, lemon prices have been advanced at several centres. Indeed they have attained a record figure on some markets.

These further advances do not come altogether as a surprise for it has been pointed out before that no shipments of any account will be coming along before new crop from Sicily, and that present stocks will have to tide the markets over to that time, which will probably be close on November 1.

Conditions vary somewhat on different Canadian centres, but in some places stocks are decidedly small. Of course supplies may be secured across the line, but at equally high prices. California lemons are naturally high also.

We have had a high lemon market all summer and it seems as if prices will continue high until new crop arrives. Advance prices on new crop Sicily stock also indicate a higher opening figure than last year, by about 25 to 50 cents per case.

COCOANUT SUPPLIES SHORT.

Cocoanut manufacturers are experiencing great difficulty in securing supplies, owing to considerable juggling going on in markets at the centres of production. It would seem that the growers are now in a position to demand just what price they fix so well has the market been cornered, and some slight indication of the way things are going against Canadian manufacturers is given in the fact that prices have advanced 60 shillings within fourteen days.

Bearing this in mind, retailers should act accordingly. Authoritative proof has been secured that the amount of cocoanuts reaching Canadian points now is insignificant compared to what it should be.

When supplies of raw material are not forthcoming the finished product must be difficult to secure.

NEW BUSINESS FOR THE GROCER.

June may be acclaimed as the month of many marriages but apparently it has a close competition for the honor of first place in the present month. A glance at the marriage columns of the daily papers brings home quite forcefully the fact that September brides are quite plentiful this year—quite a crop, as the farmer would say.

Brush aside the question of this being leap year. Far be it from anyone to even intimate that this has any bearing whatever on the numerous September marriages. The real important point to the grocer is that many new homes are being opened up throughout the land.

To the live grocer this gives a cue which will undoubtedly mean more business, for the trade of the newly married couple is desirable. As they are just entering the realm of housekeeping, there is an extensive supply of groceries which they will require. Even this initial business is worth going after, but in addition it means also the likelihood of securing their trade for some time to come.

All those aggressive methods which the live dealer adopted during June to attract the attention of the new bride may well be repeated by others along the same line brought into play.

Suppose that the young couple have just returned from their bridal tour. They cannot live for long on the proverbial love. The pantry must be stocked. Some one is going to get the business. Does it not stand to reason that the dealer with an ad in the local paper or a window display directly appealing to them will secure their trade?

The window is a big factor in getting this business, and some attractive trims along this line that will bring good results may be arranged. An appropriate setting is of course essential and it will pay the grocer to give some time and trouble to a window. Not only will it catch the eye of the newly married, but it will interest all others and accordingly possesses a general advertising value.

WHY MIDDLEMEN MUST EXIST.

The man who says the "middlemen" must be eliminated, has as much chance to see the realization of his dream as a boiled snowball has to exist. Middlemen are those who come between the producer and consumer, and while we may be able to get along with less middlemen, yet we cannot without them at all. They are an absolute necessity.

On another page of this issue there are some very inspiring extracts from a speech made some time ago by Mayor Gaynor of New York City. The Mayor was talking to middlemen—in this case they were commission men from various parts of the country—and he told them in simple language and by simple illustrations why middlemen were necessary. The article should be read by every dealer because of the simplicity and forcefulness of the conclusions arrived at.

Gaynor would be quite pleased to see the farmers and other foodstuff producers come into New York and sell direct to the consuming public if they wanted to; but they don't. They haven't time to stay a week peddling their wares about the city. If they did that, they would have a storage to maintain, and an office as well as extra help. This is not their purpose. The majority want to get their produce to a market as quickly as possible, and with the least work and worry. Price comes next. So naturally it has to go through the hands of men who have facilities for storing those products and selling them when a market arrives.

This explains the existence of commission men and wholesalers who in turn sell to the retail trade because they have not the facilities to retail themselves. If they could make more money selling retail, then naturally the majority would sell that way.

And so in an effective manner does Mayor Gaynor tell of the need of the middleman. He also talks about the high cost of living and shows how politicians for party purposes and others are so anxious to lay the blame on the tariff or other local alleged causes, such as the middlemen, when as a matter of fact, this high cost of living is world-wide and due to small production last year and hence, small supplies.

IMPROVING EVAPORATED APPLES.

The tide of foodstuff demand in Canada has for many years been swinging to quality and purity. Yet in the case of evaporated apples—as will be seen from another page in this issue—there is apparently no government regulation that induces manufacturers to pack a high-grade fruit. The result has been that many packers have continued to put up inferior goods, thereby sacrificing reputation for reduction in manufacturing cost, and placing on the market an article that is difficult in many cases to sell.

An interview with W. H. Millman who has recently returned from a trip west, shows that goods are being sent there from Ontario which turn out unfit for use. At the same time similar goods are being sent to Holland and other foreign countries, all of which is bound to reflect on Canada's honesty.

If Mr. Millman succeeds in placing the evaporated apple business on a better basis, the thanks of the trade are due him. His proposition to the government is that each packer will register, probably at a nominal fee, so that he will come under the jurisdiction of government supervision. He will then be given a stamp with which to mark all his goods, by which means they will be traceable wherever sent. Goods will be divided under three grades, namely, Choice, Prime, and Standard, so that a packer will be able to get more money for best fruit.

The matter is now being taken up with the Minister of Trade and Commerce and any good results derived will be very acceptable to those who sell evaporated apples to the trade.

TREND OF COST OF LIVING.

The decline of two points in the Department of Labor's index number of wholesale prices for July, after a continuous rise for twelve months, was followed in August by another drop, the index number standing at 133.4 as compared with 134.8 the previous month. Last year, however, at this date it stood at only 127.2.

The decline during August was due chiefly to decreases in prices of grains and fodders, fruits and vegetables, with slight increases in dairy products, fish, metals, and coal. These index numbers are percentages of the average prices of some 250 articles during the decade 1890-1899.

This follows up the contention of The Grocer made in last week's issue and further illustrates that the trend of living cost is downward. This is attributable to the natural cause of increased production which will likely be felt at least to some extent the world over this year.

Schedule for the Automobile Driver

Making the Boys Do Their Own Thinking and Get Use of Brains of Others—Benefit of Having Definite Duties for Employes to Perform—Keeping the Car in Good Shape for Delivery.

* By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I was figuring on how best to handle the auto problem after I got back to manage my store. The entire proposition was new to me, because I do not know a thing about autos—hardly know a wheel from a cylinder. Moreover, I have some pet theories about this. One is that I do not have to know; another is that I do not want to know. My reasoning is that I have not known up-to-date, yet autos have reached great development. If they have got this far without me, they will probably go the rest of the way. I never knew much about horses—could not tell a single "point" with any certainty. Yet for years I had bought, owned, sold and buried horses—why not the same with autos In other words, why should I know EVERYTHING in detail, about my business

What is the Expert For.

Stop to think of some of the advantages hereof. If you do not know a thing nobody puts anything up to your judgment. Then you are in position to put it all onto the "expert" whom you have hired because he said he could do this work. You can simply say: "The car does not run. It is up to you. If it does not run to-morrow morning, we shall not need you any longer, for we must have men who can keep our cars running." I soon had a chance to try this theory.

On the basis, I suppose, that " a new broom sweeps clean," the driver who is supposed to be the prime expert in our force—and I now say supposed advisedly—came to me with a confidential air and asked me, kind of "man-to-man," if I did not think his car should be painted up again. I went with him to the back door, where his car was standing and said: "Well, let us see about this. Maybe it does and maybe it does not. Let's look." I looked accordingly and then I said to him: "Howard, how long is it since that car has been washed?" He was a little nonplussed for answer: but stammered something about "few days ago; could not get onto the wash-table," etc. Then I said: "My boy, you and I shall have to talk this all over at leisure. We must get better acquainted so we understand each other. Meantime I can say to you that I am always ready to have my equipment kept up in the best manner—up to the minute—and like it that way; but I must have co-operation before I can do that. For instance, can you tell me what good it would do for me to paint that car all up if you are not going to keep it clean? If you show no pride in your car—YOUR car, I said—of what use will my pride be?

Proper Attention Not Given.

"Now, I have a theory that our auto management is all wrong. Do not get excited now; I said OURS not yours. Yours is wrong, but that is only partly your fault. It is up to all of us. Let us plan a way to avoid that in future. Let us find a way to make our management, including yours, scientific and efficient. Now, I know that we are not doing the right thing by our cars. They are greased, oiled, washed and adjusted not as a matter of routine, but when we think they need it—or when they fail to go any further; and such failure is always due to our faulty handling aforesaid.

"I am satisfied that if we gave our autos certain routine, daily care, like we would give a horse, we shall avoid trouble entirely; have our cars constantly on the job; cut repairs to a minimum and have things ship-shape every day in the year. But we must be forehanded to do that; we cannot be careless and be sorry afterwards. Do you agree with me?" Howard did agree—with his mouth—heartily.

So I set him at the task of planning a routine. I had him meet me on a closed afternoon and we talked over everything. When I talked about washing, he asked me if "I thought it was fair" to ask a man to wash a car after a hard day's work—and I told him NO. I did not. But I did consider it fair, and right, for him to go to work at 6 a.m. instead of 7; and put in two hours every morning on certain fixed duties in connection with his car, going over such duties regularly, every day, and just so much every day. With horses to handle, he would be at the barn at 6, would have to work all day, and would have his barn work to do at night, no matter when he got in. Why, then, should he not put in nearly as many hours at a neater, cleaner job, seeing especially that he was getting much better pay? He agreed. So I set him the task of figuring out a daily schedule, and I want you to note that part of it particularly because it is important. Had I set the pace and told him what to do, it would have been my plan—see? Then if he had failed to work it, the fault would have been mine. But as he made the plan himself, he cannot go back on it very well; for if he fails to make it work, or does not live up to the hours, I simply say: "Your plan, you know, Howard—not mine. Surely you can live up to the schedule you devised yourself." There I have him. Here I will insert the Schedule and comment further next week, for this is a big subject and I like to go into details, because in that way I hope to enable you to benefit from my experience. Here it is:

Automobile Work.

Note.—The boss only hires you; he does not promote you nor fire you. You do the promoting or firing yourself. All the boss does is endorse your decision.—This is truth. Think it over.

* * *

Don't turn steering wheel while car is standing—that cuts the tires; it does not simply wear them.

Don't reverse engine or go backward until machine comes to a full stop.

Don't speed engine while standing still. Reduce speed to a minimum.

Don't try to break speed limits. Slow down while crossing tracks or other rough places.

Daily Routine on Cars.

Work to begin at 6 o'clock sharp every morning.

1. Monday (a.m.).—Wash car; fill grease cups; grease wheels; fill sight feed pump oiler; examine fan belt, adjust if necessary; see that all taps are tight; fill crank case; get order book.

Noon.—Clean timer; fill crank case; examine spark plugs.

(Note.—Once each week, in afternoon by special arrangement, chains to be cleaned and boiled in tallow.)

2. Tuesday (a.m.).—Wash engine; oil crank and transmission case; clean timer; fill sight feed pump oiler; examine and adjust fan belt; get order book.

Noon.—Fill crank case.

3. Wednesday (a.m.).—Oil differential; fill sight feed pump oiler; turn grease cups; wash car; examine and adjust fan belt; fill crank case; get order book.

Noon.—Clean timer; examine and adjust clutch bands; examine steering gears; fill crank case.

4. Thursday (a.m.).—Examine spark plugs; clean timer; fill sight feed pump oiler; oil crank and transmission case; examine and adjust fan belt; get order book.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Noon.—Fill crank case.

5. Friday (a.m).—Fill sight feed pump oiler; turn grease cups; wash car; examine and adjust fan belt; fill crank case; get order book.

Noon.—Fill crank case; clean timer.

6. Saturday (a.m.)—Oil crank and transmission case; clean timer; fill sight feed pump oiler; examine and adjust fan belt; go over brass work; get order book.

Noon.—Fill crank case; adjust valves.

Go over all valves every fourth Sunday, beginning July 14.

Be ready for delivery work at 7.55 every morning.

Make no alteration in the schedule and do not deviate from it in any manner except on order; but suggestions are always gladly considered and orders will be promptly issued for improving changes.

Remember: Schedules are not automatic—things do not do themselves.

Comments on Outside Grocery Displays

Member of R. G. A. Would Prohibit This Altogether—Question of Early Closing Discussed—Does it Affect Business if Neighbors do Not Close as Well?—More Members Wanted to Attend Meetings.

Toronto, Sept. 19.—(Special).—The displaying of goods outside, the matter of early closing and the desirability of having a larger attendance at meetings were some of the questions which came up for discussion at the monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers Association on Monday night.

In regard to outside displays, D. W. Clark would be in favor of a law forcing everything to be kept inside, and even cutting off the 18 inches which is now allowed at the front for display purposes. He would include not only food products, but hardware and other lines.

"There are many merchants putting in costly store fronts for the sanitary display of goods to advantage," he protested, "while others will take up the whole walk. I think everything should be kept inside so that people can see what is in the windows."

An Opposition Voice.

"I am not in favor of such a law," declared J. S. Bond. "Some stores are very small and have to show many lines outside. It is all right for the big stores, but 75 per cent. of the grocery stores off the main street are small."

The much discussed question of early closing was again on the slate. A member wanted to know why an early closing by-law for grocers couldn't be enforced.

"The way to solve the question," said J. S. Bond, "is to have all grocers pay a license. It need only be a nominal fee, but it would bring the grocers under civic control and make the enforcing of a by-law possible."

"That again brings up the question of defining a grocer," commented Bailey Snow.

"Why, any one who carries any groceries," announced another, "is a grocer."

Early Closing Didn't Hurt Him.

D. W. Clark thought that it didn't make any difference to a grocer whether his neighbor closed or not. All did not agree with this, however, although S. W. Hall had an example to back up this statement. He used to keep open until late hours. He then started to close at 8 o'clock, and it had no detrimental effects whatever on his business.

"Why can't something be done to increase the attendance at our meetings," said C. Fry. "We haven't nearly as many attending as we should, considering our membership. To get best results we need to get the members out, and I think that something along the social line would prove a drawing card." He suggested something like a euchre contest between the east and the west ends of the city.

"The cold nights are coming on now," followed J. S. Bond," and we ought to be able to get more members out. We have many new members who have never attended. We could have some social entertainment here that wouldn't cost much, but which would bring the members out."

D. McLean reported on the excellent outing which the Toronto Grocers had at the Hamilton Hump, while D. W. Clark had some kind words to say about the hospitality of the London grocers.

Heard at the Meeting.

"I think I will close on Wednesday afternoon the year round. I would like to close Saturday at 1 o'clock.

"I would close on Wednesday afternoon all the year round if my neighbors would."

"I hear there is an agitation on foot making it necessary that every peddler have a shop or place of business."

"There would be a big objection to licensing grocers. Taxes are already high."

"Yes, I have to pay $4.60 for the sidewalk area to light my cellar."

"We soon won't be able to look outside without paying."

"We have made a rule that all orders given after 12 o'clock will not be delivered until next morning."

Following items appeared in The Canadian Grocer of September 23, 1892:—

"Ganong Bros., confectioners, St. Stephen, N.B., have opened an office in Toronto at 67 Yonge St. Mr. Lyle, who has lately been representing them in British Columbia, has been transferred to Toronto."

Editor's Note.—Ganong Bros. are still in business at St. Stephen, after the lapse of twenty years.

In our issue of September 23, 1892, a report is given of a meeting of the London, Ont., Retail Grocers' Association at which election of officers took place with the following result: President, W. H. Ferguson, (re-elected); vice-president, Jno. Moule; secretary, E. Sutton, (re-elected); treasurer, C. J. Wall, (re-elected); directors, J. L. Fitzgerald, W. H. McCutcheon, F. Harly, R. A. Jones. T. Rowat and L. H. Scandrett were elected auditors.

Twenty years ago at this time the Canadian Industrial Exhibition was being held in Toronto and in this connection this item will be of interest:

"The following merchants called at the office of The Grocer last week: Wm. Jewell, Oshawa; W. A. Grier, Owen Sound; A. Baird, St. Mary's; W. B. Hogarth, Tilsonburg; Geo. P. Leith, Spry; C. W. Belding, Katrine."

IS THIS GOING TOO FAR?

A little girl came into the store with an order for two pounds of sugar, a package of starch, some flour, salt and coffee. Her purchase came to 87 cents.

"Mother will have a dollar to-morrow," she said, "and she will pay you then."

The grocer nodded, "all right."

"And she wants the change now," the child added. "She needs the money to buy thread."

Again Time to Push House Cleaning Goods

Semi-Annual Cleaning Fever Now Prevalent—Extensive List of Goods Housewife Will Require—Value of Getting Early Start—Possibilities in Brushes and Polishes—Methods to Use to Get Best Results.

It's in the air. It has been so ever since the advent of the fall days. You yourself have probably noticed it. You get up some fine morning to find an uneasy look on the countenance of your wife or mother, as the case may be, that is difficult to interpret. You have seen a similar look before, but cannot remember exactly when. You half feel that she is going to suggest that the lawn needs trimming. But no, it is not that. When you return at night, she is viewing the parlor with that look that plainly denotes that it pleaseth her not. You know then what is coming. At dinner she calmy announces that a terrible amount of dust and dirt has collected about the house during the summer and that she is going to begin fall housecleaning shortly.

Cannot Check the Fever.

Thus it is in myriads of homes throughout the land at the present time. An epidemic of house-cleaning is on the way. There is no use in trying to check it, for like any other fever, it must run its course. The average woman is never satisfied unless she is moving things about the house and in general attempting to add to its attractiveness.

This usual fall activity which is already looming up large is bound to prove of a great deal of benefit to the grocer for the housewife will be wanting a variety of house-cleaning necessities for her campaign. This trade the grocer should prepare to care for. He should do so early.

Get Started Now.

There is much to be gained by getting off to an early start. The sprinter in the race knows well the advantage of it and so should the business man in the race for trade. It is almost a self evident fact, but like many other truths, it needs to receive emphasis at times. This is one of those times.

There are always a certain number of people who do things early in the season. This is shown in the case of preserving and pickling, but is more marked in the case of house-cleaning. The housewife can hardly restrain herself until she gets started tearing the carpets up and the curtains down and really gets the semi-annual clean up under way. For this reason a display early in the season is likely to create more interest and business than later on. It will mean immediate business from those who have already been considering the question while it will pave the way for business with those who are a little tardier.

The Demand Exists.

This is recognized by live grocers and already some dealers have opened their campaign and are finding good results. There is no denying the fact that there is going to be a demand. People have returned and are returning from the summer resorts. Their homes have been closed during the summer and will require no little attention. Even those homes which have been kept open will be found to have collected a great deal of dust and dirt and the cooler weather naturally suggests to the housewife that it is time she was cleaning up.

Lines to Push.

There is quite an extensive variety of lines which are in demand for housecleaning and in which the dealer should not only now anticipate his wants, but begin to push. The outstanding article which will be in demand is of course soap, and the grocers should see that the housewife is kept well supplied with this essential. Then we have liquid and powdered ammonia, dust absorbers, borax, soap powder, polishing powders and creams, cleansers and lyes, all of which have their particular merits which the housewife should be made acquainted with.

Get After Polish Trade.

A line of endeavor which in some cases has not been worked to best advantage by the retail grocer and which offers marked possibilities is the sale of polishes. The dealer should not be content with featuring stove polish only as is frequently the case, but should also push furniture, wall, silverware and metal polishes, all of which have their special purpose in the household, and will find considerable sale if their good points are properly exploited.

Brush Possibilities.

While on the question of housecleaning and the lines which are required in the work, it is well to give some emphasis to the trade in brushes.

The major portion of this business of recent years has been going to the mail order houses and departmental stores, and apparently for no other reason than that smaller retailers have not been giving them the required amount of attention. True it is that every grocer keeps scrub brushes and probably stove brushes, but this far from completes the list of brushes which the housewife requires and the grocer and general merchant can handle to advantage. There are stove brushes, bannister brushes, window brushes and hair floor brooms. Then come cornice dusters for ceilings and walls, glass jar brushes and plate brushes. These all have their special uses and will find sale if properly pushed.

Methods to Use.

Having decided that the housecleaning trade is worth going after and the lines which will be required, the question of how to present them to customers so as to create business arises. It should be the endeavor of the grocer to create a housecleaning atmosphere. This can be done by having the goods prominently on display by an abundance of show cards featuring them and by talking them strongly to customers.

The value of an attractive window trim of these lines should be considerable, and a window should be devoted to them as often as possible during the season. Last, but by no means least, as a means of creating sales, comes advertising. All combined bring the best results.

SALMON CANNERS AFFECTED.

British Columbia salmon canners are confronted with the possible embarrassment of their operations in France as the result of a bill now pending before the French Parliament. Some years ago the sardine industry in France suffered severely from imitations, such fish as pilchards, sprats and small herrings being tinned in the same manner. In 1906 a law was passed directing that in the case of sardines, tinned vegetables and tinned plums, the name of the country of origin should be stamped on the bottom of the receptacle in letters at least four millimetres (about one-sixth of an inch) high.

A bill now is pending in the French Chamber extending the law of 1906 to "all foreign fish preserves" entering France. It was at first proposed to include lobsters in this enactment, but this has been dropped. The British Columbia canners take the ground that it would be impracticable so to mark their cans; their trade with France amounts to only some six per cent. of their total output.

No accusation is made in France against the quality of Canadian salmon. It is understood that the French authorities take the ground that it would be impossible to discriminate in favor of Canada against other countries.

Current News of the Week

Quebec And Maritime Provinces.

Ephrem Corbeil, grocer, Montreal, has registered.

Kyle & Stevenson, grocers, Montreal, have sold to Mitchell & Peniston.

The new warehouse of Fraser, Ltd., Montreal, wholesale grocers, is almost completed.

Moffatt Scott & Co., has sold his general store at Campbellton, N.B., to James P. Alexander.

Labrecque & Pellerin, Montreal, have apopinted John J. Gilmor & Co., Winnipeg, agents in Western Canada for their jams and catsups.

The Eastern Trading Co., Limited, has been incorporated to take over the general store business now carried on by A. G. Clough, Ayer's Cliff, Quebec.

The Auto Roachkiller Co., Montreal, will soon occupy new premises on St. Vincent St. S. Pelland, formerly with the Sapho Mfg. Co., Limited, Montreal, has assumed the managership of the company.

Bernard Pink of E. &T. Pink Co., London, has arrived at Montreal, where he will spend a few days prior to visit to Toronto. After that he will call on importers throughout the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland.

The Harbor Commissioners of Montreal intend increasing the capacity of their oldest elevator by over 1,500,000 bushels. The new elevator being built on the wharf is nearing completion, the capacity being unusually large.

The Oriental Produce Co., 743 St. Lawrence Boulevard, Montreal, have made arrangements with the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Limited, of Toronto for the handling of their specialty. The manufacturers have also secured larger premises.

The Shell Fish Commission appointed by the Dominion Government to investigate into the shell-fishing conditions and the general workings of the industry about the Maritime Provinces, assembled in St. John, N.B., last week, and heard much evidence of an important and profitable nature. Some local dealers were before the board and gave testimony regarding local conditions, and spoke of ways in which they thought they might be improved upon.

The authorities responsible for the paving and repairing of Montreal streets and lanes must think that wholesale grocers are blessed with a more than ordinary amount of patience. On Saturday last workmen started to tear up the lane at rear of Mathewson's Sons' wholesale grocers, establishment and instead of beginning at the end where no shipping took place, they placed a barrier at both ends, thus blocking both exits, with the result that the firm in question had to remove all goods through the offices with a great amount of annoyance. One would imagine that due notice would have been given so that arrangements could have been made to have the goods lowered from the roof!

Ontario.

J. V. Ross has sold his grocery at Belleville, Ont.

A. M. Young, grocer, Toronto, has sold to J. W. Harper.

Lavalley & Bertrand, grocers, Ottawa, are succeeded by Fred Lavalley.

Thos. S. Blues, grocer, Seaforth, Ont., has sold his business to Wm. W. Reid.

The general store of Wesley Babcock, Hartington Station, Ont., was destroyed by fire last week.

Woodville & Son, Welland Ont. will add a cold storage building to cost $4,000 to be used in connection with their canning factory.

Besides the confiscation of several other kinds of edibles there were 9,508 pounds of fish sent to the crematory in Toronto last month.

M. G. Parrington, who has been conducting a general store at Dunsfoord, Ont., which he purchased from Wilmot F. Webster, of Oakwood, has sold to R. Bradley.

A. B. Damude, of A. B. Damude & Co., general merchants, Fonthill, Ont., was married on Sept. 11 at Jarvis, Ont., to Miss Kathleen Ross. Mr. Damude has been identified with the above firm for about two years.

Mathews-Laing, Limited, will erect a cold storage warehouse and wholesale house at Fort William. Plans which call for the erection of a new building at an estimated cost of $50,000 have been prepared and approved.

J. E. McIntyre, Alvinston, Ont., has disposed of his grocery business to James Karr, who will take possession the latter part of the month. Mr. McIntyre will remain in Alvinston.

W. H. Millman, of W. H. Millman & Sons, grocery brokers, Toronto, spent three days at the London, Ont., Fair last week, judging light horses. Mr. Millman has been a judge of horses at this Fair for 10 consecutive years.

Two "young fellows" connected with the grocery trade in Toronto are off on a trip to Winnipeg this week. They are R. Davies, Sr., who has been in the grocery business in Toronto for 35 years, for 25 of which he has been located on Homewood Ave., and James Mortimer, who for 41 years has been a traveler for Christie Brown & Co., of Toronto. They will be gone a month, taking in Chicago on their trip.

Western Canada.

Reginald Welch, grocer, Victoria, B. C., has sold his business.

M. Ostorowski, grocer, Winnipeg, is succeeded by D. Wassal.

Hardy & Co., general merchant, Midway, B.C., has sold to J. G. McMynn.

A. Thompson has sold his general store at Oak Lake, Man., to Breber & Tipp.

W. J. Ruston has purchased the general store of W. Mowat at Cypress River, Man.

O'Keefe & Martin, Vernon, B.C., have purchased grocery stock of Cooper & Christien.

Lokmann & Molitor, grocers, Windthorst, Sask., have sold to Orth-Newkirchen & Molitor.

C. C. Cronk & Co., general merchants, Moose Jaw, Sask., have been succeeded by N. H. Carswell.

Escott & Harmer, Winnipeg, have recently been appointed agents for Acadia Sugar Refining Co., in Western Canada.

The Canadian Grain Company, Limited, has been incorporated with capital of $100,000. Head office is in Saskatoon, Sask.

C. H. Glanville, Vermilion, Alta., has bought out the Granville, Hughes Co. He will open a grocery department about Oct. 1.

The convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada was held in Moose Jaw, Sask., on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. A report of the proceedings will appear in next week's issue of The Grocer.

THE BEAN CROP IN KENT.

Estimate Fallen Somewhat, Due to Unfavorable Weather.

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 19.—Special.—Earlier in the season, it was forecast that, with favorable weather and satisfactory conditions generally, the Ontario bean crop would reach 800,000 bushels, the lower yield per acre this year being counterbalanced by the large acreage shown.

Since then, the conditions have hardly come up to the sanguine expectations on which this prediction was based. There has been considerable wet weather, together with one or two very severe storms, which were reported at the time to have done much damage to the beans. As a result, the crop will fall considerably short of the 800,000 bushels predicted.

Bean pulling is now in full swing, and it is still problematical how the crop will turn out. On the underdrained clay lands, according to the statement of Warden James Clayton, the crop will run about 20 bushels to the acre.

The conditions for harvesting thus far have been good, there being little rain recently, and this will help to save what is left of the crop. The warm weather in the first half of September has also helped the crop to mature successfully.

Reports Half a Crop.

According to the statement of Edward Brien of Howard, who has been traveling through the bean growing section as judge of the field crop competitions for the Ontario Bean Growers' Association, beans generally will be about half a crop. Allowing for an acreage larger than usual, this might, at a rough estimate, give a yield of 600,000 bushels. Anything approximating an exact figure is hard to reach, however, owing to the rather contradictory reports from the growers themselves. Generally, however, beans on high lands, or lands well underdrained, will still make a fair showing, while on low lands they are a total or practically total failure.

While exact figures are really unobtainable, there can be no doubt that weather conditions this year have been decidedly hostile to the bean crop, and that, as a consequence, there will be a marked shortage from the 1,000,000 bushel crop which has been reached in favorable years.

COMING OUT OCT. 11.

Readers of The Grocer will again soon have the annual Fall Campaign Number at their disposal. It will be issued on October 11, and we can confidently say in advance that it will be the most practical issue of The Canadian Grocer, readers have ever received.

Coming out as it does at a time when grocers are buying and otherwise preparing their fall and Christmas campaigns, it will contain ideas that will prove of value immediately—ideas that can be made to bear fruit while the fall plans are in the making.

Already the editors are in a position to announce some strong features.

Ever hear of a grocery store with a gallery? Of what use would one be? An article will appear in the Fall Number telling of a bright Ontario dealer who has built a gallery in his store. The above questions are answered.

How will you dress your 1912 Christmas window? is another pertinent question. Have you made your plans yet? The Fall Number will contain a fine collection of displays from different parts of Canada of Christmas goods. They are prize winners and will aid you in your plans.

A Kingston grocer has departed from the beaten path. He now sells goods from sample only. He has endeavored to construct an interior as highly sanitary as possible. The floor, for instance, is of marble. He gives his reasons for the change — a change which was made after an experience of twenty years. His equipment, too, is described with its uses.

Still another dealer tells how he gets the early trade for Christmas goods. "I have the bulk of them sold," he states, "while others are awaiting supplies."

These are but a few samples to show what the Fall Campaign Number of The Grocer will be like. You can count on it for a wealth of new methods that will assist you in your business.

And every merchant is anxious to increase his own business. October 11 is the "coming out" date.

RAINS DAMAGE BEAN CROPS.

Harvest Will not Likely Be as Large as Expected—Mildew on Some of The Pods.

Toronto, Sept. 19.—The bean crop in Western Ontario, according to W. H. Millman, of W. H. Millman & Sons, sustained a severe setback on account of the recent rains. Mr. Millman has recently been in Middlesex County and brought home a sample of the beans in the pod, showing how they were affected by the moisture. Mildew had started on some of them which, as soon as it gets through the pod, colors the white bean a brownish tint.

If too much rain had not fallen the bean crop would have been a splendid one. The acreage is 25 to 30 per cent. above last year and would even have been larger if many farmers had not gone into tobacco growing. In spite of the fact that the acreage is larger, Mr. Millman claims the crop will be 30 per cent. less than year ago, and there will be more poor beans as well.

The wet weather has also delayed harvesting. Last year they were being gathered in before now, but this year the harvest is two to three weeks later.

MASON ON THE THRIFTY MERCHANT.

Walt. Mason frequently describes some splendid truths in his quaint prose verses. Here is one of special interest to the retail merchant:

"To-day I called at Beeswack's store to buy some boneless cheese. The rain was falling with a roar, the mud was to my knees. Old Beeswack and his merry clerks were pawing through the shelves, and cleaning up the whole blamed works as though they'd strain themselves. 'Why not sit down,' I said, 'and rest, this wet and woozy day? No customer or moneyed guest will come along this way. Why not sit down and let things slide, and nurse your jaded feet? Why not sit down and point with pride and nuts and herring eat?'' Old Beeswack paused a moment brief, and said with a passing frown; 'The greater part of human grief is caused by sitting down. When days are bad and trade is slack, the foolish merchant sits, and broods until he breaks his back and has conniption fits. And people coming to his joint will see him mooning there, and from his portals they'll aroint, and blow their seads elsewhere. And so I whoop around my store with high and active jumps, and no one's head is getting sore and no one has the dumps.' I bought three cans of potted snuff, and muttered as I went: It's better far to make a bluff than roll in discontent.''

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Needs attention.

Coffee—Somewhat firmer.

Montreal, Sept. 19.—Sugar is a leading line in demand at the present time on account of the large volume of preserving being done. Refined remains unchanged at $4.96 per cwt., locally which should look cheap when compared with the figure ruling one year ago namely $5.95. This was the time when sugar reached its record height. Market at present is interesting and needs attention.

Trade in general lines is progressing favorably and jobbers are looking forward to a good fall trade.

SUGAR.—Market remains firm and is in an interesting condition, so interesting ,indeed, that it calls for close attention.

That the unsold Cuban sugars have been reduced to a small figure, goes without saying due to recent purchases by the U.S.A. refiners, and it is further reported that frequent attempts have been made to secure old crop European beets on same basis as last heavy purchases, but no transactions have been negotiated so far along these lines. Still, there must be a reason for the inquiries for such supplies and it is the underlying motive which will give the trade an idea of what is uppermost in the minds of those deeply interested in the future trend of the market.

DRIED FRUITS.—It would seem that the present prices on the coast for Californian products are eyed with some suspicion, if we might thus use the word, because market has become decidedly dull and buyers are few. It is reasonable to suppose then that large buyers are waiting for a reduction in price, or at any rate are determined to postpone purchases until they are fully satisfied that coast prices are solid.

Prunes are not moving as freely as one would expect for the simple reason that considerable old crop fruit purchased at a high price is still held and to put prices down to 1912 basis would mean a complete loss and that is against human nature. It is pretty certain, talking about the new crop, that conditions are by no means and have never never been reassuring and well posted dealers are not inclined to expect more than 25 per cent. of a total crop. The effect of the excessive rain is to rot the trees, and rotten trees mean cracked fruit.

The quality of the new dates from Persia now arriving is said to be excellent. The market practically everywhere is dry of dates so that we may expect some temporary flurry in prices as the various cargoes arrive.

TEAS.—Japan teas are now in limelight and the excellent cup quality promises a big season in this line at any rate. Jobbers are reported to be highly pleased with the appearance of the leaf, and as prices are favorable, a good trade is passing.

A good trade is also being done in good quality Ceylon teas.

China teas are coming along also but prices are high owing as previously reported to the heavy rate of Exchange.

COFFEE.—While no advance was recorded last week yet the tendency of coffee prices was upward. The cause may, of course, be attributed to bullish weather news, this time hail and frost being responsible for the alleged damage. Needless to say there was no change in prices locally nor as previously stated can we see any prospects of a decline for some time to come.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Opinions differ.

Valencia Raisins—New stock in at 10 cents.

Beans—Will be high.

Evaps—New goods low.

Evap Peaches and Apricots— Some concessions here.

Toronto, Sept. 19.—Business is running along in even lines with wholesalers reporting no particular cause for complaint. Farmers are rather busy yet and this may have some effect on trade in the country but pickling and preserving is proving beneficial to business.

Retailers are busy just now with preserving necessities. There is an exceptionally good crop of peaches this year at reasonable prices and the amount of preserving being done by the housewife is tremendous. Accordingly there is a big demand for sugar. In fact one refiner reports it as brisker than they have ever had it at this season before. Shortage of sugar with some firms is reported.

First new crop dried fruits are in, Valencia raisins arriving this week. Evaporated apples are also on the market.

SUGAR. — Opinions on the sugar market vary considerably. While there are those who look for a steady market, others anticipate a weakening. "I think that the time for adjustment of prices is near at hand," said one man this week "and that the next move will be downward, in view of the lower quotations on new beets which are now at 10 shillings as compared with 12 shillings a while ago."

"The market is steady," said another, and I expect it to continue so until new crop beets begin to influence situation. There is a scarcity of raws in New York and there is a scarcity of sugar in Canada and this naturally means a steady feeling."

The outstanding feature which suggests steadiness for immediate present at least is scarcity of nearby sugar. When preserving demand lessens and new beets cast their shadow on the market, easiness seems probable.

DRIED FRUITS.—By the time this issue is in hands of readers, this year's new crop Valencia raisins will probably have been received by local wholesalers. These are the advance goods and about 10 cents per lb. will be asked for them. More will follow shortly and these will go to the trade at 9 cents. There is still on hand a quantity of old stock Valencias which continue to be quoted at 8 to 8½ cents .

New currants will be later in arriving than raisins. Currant market is in a very unstable condition. An attempt was made to reduce the retention percentage in Greece to 23 per cent. The matter was submitted to arbitration and the same percentage of retention as last year, namely 35 per cent. was sustaned. This is on slightly over 100,000. This has tended to stiffen market, but with some shippers advising that they look for lower prices and others that they expect stronger figure, market at moment is a Chinese puzzle.

Advices from the coast confirm the reports of severe rains during early September which will have the result of putting new crop back from 10 days to two weeks. The lines affected are particularly prunes and raisins, apricots and peaches not being so hard hit. As shipment of new goods will be delayed, there has sprung up quite a demand for spot goods, which has strengthened markets considerably. Local brokers say new goods will not be shipped until about middle of November. There has not been real heavy buying of new goods, except in raisins which are on a low level.

Spot goods locally maintain a steady position on the whole. Some lines of prunes still show easiness while there have been reductions in apricots and peaches by some firms in order to clear decks for new crop goods.

TEA.—There are no particularly new features to tea, at least locally. There is said to be considerable interest shown in Japans just now, while Ceylons still continue to receive the same widespread attention.

COFFEE.—Locally there can be said to be no change in the coffee situation. Prices are unchanged and a full tone of steadiness maintained.

The critical stage in the Brazil coffee crop is not to be left behind without climatic injury or at least reports to that effect. In fact the reports of frost damage in some instances are decidedly alarming.

There has no doubt been some damage in this direction. One authority says:— "It is difficult to estimate the extent of frost damage to coffee in Brazil. The cables give 40 per cent. damage, which on the expected 13,500,000-bags crop, would mean a minimum 2,500,000 bags' reduction. The fact that the frosts spread over practically the whole state of Sao Paulo makes this view plausible, but independent houses claim that reliable estimates are impossible, and that damage figures are certainly much exaggerated. All depends on the October flowering."

SPICES.—Wholesalers here are satisfied with the season's trade and even yet, the influence of the pickling season is being felt in the volume of sorting orders receiced.

As pointed out before, there is general firm tone, with cloves a prominent line and pepper holding a steady position. Some dealers are quoting higher at 20 to 23 for pure black in 5-pound tins. "We are quoting curry powder at 30 cents," said one firm. "It is generally purchased one pound at a time. Of course if they bought a larger quantity we would give a closer figure."

There is a firmer tone to shredded cocoanut. Price of cocoanuts has increased in countries of production while shipments are irregular. In some cases, shipments are going out incomplete because no manufactured stock is held. Quotations range as high as 18¼ cents in pails.

BEANS.—The outlook in beans is by no means promising. Too much wet weather has proved extremely detrimental and an estimate which at one time ranged as high as 800,000 bushels has now been reduced to 600,000. "Al though the acreage was 25 per cent. larger this year," said one bean man, "the crop will be 30 per cent. smaller."

In spite of the greater acreage, it looks as if good beans would command a record figure this year. While there is a big potato crop, the demand for beans has been much larger than the production. Large quantities of foreign beans have had to be brought in this year to supply the demand and additional shipments are now on the way from Austria.

EVAPORATED APPLES.—One line that is going to be low in price this year is evaporated apples. Some new stock is now on the market and quoted at 8 to 9 cents. That prices will recede to a lower level is evident. Apples are plentiful in Ontario and fortunately the large yields are close to the evaporators, so that pack of "evaps" will be large. While it is early to set a definite price, there are ideas not far above the five to six cent mark.

OLIVE OIL.—There is no change in the situation. Firmness prevails in all the olive oil markets under a fairly good demand. The news from the different producing countries are bad in general and a crop well under an average must be expected.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Interest in progress of late fruits and vegetables continues keen, tomatoes and corn being especially closely followed. Reports from canning companies report fairly good conditions and packing is being carried on rapidly. Much, however, depends on the length of season, for if frost stays away late enough, there will probably be good pack as there are about 15 new factories operating this year and under fair conditions, output should be large. However, as before stated, the weather is to rule the situation. In considering prices, cost of operations is a big factor, being considerably more some years than others.

The short pack of peas in Canada has been pointed out before. In addition to this foreign packs are also small and deliveries will be small. Pea crop in France was short while adverse conditions in England have made it impossible to collect the crop in good order.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Dried Fruits—Weaker.

Eastern Sugar—Firm.

Winnipeg, Sept. 18.—Weather conditions have not been all that could be desired and delaying rains are holding back progress in harvest and threshing. Wheat is all cut and practically out of danger and consequently the business situation in the West has a tone of optimism and confidence that augurs well for the future.

The new crop is now coming in and is grading high, No. 1 hard once more appearing on the Winnipeg market.

Collections are showing some improvement and prospects in this line are considered good.

Wholesalers report a satisfactory volume of business and prices are remarkably steady, no changes in any line to report, but B.C. sugar is noted as weaker and the situation in dried fruits points to lower prices except in the case of figs.

Indications point to a demand in the city for high-class goods unprecedented in the trade. The city business situation could not be better. There is work for every one at remunerative wages. People here have money to spend and nothing but the best is good enough for them.

SUGAR.—British Columbia market is reported weak, Eastern firm. There is no change here. The retail demand is remarkable, probably due to plentiful supply and low prices of preserving fruits.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Sept. 17. — Firm markets prevail in St. John this week, with strong retail demand for provision lines, and tendency towards increasing prices in most staples. The high price of fresh meats has led to a greater need of carrying larger stocks of canned goods, and dairy products, and while the run on these lines has been quite heavy, there has also been increased activity in vegetables, and fish.

Ontario flour advanced twenty-five cents this week for first time in quite a while, but no further changes are looked forward to at present time, although local advices say that wheat market is much stronger. It is thought that the advance in Ontario patents was due largely to reports of failure in some sections.

Sugar presents a strong market with firmness in the advance of raws affecting refined stocks, somewhat. Orders received locally from country districts now that the cold weather is drawing nigh have caused increased activity in molasses, but only so far as the local trade is concerned, for the most part. Indications are that quotations in molasses may go up slightly in the near future.

In dairy products the supplies just about keep pace with retail demand, which has steadily increased with advance in cost of meats.

BLAMES IT ON THE GROCER.

A Montreal painter claims that an insult offered to his daughter by a groceryman affected physically his entire family, and though he estimates his momentary loss at $600, is willing to take $3999.99 if the Superior Court agrees with him. His daughter went to the grocery to buy her father's evening beer. The grocer requested her to pay for a previous consignment of bottles not returned, and in the altercation which followed she was so upset that she became hysterical. Her condition became so serious that she was taken to the hospital and the family lost the $3.90 per week she earned. The mother worried so much that she, too, became ill and was obliged to stay away from work, lessening the weekly income by $6.25 more. Then Nesbitt had to quit work to look after his wife and lost thereby a $150 contract. Now he wants the grocer to foot the entire bill.

Rolled Oat Prices May Now be Advanced

Millers Announce That Prices Will go up 25 Cents Per Barrel on Saturday of This Week—Rather a Surprise—Old Oats Scarce —May Weaken Later on—Dealers Holding Off in Flour Purchases Expecting Lower Prices.

The rolled oat market is a genuine Chinese puzzle and nearly as elusive as the proverbial flea. A week ago it seemed quite a simple affair. The general impression prevailed that all that was necessary was to wait for lower prices.

Now, it seems as if what appeared to be a punctured balloon ready to drop, is in reality a well inflated one and ready to ascend. That rolled oat prices will be advanced 25 cents per barrel or 12½ cents per sack on Saturday of this week is the announcement made by milling companies.

It will be remembered that a few weeks ago prices were reduced 25 cents per barrel. It was said that price cutting was partly the cause for the reduction and that the reduced prices were based on new crop, for old milling oats still continued scarce and high. The conditions in regard to old oats have shown no change, some mills have not had enough to keep them going, and this is probably the cause of the advance, although some mills say that they fear frost may impair the milling quality of the oat crop.

"Does the advance pertain to future as well as spot business?" one miller was asked.

"We are not taking any future business. We are not trying to get it," was his reply. Apparently he thinks that prices may be more favorable later on. One dealer expressed the opinion that this would be the order of things.

Business in Manitoba flour continues quiet, buyers holding off, feeling that there is nothing to be lost by waiting. In fact, this seems to be the general impression that when deliveries get under way that a weakening in prices will come. Indeed, there are reported sales of future flour at figures considerably under present quotations, but these are not confirmed, although admitted as possible by certain millers.

There is firmer feeling in winter wheat flour at some centres. Export trade is slack because prices are too high to compete with Germany in the English markets.

Conditions are progressing nicely in the West.

For the new wheat the millers are looking eagerly. For the high grades there will be a good demand for the reason that the stocks of millers are said to be low. Some speculation is taking place with regard to the milling value of the crop. The moist weather has resulted in a big berry which may be softer than usual. It is the cool clear weather that makes our wheat hard. This year the fall months so far have been moist.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Millers are now feeling more satisfied with the business being done both for local and export account. The demand from foreign buyers has been much more satisfactory because their bids have been more in line, and while they would have been short of the mark couple of weeks ago, yet to-day they about hit it as new crop wheat values have declined considerably in Winnipeg of late. But an extra amount of business could have been done if prices had not to be advanced locally owing to an increase in ocean freight rates announced quite suddenly.

Old crop wheat flour remains steady because stocks are low and holders expect higher prices.

CEREALS.—Announcement that rolled oat prices are to be advanced 25 cents per barrel on Saturday comes rather as a surprise, general opinion being that lower figures, were quite possible before long. Scarcity of old milling oats seems to be immediate cause.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There is no change in Manitoba flour, but buyers are still holding off anticipating that when the new crop starts to move forward lower prices will be in order. Indeed, this seems to be the general impression. For instance, one miller said this week, "I am not advising customers to buy. It will probably be to their advantage to wait a while."

In winter wheat flour the situation is different. The facts have been cited before. The yield has been small. Farmers being busy, deliveries are tardy. Situation is firm and higher prices are being quoted on flour by some firms. Meanwhile prices are too high to do any export business.

CEREALS. — That rolled oat prices will be advanced 25 cents per barrel, bringing quotations back to the level previous to recent decline, is announcement made by millers this week. The change is to go into effect on Saturday of this week.

This is rather surprising news in the face of the approaching big crop. Indeed, it is contrary to what local wholesalers expected. The poor crop of oats in Ontario and fear that frost may damage western yield are two reasons assigned for change to firmness. However, the probable real reason is scarcity of old stock oats of milling quality.

MILL FEEDS.—The firm tone reported in this market last week has resolved itself into an advance of $1 per ton bringing bran up to $23 and shorts to $27. Demand continues brisk, many mills are sold ahead even yet and there apparently can be no change in situation until new crop wheat begins to be milled in appreciable quantity.

Fruit Preserving Now at the Flood

Large Volume of Peaches Coming Along—Are Being Pushed for Preserving Purposes—Lemons Reach Record Figure at Several Centres—Valencia Onions Reasonable — Bumper Potato Crop Expected—Ontario Dealers Complain of Rot in Some Early New Brunswick Stock.

It is generally estimated that the pinnacle of demand for late preserving fruits has about been reached. Especially is this true of peaches which in most sections at least are now coming forward in enormous volume and a big sale for preserving purposes is accordingly in order. The lowest prices of the season have been reached at many centres and besides they are grading up well. Dealers are putting forth best efforts to secure as much trade as possible in these lines while it is to be had. Plums and pears are receiving considerable attention while grapes are moving up to the front.

A feature of the week has been the record price reached by lemons at some centres, the result made by the cut into the already small stocks by last week's warm spell. It was pointed out before that stocks were in general small and that there would be no supplies of any account coming along until new crop. It will be close on to first of November before we receive new crop which are opening higher than they did a year ago.

Valencia onions are on a reasonable scale and with cooler weather, trade should be stimulated. Just now there is a good demand for white pickling onions while other lines used in pickling are also being called for.

Indications are for a bumper yield of potatoes in Canada this year. New Brunswick expects a big crop, the output in Ontario will reach large proportions while the West also promises well. Some Ontario dealers have met with considerable loss on their early shipments of New Brunswick stock on account of rot in some sections, but the opinion is given that this may be caused by too early digging and overheating in shipment.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—Canadian basket fruit is selling freely and considerable home preserving is going on still. Apples are in good demand but some being offered are not as well up to the mark as one would expect, nor can wholesalers give any definite reason for depreciation as up till now the quality was all one could desire. Indeed, the same remarks could apply to a quantity of the basket fruit being offered for sale.

GREEN FRUITS.—Honors for the feature of the week are divided between the flood of peaches coming to market and the record price which lemons have attained.

The figure which lemons has reached can hardly be described as surpassing for the condition of the market has been given emphasis in these columns repeatedly and probable trend of prices in case warm weather set in predicted. Last week's hot spell showed how true our predictions were, for prices are at a high water mark, ranging from $5.50 to $6.50. Supplies are now large and new crop will not be in until close on November 1.

There has been a big flood of peaches coming to market and quality on whole has been fine. In 11 qt. baskets they run from 30 to 40 cents for small stock up to 85 to 90 cents for fancy.

Pears and plums are also receiving considerable attention. Grapes have been rather scarcer during week, ranging from 20 to 30 cents. Oranges are firm for good quality stock with a tendency to higher prices.

VEGETABLES.—The quality of some New Brunswick potatoes is causing the local trade no little concern. A bumper crop is reported from that province, but if the quality is anything like the samples at some of the local wholesale houses, there will be a run on Ontario stock. Rot has set in on arrival here and for instance, one house is trying to clear out their stock at 40 cents per bag and they cost much above that figure. The rot is hardly noticeable unless closely inspected. Local dealers express the opinion that these are probably early potatoes which were dug too early and became overheated in transit and rot set in. They are hoping this is true. Meanwhile Ontario stock are being called for at $1 to $1.10 per bag.

Pickling supplies continue in demand. Valencia onions are reasonable in price and with cooler weather are expected to move better. Corn is selling at 10 to 12 cents per dozen.

1912 Canned Tomato and Corn Prospects

Wet Weather of Couple of Weeks Ago Was Detrimental to Pack—Tomato Vines Well Laden and About Fifteen More Factories Than Last Year Packing Them—With Good Weather Pack Should Be Fair—Corn Prospects Look Good.

These days are anxious ones for the canners of tomatoes and corn. At this same time the retail trade is anxiously awaiting opening prices on these vegetables and are hoping for a favorable outcome.

The season has, of course, been late on account of the much damp weather that prevailed a couple of weeks and more ago. However from investigations made by The Grocer during the week, it was found that the tomato vines are well loaded and since a good deal of fine weather has prevailed lately they should ripen well. If fine weather continues throughout the month the packs of the majority of factories should be reasonably large.

In some places, of course, crops will be short on account of the excessive rains causing rot and deterring ripening, but the yield on the whole has certainly been good.

More Factories Packing Tomatoes.

As to the extent of the total pack, as above stated, this will depend largely on future weather and time of coming of the first frosts. There are, this year, some fifteen more factories in Ontario packing tomatoes than a year ago. The Dominion Canners have five more, and the British Canadian Canners five new ones making ten between these two firms.

Canners receive from week to week, crop reports from their various factories. Last week one from Picton regarding tomatoes intimated that the pack would be good if frost kept off until October 10. The crop was late. Another report from the East stated that tomatoes were "ripening fast; if warm weather continues, good crop." One from Weston, Ontario, reported the wet weather as having done considerable damage.

The corn crop around Aylmer was reported fair. The bright weather had greatly improved the prospects. Further west a factory reported that an "average crop was expected." Two others stated that "corn was picking up wonderfully" and one from Eastern Ontario that it was late but well loaded and with warm weather would bring fair pack.

Prospects for Opening Prices.

As to spring prices therefore, a great deal rests on the weather from now on. In addition to the extent of the pack, the operating cost of turning out the goods must be taken into consideration. For instance, one canning firm brought in large numbers of workmen for their factories just as the wet spell began. The result was they had to board them for some time until operations commenced.

Canners, too, purchase their cans and labels in anticipation of a maximum pack and if it falls short of that there is considerable surplus to account for in the matter of operating costs.

It will likely be some few weeks yet before opening prices will be named; but if everything from now on is favorable dealers can look for corn to open about same as year ago and tomatoes possibly a little lower than prices of 1911.

THE COD FISH.

Something About the Eggs of the Cod and its Habits.

In a recent issue a small amount of space was devoted to the cod, but as it is of very great commercial importance it is felt that a few more words about its habits and eggs will be of interest to those dealers who do local advertising, featuring various lines of fish.

Every female cod produces an enormous number of eggs, the ovary of an average specimen having been found to contain between nine and ten million. Contrary to the general rule, the female cod is smaller than the male when full grown. During the months of October and December, and sometimes as late as February and May, the fish congregate near the surface of the sea. It may seem somewhat of an exaggeration, still so thickly do the spawning schools gather off the coast of Labrador and around the Magdalen Islands at times that a vessel may be impeded in her progress.

It is difficult to define the spawning grounds of the cod, but in Europe and Canada two hundred miles may be set at the limit from the shore. The nature of the coast and the currents have a good deal to say in the matter, but as a general rule the parent cod have a preference for the warmer areas, though young cod or the fry have been found at times in most frigid waters such as those of the coast of Iceland.

The eggs scatter widely and where the specific gravity of the water is not extra dense they sink to a depth of many fathoms, though in the areas chosen by the majority they float within a fathom or two from the top and often form a film on the surface itself.

Within two or three days after the eggs have matured, so to speak, the little fish have enough vigor to carry themselves along. Myriads of the baby cod move shorewards and in May. June and July crowd the inshore waters. In company with green cod, pollock, etc., they form schools in the rock pools and shallow inlets.

The cod can be distinguished by the more marked reddish hue of the top of the head, with the lustre of the side variegated with a number of irregular dark blotches along the sides and back, while the belly is silvery.

H. W. Wright, who purchased a store in Ingersoll, Ont., recently, is now taking possession.

A large representation of grocers from Newark, N.J., visited Canada last week to take a trip to the Kawartha Lakes, north of Peterboro, Ont.

Three Fast Days this Week Help Trade

Demand for Fish is Increased by Festivals—Cooler Weather Awaited To Stimulate Trade—Scarcity in Number of Lines of Fresh Fish—Frozen Halibut Being Sold—Greater Interest in Smoked Fish.

Three fast days this week, namely Wednesday, Friday and Saturday proved beneficial to trade in fish. On the whole, trade is termed as satisfactory for season, but cooler weather is awaited to induce real activity. A feature at present time is scarcity in a number of lines of fresh fish. As referred to before, halibut is scarce, both east and west, and frozen stock has had to be resorted to at several centres. Herrings are plentiful on the east coast but catches of mackerel, cod and haddock are at present small.

Smoked fish continue to receive more attention, many retailers beginning to anticipate their fall wants. Haddie is a leading line just now. Catch of mackerel is below the average and higher prices on salt mackerel later on are being predicted.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—There was quite a strong demand locally this week owing to a number of festivals having been celebrated, and as weather continues cooler, dealers expect trade to be maintained. The smoked fish season is now open, the demand for cured haddies, kippers and bloaters having been well up to the mark so far for this time of the year. Halibut has been a little more plentiful but even at that, calls had to be made on frozen stock to fill orders.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Demand for fish is not brisk, but might be described as fair for season. Slightly cooler weather this week has also assisted. Some dealers are doing some business in oysters. Others have not yet taken up the line.

Halibut is still rather scarcer. One firm say that their next car will be frozen stock. Lake fish are in a little better supply. They were scarce for a time. On the whole, this has been rather an off year with lake fish.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—The local fish market is becoming a little more active, though the supply of fish coming is limited. Herring are plentiful, but outside of these there is not an over supply of any species. Oysters are now on market, and retail demand is heavy. The importations of United States oysters in bulk are large, and barrelled stock is also moving quite freely.

Mackerel continue scarce. Some large fish which came on market this week found ready sale. The catch this season is far below average, and high prices are predicted for salt mackerel later on. The catches of cod and haddock are light, and only a few halibut are being taken.

The exhibit of fish at the Nova Scotia Exhibition attracted attention of a large per centage of visitors. There is a good display of frozen fish of all kinds, pickled and dry fish.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG.—There is a fair and steadily improving demand for oysters at prices as last quoted. All lines are steady and demand fair.

Wet Weather Affects Butter and Eggs

Quality is Impaired—Excessive Moisture Makes Butter More Like May Than September—Alternative Wet and Hot Weather Causes Big Shrinkage in Eggs—Lard Maintains Stiff Front—Hogs at High Level.

From some parts of the Dominion at least, complaints are being received in regard to the quality of butter. "The stock that is coming along now," said one big dealer this week, "is more like May than September." The bad feature about it is, in trade parlance, that "it refuses to stand up." In other words, it has been affected by the excessive moisture of the past month or so and at certain centres the feeling seems to be that receivers of present make of butter are more inclined to sell than store. The copious rains have given an excellent growth of grass and the make should be appreciable, but a big demand from Western Canada tends to prevent any accumulations. It is difficult to tell, however, how much there may be in storage.

The probability of New Zealand being quite an important factor in the Canadian market this season has been referred to before. It is stated that 100,000 packages of New Zealand butter has already been contracted for the coming season's make by British Columbia firms. No prices are given out but it is presumed the figures are below those at present ruling in Eastern Canada. The damp weather which has been so general especially in Ontario has been causing trouble in more than one direction. Not only has the quality of butter been impaired, but that of eggs seriously affected. Alternative damp weather and hot sun is exceedingly bad for eggs and the shrinkage has in some instances been exceedingly large. The result has been a tendency to lower prices in the country and firmer tone in city in order to cover up the loss. A fair demand continues for this line.

An outstanding feature in pork products is the height to which lard prices are gradually ascending and the firmness which still marks the market. Not that demand is particularly heavy, although it is fair and is expected to take on greater proportions with the cooler weather. However, the high price for hogs has to be reflected in the products while the porkers have been running rather to light weights which is a firming factor in lard.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—A steady feeling still prevails in this market under an improved demand, the latter due to no mean extract to early arrival of cool weather. Still it is not anticipated that there will be any shortage so that prices should remain unchanged. Market for dressed hogs is just where it was a week ago with no change in prices. but lard is still firm.

BUTTER.—Although stocks now held are a great deal heavier than during corresponding period of last year, and particularly so for this season, yet a generally firm feeling prevails in the market. Perhaps the heavy demand from Western Canada has got something to do with the maintenance of price in spite of factors which should go to cause a decline, as fully twenty carloads have been shipped out there.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Rolled bacon noted as firm last week, still maintains that tone and is higher at 14½ to 14¾ cents. A couple of firms report a temporary scarcity of backs and are asking 20 to 22 cents for plains.

The way the lard market continues to firm is a prominent feature. Prices have gradually been moving upward for some time and have now attained a high level. Hogs, of course, are at a high figure and besides they have been running a little low as lard producers. At any rate, stocks are not accumulating and with good selling season approaching, dealers' ideas are firm. While there are still some quotations as low as 14 cents in tierces, others range up around 14½ to 14¾.

BUTTER.—If butter can be said to be steady and easy at the same time, that is the description to give to present situation. With dealers inclined to ask slightly higher quotations. On some lines at least, it would seem that tendency is to steadiness but pastures are excellent and the make is apparently fairly liberal.

EGGS.—"Prices have to either go up in the city or down in the country." declared one dealer about eggs this week. "I would not be surprised to see prices higher to city retailers before the week is out. The shrinkage is enormous." Nor was he the only man to complain on this account. His next door neighbor also made a strong reefrence to it. "Prices will have to go down in the country," said he.

There is a big loss in eggs just now and apparently there will have to be an adjustment in some direction. One particularly bad instance was a 19 dozen loss in two cases.

Thus there is not enough coming along to supply the average demand and prices are accordingly higher, both those being paid to country merchants and those demanded of city retailers. Trade was stimulated last week by Jewish holidays.

Investigating the Weighing of Cheese

Commission Appointed by Government Looking Into Claims Made by Farmers Re Weight Deduction— The Question of Shrinkage—An Official Government Referee Asked for.

The special commission which was recently appointed by Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, to enquire into complaints received by the Department of Agriculture from producers and vendors of butter and cheese in Eastern Ontario and the western portion of Quebec, as to alleged unfairness in the methods followed in weighing these products in the port of Montreal, met in Kingston, Ont., recently. The three commissioners were: R. A. Pringle, K. C., Ottawa, chairman; Arthur J. Hodgson, Montreal, representing the merchant buyers, and Samuel J. McDonnell, of Strathmore, representing the producers.

The appointment of the commission was the sequel to a lengthy debate which was raised in the House of Commons in March last by J. W. Edwards, member for Frontenac, who as the champion of the farmers, called attention to the magnitude of the trade in butter and cheese and to the grievances of the farmers in regard to weighing methods in Montreal under the surveillance of the Butter and Cheese Merchants' Association. He pointed out that it was an old grievance, which had been the subject of complaints and deputations in previous years.

In explanation of the methods he mentioned that when the cheese was weighed in the factory, no fractional part of a pound was stamped. In weighing the cheese an allowance of half a pound is always made for good weight. A cheese he claims, is put on the scales and weighs, say 80½ pounds. It is marked 80 pounds. The next cheese weighs 80⅜ pounds, just ⅛ pound short of the half. It is stamped 79 pounds. There is an overweight of nearly 1½ pounds. A man makes a shipment of 500 cheese to Montreal. On arrival of the cheese, those in charge of this business take any five out of that lot and weigh them. Suppose the first cheese runs one pound short, the second the same, the third just even, the fourth one pound heavy and the fifth also one pound heavy. On these five cheese then there is neither gain or loss in weight. Yet the buyer in Montreal reasons thus; On two of these cheese there is a loss of one pound, therefore we will take two pounds from the weight of every five cheeses in that shipment, or from the shipment of 500 cheese, 200 pounds. But no credit is given for the overweight, though deductions are made for short weight.

Exception was also taken by Mr. Edwards to rule 2 of the Board of Trade regulations, which provides that overweights, not exceeding two pounds per package, shall not be credited in averaging the total shrinkage on a shipment. Mr. Edwards asserted that there was an actual loss of $2,341,506 in a decade to the farmers and dairymen of eastern Ontario and western Quebec from short weight at Montreal.

A. A. Ayer, ex-president of the Montreal Butter and Cheese Association states that the position the merchants have taken is to have some method of fair treatment as between the factorymen and the English importer, who is to receive the cheese. Canada, it was pointed out, is in competition with New Zealand and other countries, which do not give as favorable conditions of weighing to the farmer as do Montreal merchants. Further, it was said many of the factorymen's weights varied because of unfavorable weighing conditions, and their scales were liable to get out of order. Neither did the farmer allow for shrinkage.

Since its appointment the commission has also been empowered to take into consideration the matter of the present system of payment for butter and cheese in Montreal. The most numerous complaints appear to have emanated from Cowansville and Brockville, but requests have been received for the commission to hold sessions in many centres. They will go to Montreal at a later date, when the merchants' side of the case will be heard.

Those who appeared before the commission at Kingston strongly advocated the appointment of an official Government referee to act at Montreal in cases where disputes arose over short weight. The present system, they claimed, was unfair to the producer, who was charged for cheese that was under weight and was allowed nothing for cheese that was over weight. They invited an inspection of their scale which the commission said would be made.

Some of those who gave evidence could assign no reason for shortage in weight, but others said that the shipping of cheese that was too young might be the cause. Dr. Edwards, who was instrumental in having the Government appoint the commission, was in attendance, and explained that he did not charge dishonesty in the weighing at Montreal, but thought that rules were very unfair.

Western Canada Representation

United States, European and Eastern Canada manufacturers have found it particularly profitable to have their accounts in Western Canada handled by a reliable firm on the ground.

"Come out of the Dark"

You can do a big selling business in Western Canada if you have organized representation. The people in this centre of activity are liberal buyers and profit payers, and our connection with this trade makes us the proper representatives for you.

We have warehouses in five great distributing centres, and our representatives are in constant touch with the trade at all times. We will be pleased to handle your account.

Manfd. by Leitch Brothers Flour Mills, Oak Lake, Man.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

Nature has solved the problem of distribution. It uses a multitude of agents to effect the distribution of its products.

Nature does not expect every seed to fall upon fallow ground and to take root. But, it achieves a profitable percentage upon its distribution. This is all that an advertiser has to do to reap a profitable harvest on his outlay.

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN
Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail bookkeeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.

FACTORY AT HAMILTON

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

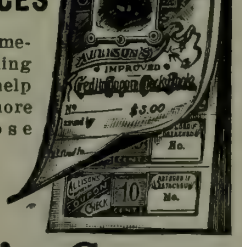
MAKE USE OF MODERN CONVENIENCES

Let simplified methods of handling credit accounts help you to make more money and lose less.



Allison's Coupon Books

They make credit business practically same as cash.

Here's How They Work:

When a man wants credit, give him an Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign form at the front, which becomes then his promissory note to you. As he buys you tear out coupons, and when his book is exhausted you can collect your note or extend his credit for another book, as you deem wise. No pass books, no charging, no time wasted, no errors, no disputes.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Manufactured by ALLISON COUPON CO., Indianapolis, Indiana

A Natural Remedy

There is no simpler, safer, or more agreeable preparation than

ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT'

The approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It clears the intestines. rouses the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.

For more than thirty-five years Eno's Fruit Salt has been before the public both at home and abroad.

Largely advertised and well established it is now in good demand and is therefore bound to carry with it enquiries for other lines.

Should consequently be stocked by all Chemists, Grocers and Stores.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO, Ltd., 'FRUIT SALT' Works, London, Eng.

Selling soap or anything else involves work somewhere by someone.

The Easy Soap to Sell

If the manufacturer doesn't do it you have to, and the more work he does the less there is for you to do.

With "SURPRISE" Soap the selling work is all done before it enters your store.

Because the makers have perfected every detail of the two great selling forces known to merchandizing---the making of a thoroughly good article and the advertising of its genuine merits.

Making generous soap profits the "Surprise" way requires no laboured effort in "pushing" and "persuading"---its quick cleaning qualities are so well known that it sells itself.

Coco Fruitine

Nourishing, Palatable Vegetable Butter

From the view-point of economy alone, a woman will be interested to investigate the merits of Coco Fruitine in her cooking and pastry.

Its purity, rich, delicate flavor and evident superiority to butter, oil or lard, commend it at once to the economizing housewife.

Condou's

MACARONI, VERMICELLI, ETC.

Finest Taganrog Russian Wheat — the only wheat from which the finest quality of Macaroni can be made, is used in the manufacture of the Condou products. The richness of flavor and tenderness make them most toothsome and satisfying. Genuine French products made by Felix Condou.

Fish from Scotland

The "Moir" Brand of canned Scotch fish has all the delicacy and richness of flavor of the freshly caught fish. It is a satisfactory brand to buy because it is always the same—you can judge the quality of the entire year's output by a single can. Moir, Wilson & Co., Aberdeen, are specialists in the packing of Scotch Fish. Their reputation is built on their endeavor to produce only the "best"—and they do it.

TALK MONEY INTO YOUR POCKET

You know our brands, they're advertised for you to your customers. This means that your customers know them by name if not by taste.

This makes it one of the easiest things to talk money into your pocket. Very often the mere mention of the name BORDEN'S will recommend the goods and the sale is made.

BORDEN'S PRODUCTS

are produced with the aid of only the most modern and scientific condensing machinery, and can be relied on for their purity. Coupled with this is long experience and the most rigid sanitary regulations. It's the Brand you should feature. It will bring the money in.

The Facts Behind the Figures Determine the Value and Popularity of "Simcoe" Baked Beans

The significance of a large steadily increasing sale bears directly on the quality and popularity of a food. Quality is the feature predominant with all Dominion Canners' Products.

Popularity is another word for "economy." Baked Beans are really economical; a can of Simcoe Baked Beans contains as much nourishment as one pound of beefsteak. Notice the difference in price. That's just one reason why Simcoe Baked Beans are popular. There are many others.

WARNING!

CRESCENT BM&Co TRADE MARK. BRAND

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER, MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

THE REQUISITES ARE QUALITY

AND

EFFICIENCY

It is important that you associate yourself with a source of supply that is unquestioned.

You understand that to compare a house treating oysters as a side line with a concern that makes it their only business, is a costly mistake to you.

There is one thing you cannot expect from a side line house, and that is that degree of efficiency and service that is characteristic only of houses treating the line as their only specialty.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

The oyster business is a business of itself, employing a great many million of dollars, and it is unreasonable to expect the jobbers to effect this efficiency when they are treating this business as a side line. We devote our entire organization to oysters. Our "Coast Sealed" oysters stand for more with the Canadian trade than all other brands combined.

We solicit your enquiry as to prices, etc.

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service. They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

SUNNY MONDAY

SUNNY MONDAY LAUNDRY SOAP has to be the best laundry soap a woman can buy, because the force of Fairbank advertising pushes it into homes where either hard water, soft water, cold water or hot water may be used for washing, and it works as well with one as another.

Grocers sell it everywhere, because they find it gives their customers more satisfaction, and that means brings the grocers most sales.

Save Money

Save Bookkeeping

Save Customers

Aren't these savings worth while? If a certain thing has proved by experience that it can effect these savings, isn't it worth while for you to give it your serious consideration?

The Barr Register saved one merchant a reduction in outstanding accounts of from $3,000 to $500.

The Barr Register saves bookkeeping, because when you make out a Barr Register system counter slip your bookkeeping is done without another penstroke.

The Barr Register saves customers because it avoids all causes for dispute over bills and amounts of bills. And not only that—it gains customers, because the customers you have put full confidence in you and your business methods, and praise you to their friends.

The Barr Account Register is a new and improved—very much improved—device for handling credit counts. Any merchant that has credit accounts will find it an invaluable addition to his store equipment. It does away entirely with the old clumsy out-of-date and money-wasting system of the daybook, journal, ledger, etc. It does away entirely with rendering monthly statements to customers—a system that actually prevents your customers from paying their bills for an entire month.

This is not a device that may or may not be of value in your store. It will be of value, and of such value that it is an actual necessity. You need it. You are losing money without it. In plain justice to your business, ask us for further details to-day. USE THE COUPON NOW.

Did You Do More Business in September, 1912, than in September a Year Ago?

¶ Every keen merchant strives to make each business period produce a greater volume than the corresponding one of the previous year and watches anxiously for the results when the comparison is made.

¶ Most merchants make the comparison by months—checking the total business this month with the same month last year. It is a good plan.

¶ Volume can be increased most easily by special attention to those standard items which are particularly in demand at the moment. More than any other time this is the oatmeal season and this is an oatmeal year. A prominent store display of will largely increase your sales during these fall months and add materially to your volume and profit.

¶ We are doing a lot of extra work now to make every customer a possible Quaker Oats buyer. You should not fail to take advantage of our special offer on Quaker Oats, now in effect.

The Interior as a Creative Salesman

When the Goods are Attractively Arranged Where They Can be Seen They Sell Themselves—Natural for a Customer to Want Them—Aid in Making Casual Buyers Permanent Customers—An Attractive Regina Store.

Although much has been said about the importance of interior display, there is still a great deal more that might be recorded. No one will attempt to dispute the hold a good display has on a buyer in the store. It means extra dollars and cents in the till every night and therefore extra business and profit at the end of the year.

In early childhood, the babe grasps at everything within reach without discrimination. As it grows older, it begins to pass by the common-place for the attractive. The more advanced in years it becomes, the greater are its powers of discrimination between the valuable and the cheap. This characteristic clings to it till maturity; and here we have the purchaser in the store buying goods for the table. By nature, therefore, a woman who is particular about the health of her family, is attracted by a clean, bright display of quality goods.

Attractive Western Store.

The accompanying illustration shows a view of the store interior of the Star Provision Co., Regina, Sask. It at once attracts and holds attention. There is no mistake about it, such a display is sure to bring extra purchases from the inside customer, just as a good window display will sell the onlooker on the outside. The shelving is particularly well arranged, the counters are shining bright, and the display of the goods under glass enticing. This interior furnishes an exceedingly good example of profitable interior arrangement.

When a customer approaches the counter of this store, she cannot fail to see the array of goods. At the same time everything is so neat and clean that a good impression is immediately made, and even if she is not in a position to purchase any of them at once, sales will undoubtedly be made to her later on. The occasional buyer will be brought back again by such a display.

This explains the value of good interior displays. They sell goods and create a reputation for the merchant and the store, which will be a continual advertisement.

A Strong Advertisement.

To sum up an attractive arrangement of goods in the store will:—

1. Sell extra goods to the inside customer;
2. Help make permanent customers out of casual buyers;
3. Create a reputation for the store and goods; and therefore is an effective advertisement and a valuable asset to the business.

Valuable Points on Storing Canned Goods

The Attention Necessary to Prevent Rust on Cans—Effects of Frost on the Contents and on Cans—Care Should be Taken to Prevent Moisture—This is What Causes the Rust.

Now that the cold and moist season is again nearing, retail and wholesale dealers should look to the storing of canned goods. Sometime ago The Grocer published a few suggestions on taking care of canned goods which will bear repetition.

Canned goods are an important item in the business of all grocers, and more attention should be given them than is frequently the case.

Because the goods are cased and sealed, any place is considered by some good enough to store them. The darkest corner of the dampest cellar is generally considered about the most suitable place. Canned goods are sometimes stored in out-of-the-way places, and left for several months. When they are opened later on, the tins are probably badly rusted, possibly an odd tin is burst, spoiling the appearance of the contents of the entire case, and the retailer immediately sits down and writes a long letter to his wholesaler about the condition of the goods, throwing all the blame on the packers.

Used Sometimes Like Cordwood.

If grocers would be impressed with the fact that canned goods must not be treated as cordwood, there would be far less cause for complaint.

Tin plate is almost universally used. In fact, there is hardly a kitchen utensil that is not made of tin, and every one knows that all tins are very susceptible to rust, especially when exposed to damp, and the greatest trouble experienced with canned goods is their tendency to rust.

Circulation of Air Necessary.

The ideal storage for canned goods is a dry, even temperature, between 40 degs. and 50 degs., F., with a free circulation of air. Cases should be piled clear of the walls, and as much as possible off the floors, to permit of the circulation of air over, through and around them. Cases should also be piled on their sides, so that in the event of a tin bursting the contents will drain off, rather than into and through the cases underneath. Canned goods cases should also be examined at intervals, and where there is apparent trouble inside of the cases, the cause of the trouble should be at once removed.

The Effect of Frost.

The question is often asked, "Does frost injure canned goods?" As to affecting their value as a food the answer is "No," but as a general thing canned goods should not be allowed to freeze. With goods such as corn, peas and beans, the flavor is somewhat affected through freezing, not so much that one not an expert could tell the difference; but there is a difference. On the other hand, the flavor of preserved fruits in tins, and tomatoes, is not appreciably affected by frost. A number of experiments with tomatoes did not discover any impairment of flavor, due to freezing.

However, the greatest trouble with the freezing of canned goods, is that the tins will sweat in thawing out, and the water lodging on the cans will cause the tins to rust, and also the labels to become soiled. If these goods are not carefully looked after, after thawing out, the rust will, in course of time, eat through the tins and permit air to get into the cans, thus spoiling th contents.

When Canned Goods are Frozen.

Another thing to remember is that when canned goods are frozen, they are usually bulged, but as soon as they are thawed out, the ends will snap back. Be sure, therefore, that your goods are not still frozen before condemning them as swells.

If, owing to lack of storage, canned goods are allowed to freeze it would be better to keep them frozen, rather than to thaw them out and freeze them again, as every time they thaw out, they are liable to accumulate rust. If the goods are not used until the spring, the cases should then be carefully overhauled and placed where they will dry out rapidly, otherwise there will surely be trouble.

Most packers are anxious to stand behind their goods, and if it can be shown to them that the trouble with any canned goods is through fault of their own, they are generally only too glad to have the difficulty remedied promptly.

If grocers have goods that are not satisfactory, they should, in all cases, hold them subject to the instructions of the packer, as it is in the interests of everybody that the goods should be examined to ascertain exactly what the trouble is, and it is only by doing this that any defect in packing can be remedied.

Cause of a Leaky Can.

A swell or a leaky can is due most likely to an imperfection in the can, or an error in the time given to the processing. Once air gets into the can decay begins, just the same as the goods would decay if left exposed in an open vessel. It should not, however, be concluded, that the packer has been putting decayed goods into the can. Goods put up by responsible manufacturers are packed properly.

As canned goods are an important and profitable part of a grocer's business, it is to his interests to look after them carefully so that customers may be impressed with their value as a wholesome and clean food.

Going After the Scale Inspection Act

Ontario Retail Grocers' Association Claim Government Should Bear the Cost—Also Want Garnishee Law Changed — Think Present Wage Exemption Too Great—New Members Coming In—Constitution Will Soon be Ready—Member Tells of Peculiar Method of Selling a Cleansing Article.

Hamilton, Sept. 25—(Special).—With the exception of two members, the entire executive of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association met here last Wednesday night to resume the work already accomplished and plan for the future. President D. W. Clark, Toronto, was in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Secretary Wm. C. Miller, Toronto.

Among the important subjects that arose for discussion were the Scale Inspection Act and Garnishee Law. John Forth (Hamilton), as chairman of the committee on Legislation reported an interview with a Hamilton federal member of parliament on retailers paying for inspection of scales. He was informed that the government was not assessing the merchant for the money that was in it, and there was every probability, that, if the proper government authorities were approached, this matter might be satisfactorily adjusted.

The point of view of the retailer is that when his scale is inspected he must pay for that inspection whether the scale beforehand was correct or not. This he claims is unfair or as John Diprose (London) put it a "gross injustice." Scale inspection is in the interests of the general public and like almost every other similar inspection should be paid for by the government. Honest retailers want to give honest weight, but when they have to pay for something done by the government they naturally object.

The matter was referred to a committee composed of John Forth, D. W. Clark and Wm. C. Miller, who will arrange to have it brought before the proper authorities of the government. In the meantime every member of the association is urged to see the federal representative for his constituency to assist in attaining the object in view.

Want Wage Exemption Lowered.

The Garnishee Law was discussed at length and on motion of W. J. Mellen (Brantford), and Thos. Shaw (London), it was decided to apply for legislation to have the act amended so that the amount of exemption of wages collectable as a debt will be reduced from $25 to $10. It was suggested that in the event of not being able to arrange for this, that 50 per cent. of a man's weekly, semi-monthly or monthly earnings be collectable. The same committee as above named will also look after this matter.

Getting in New Members.

The Ontario Association is going out strongly for new members and the different local associations will divide the work among them. The London members will endeavor to interest merchants in Thorndale, St. Thomas, Port Sanley, Mt. Bridges, Delaware, etc. The Hamilton body will go to Burlington, Oakville, Dundas, Grimsby, Niagara Falls, Welland and St. Catharines. Toronto members will look after Brampton, Newmarket, Aurora, Whitby, Oshawa, Port Hope, Cobourg, Peterboro and Lindsay. The Barrie and Allandale men have Collingwood and Orillia districts; the Woodstock members will try to get the interest of those in Ingersoll; Brantford those of Paris, etc.

J. D. Wisdom (Allandale) passed over the names of eight new members to Secretary Miller. The secretary has received letters from Steelton, Hamilton, Colborne, Barrie, Woodstock, Windsor and other places approving of the new organization and tendering assistance. The membership is expected to be a much larger one before the end of the year.

New Election of Officers.

D. W. Clark reported that the Papers of Incorporation had been granted by the Provincial Legislature. It is necessary that an election of officers be made not later than two months after receipt of the charter, so that, on motion, the present officers were formally elected.

J. A. McIntosh (Hamilton) has the drawing up of the constitution well under way and it will likely be submitted at the next meeting.

John Diprose pointed out that the charter of the association gave association members an opportunity to watch more carefully slow and good pay customers. If a customer of a London member, for instance, moved to Hamilton, information as to his standing could be exchanged between members of the association. This, he claimed, should prove to be a strong feature when all the machinery was in operation.

A Warning Issued to Grocers.

Under business "For the Good of the Order," Jas. Burns (Brantford) called attention to what he termed a "fake" scheme of certain parties to place on the market a cheap and worthless line of goods for cleansing purposes.

Here is the method of the salesman: He calls at your store to say that some time ago a grocer in your town, usually one on a back street whom you do not know, ordered some five cases of the cleanser and the stuff was now at the station. But since it was sent, the credit rating of that particular grocer was looked up and found wanting. You are offered those five cases at a bargain, say 40 cents a dozen, whereas the original price was 95 cents—he wants to get the goods off his hands and hence the sacrifice sale. If you accept you sell them at 10 cents each and make a lot of money. They are then sent down to your store.

Mr. Burns claims that from his investigations the article is of little or no good and that it is being sold under false pretences. Usually, he said, some 20, 40, or 50 cases is unloaded in one town by this method. He warned the grocers to be on the lookout for this proposition.

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one and showed that the members of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association were on the alert.

Following items are from The Grocer of September 30, 1892:

"The legality of the by-law passed by the city council of Victoria, B.C., exacting a license of $50 from any retail dealer, as agent or otherwise, in goods furnished by parties outside the province, has been upheld by the Provincial Supreme Court."

"Scafe Bros., farmers near Ridgetown, Ont., have sold their season's crop of beans, 700 bushels at $1.20 to Cochrane & Wilson.

Editor's Note.—This year farmers are likely to get a good deal more for their beans than 20 years ago. Around the $2 mark is much more likely.

"Orders have been issued to the Toronto police to take the name of any peddler caught selling his wares on the street without a license."

Editor's Note.—Apparently retailers had trouble with the peddling community 20 years ago as well as to-day. After first of next year peddlers will not be allowed to call their wares on the street.

THE WEST'S BIG PROBLEMS.

Of vital importance to the Canadian West, were the problems discussed at the ninth annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade, of Western Canada. These will be observed in the report in this issue of the proceedings recorded by our special representative.

Probably the greatest question is that of transportation which includes facilities at terminal elevators, car congestion and delays in unloading cars. All these came up before a group of the West's business men and were thoroughly gone into. One resolution that carried, but not without opposition, advocated the erection of interior grain elevators where farmers could dispose of their grain as soon as threshed, and thus dispose of the troublesome problem of car congestion which so seriously retarded business a year ago.

As we have pointed out before, this appears to be about the only solution of the difficulty, and so far as present prospects are concerned, the question of railway congestion is by no means settled.

Merchants will be particularly interested in the resolution and discussion bearing on a more simple chattel mortgage act.

Other important matters that come under the notice of these Western men included immigration, questionable real estate deals, Bulk Sales Acts, unclean bank notes, single tax, etc., all of which should be studied by every member of the trade.

FLOUR AND CEREAL SITUATION.

A general waiting attitude has been adopted by dealers in regard to flour and cereals. They are buying mostly for immediate requirements feeling that when new crop wheat and oats begin to come forward in sufficient quantity prices will tend to easiness.

During the past week as intimated in our last issue, rolled oat prices were advanced 25 cents per barrel. Scarcity of spot oats of good milling quality has been responsible. Some mills doing an export trade have had to bring in U. S. oats and mill them in bond. The yield of oats in the Canadian West is, however, large, although rather late. It is felt that when new crop begins to come forward in appreciable quantities that prices will again ease.

The same opinion is expressed in regard to spring wheat flour. The world's wheat production this year is large and generally lower prices are in evidence. Canada is also going to have a good output from present indications, with the quality much better than last year. For this reason new crop flour is expected to be more reasonable, sales for future shipment having already been made at a considerable concession on present quotations.

If nothing turns up to mar the situation, it looks as if we would have lower prices on both new crop flour and cereals. Time of adjustment will depend on the rapidity of deliveries. So far the new grain has been coming forward rather tardily.

EGG PRICES EXPLAINED.

At the present time in many sections of the Dominion there is a considerable difference between the prices being paid for eggs in the country and those existing in the city. The country merchant looks at the price being asked in the city and wonders why he does not get somewhere near that price. The city merchant in turn wonders why he cannot buy eggs at the price ruling in the country. Naturally they seek an explanation.

In the first place it must be borne in mind that it costs something to transfer the eggs to the city; there are broken ones to be allowed for, and the wholesaler and commission man must have his profit. In addition to this there is the loss through bad eggs and this appears to be an important item, which lures up much larger sometimes than others.

Just at the present time, wholesalers are making strenuous complaints in regard to the large shrinkage. Some particularly bad instances are cited. The damp weather which has been general has proved exceedingly detrimental to the quality of eggs. Then again, it is declared that shippers sometimes hold eggs too long in hopes of better prices and when they reach market, they are not fresh. Naturally this affects the demand.

It is, however, stated by some wholesale houses that on the whole the shrinkage has not been as large this summer as last. Probably merchants and farmers are taking more care in handling their eggs. If this would become more general it would do much to reduce the range between country and city prices.

PURCHASE RELIABLE GOODS.

According to advices received from different quarters by The Grocer, there is a new line of goods being placed on the market whose merits should be looked into before an order is given. The method used to introduce it in the grocery stores is somewhat out of the ordinary. The salesman's reason for giving the dealer a bargain is rather ingenious and may be noted fully in connection with the report of the executive meeting of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association on another page of this issue.

As one grocer states there, the new line is sold at a low price because a certain dealer in the town, who had previously purchased, was not sufficiently strong financially, and the goods were now on the agent's hands.

Grocer readers should be on the look-out for this method of selling. While the agent is gone to bring the goods from the station, they might carry on a little investigation and be prepared to present him with the facts, if his story is not true. In any event the merits of the goods should first be decided upon if the salesman or the firm with which he is employed, is not known to be reliable.

INSURANCE ON NEW STOCK.

Just at this time of year, the majority of grocers are laying in big stocks of canned goods. The quantity depends on the size of the business, but there are no doubt many who have supplemented their stocks from $600 to $1,000 and more.

The question of fire insurance should naturally be considered by the retailer whenever such a large addition is made to the stock at one time. To carry insurance for six months would cost the dealer probably only about 35 cents a hundred dollars which, on $1,000 would only figure a premium of about $3.50. This is small compared to the worry incidental to not having the insurance on and in case of fire disposes of any loss whatever in laying in the extra stock.

The fall and winter season is now in view and as this is the time of year when most fires occur, dealers would do well to look to their risks without delay.

SUGAR BECOMING MORE PROFITABLE.

The Grocer was glad to hear the statement of a retail dealer the other day, that the trade this year, in general, has been making a fairly good profit on sugar and at the same time selling a lot of it.

The reason for the splendid sale is attributed to the abundance of late fruits and particularly peaches. The early fruits, such as strawberries and raspberries were disappointing to the retailer, owing to the high prices. Those who had given orders for sealer stocks found considerable quantities on hand until the peach and plum season arrived. But since then there has been such a big call for sealers and rings that many have been sold out.

All this has had the effect of boosting sugar sales. Dealers have been realizing more and more the importance of getting a good margin on sugar and are selling it at a profit, whereas a few years ago there was such cutting going on in every town and city that few could get a margin above total cost. This is a bright sign, and it is a pleasure to herald its coming.

INFORMATION MEANS MONEY.

Readers of this paper should remember that our Letter Box service is always open to them. That this sometimes proves of value, is evidenced by the following quotation from a letter recently received:—

> We saved the price of your paper out of one question asked you last month.

This was from a Sarnia, Ont., dealer, who asked for the Canadian representative of a particular relish. The information was in our possession and was passed on to the enquirer who says he made the price of the subscription out of it.

Our Letter Box is open to all our readers. There is probably some information you may be in need of in connection with your business. If so, let us know.

LOOK TO COLLECTIONS.

This is the time for the grocer and general merchant who runs a credit business to institute a campaign to turn the accounts on his books into actual cash.

During the year many dealers have extended considerable credit to customers and it now lies upon their books. In the case of a merchant who has been in business for some time, there are likely to be many accounts which extend back even further than a year and with these it is even more desirable that they be collected.

The country is now in an exceedingly prosperous condition, probably more prosperous than for many years. Crops this year have in general been good and in many districts they have attained a record mark. They have now, in majority of cases, been harvested and the farmers are turning the fruits of the season's labors into cash and should be well fitted financially. It is probably no exaggeration to assert that there is more money in the country than ever before. For this reason if customers are ever to be in a position to clear off their indebtedness, now is undoubtedly the time.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Life now is pretty nearly one wet day after another.

A sale made by an interior display costs little energy.

The time of year has arrived when provisions can be shown to advantage in the window.

When every grocer insists on selling sugar at a profit above total cost, the millenium will surely be here.

With lower prices expected on both flour and cereals this fall, the cost of living should be somewhat reduced.

* * *

"Sugar, sealers, rubber rings." How would it do to say this every time a customer purchases peaches or other fruit?

The fact that peaches are plentiful this year has nothing to do whatever with the large number of September weddings.

The West is a big buyer of Eastern butter, and even if this condition of affairs does help prices, it is a healthy sign and means much to the country as a whole.

There is a fortune awaiting the man who can find some practical use for the bad egg. Apart from the pelting of politicians, strike breakers, etc., there seems to be little use for them.

* * *

The abundance of peaches this year is responsible for moving out a considerable quantity of fruit sealers. This suggests to the dealer to always mention sealers when peaches or other fruits are purchased.

The Fall Campaign Number of The Canadian Grocer will be a most practical issue replete with illustrations of some of Canada's finest store and window displays. The date of issue is October 11.

* * *

The Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada passed a resolution against unclean bank notes. While those who condemned their circulation are undoubtedly right, nevertheless the majority of us would be inclined to give a bunch of them an honorary place in an inside pocket.

Western Business Problems Discussed

Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada Hold Ninth Annual Convention at Moose Jaw—Transportation, Elevator, Freight Congestion, Legislation and Immigration Questions Among Most Important—M. Isbister of Saskatoon the New President—Next Convention Goes to Winnipeg.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Sept. 25.—The convention of the Associated Board of Trade of Western Canada met in Moose Jaw on Wednesday morning, September 18th. After appointing the Credential Committee the meeting was adjourned until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The following gentlement were appointed on the Credential Committee: R. Patton, Moose Jaw; Mr. Wood, Swift Current; C. H. Webster, secretary of the association; F. M. Sclanders, Saskatoon.

At 2 p.m. it was found that a satisfactory number had come to discuss the resolutions which were prepared for the consideration of the convention and from the first enthusiasm was running strong and it was evident that the Ninth Annual Convention of the Boards of Trade was going to be as interesting, if not more so, than any previous convention.

Sharing in Real Estate Profits.

President William Georgeson, wholesale grocer, of Calgary, Alta., occupied the chair and gave the opportunity to Mayor Maybery to present an address of welcome. Mayor Maybery referred especially to some of the resolutions to be brought before the convention, particularly those pertaining to real estate propositions. He welcomed the delegates in the hope that in the discussion of this vital question some legislation might be adopted to remedy prevalent existing evils. He suggested that the public should reap more benefit which accrued in real estate development. Some say that Lloyd George has the right idea of taxation but Mr. Mayberry thought that some better method might be adopted in this country. In his opinion the cities should be allowed to take one-half over the increase of ten per cent. advancement in real estate and he went on to show how this would tend to equalize the profits among the citizens.

In reply to the address of welcome President Georgeson stated that Mayor Mayberry had referred to a resolution which they had discussed previously and which they found to be one of the hardest nuts to crack. In his opinion individuals should be restricted from putting on subdivision properties outside the city.

Single Tax Idea in Calgary.

Regarding taxation, the single tax idea is growing and in Calgary taxation is reduced to twenty-five per cent of the value. Two years ago in Calgary taxation was the full value. Last year the taxation was reduced to twenty per cent. on buildings and ten per cent. on land values and next year Calgary hopes that taxation on improvements will be wiped out altogether. Mr. Georgeson frankly stated that in his opinion the real estate men were not of much value to the community.

E. D. Martin, of Winnipeg, often wondered if some of those who went through the periods of depression in real estate values would get their money back if single tax was introduced. This remark was more or less put forth as humor but it impressed those present as being significant towards the bringing in of a better taxation era.

Mayor Maybery remarked that he did not come to advocate single taxation but only to suggest that there should be some remedy to the present system of real estate transactions.

President Georgeson then passed on to discuss the report of the Resolution Committee. This committee consisted of the following: President Georgeson, M. Isbister, Saskatoon; Richard Loney, Moose Jaw, and Charles H. Webster, Calgary.

Only One Resolution Cancelled.

The Resolution Committee reported that all of the fifteen resolutions submitted in printed form to the convention had been allowed to stand with the exception of resolution No. 6, namely Provincial Control of Irrigation. This resolution was allowed to drop on account of steps having been taken in this matter of control since the resolution was printed.

The Resolution Committee's report was adopted.

The President's Address.

President Georgeson then gave the annual address from the chair. He said in part:—

"As your retiring president I desire to touch upon some of the more important subjects with which we have had to deal during the past year, and to make a few suggestions regarding what we should do in the future.

"Permit me at the outset to thank the members of this association for the honor they have done me in electing me to its highest office. The presidency of the Associated Boards of Trade is an honor to which every business man in this great West should aspire. It must be borne in mind that it takes years of earnest effort before an organization of this character can reach a high degree of efficiency, and, while we have accomplished much in the past, there is still much more to be done in the future.

What Has Been Accomplished.

"A glance at the summary of what has been done by this association shows that 168 resolutions have been passed. These have been submitted to the governments concerned and in many cases have produced a good effect. It is true that at all times we have not had as prompt attention as we might have had, but, in view of the fact that the work of this organization represents the matured views of the best business minds in Western Canada, it must eventually have a marked effect on the legislation of all the Western Provinces."

The president here referred to the death of the secretary Mr. Hall, and the temporary appointment of Mr. Webster, who had sacrificed a good deal in accepting. He urged that a permanent secretary be appointed.

Reference to Panama Canal.

"Some months ago, the Industrial Bureau of Calgary and the Calgary Board of Trade issued a call for a convention in Calgary, the purpose of which was claimed to be to take advantage of the opportunities to be offered by the opening of the Panama Canal. I opposed this action on the ground:

1st. That it was the natural business of the Associated Boards of Trade, and

2nd. That taking advantages of these opportunities meant nothing unless it involved reduction in freight rates from the coast to interior points, and the proper place to make the fight was before the Railway Commission.

"I submitted my views to the members of this association leaving it to them to take individual action if they so desired. The convention was held, but produced no results.

Interior Storage Elevators.

"Many important resolutions will be dealt with by the Resolution Committee, before being submitted to this convention, and should furnish material for some very interesting discussions. Two of them deal with the handling of grain at the lake ports and at the Pacific coast, and one suggests a remedy for car shortage through the medium of interior storage elevators. Others embrace:—

Government regulation of subdivisions.

The employment of freight rate experts.

Industrial education.

International railway commission.

Establishment of grain inspection districts.

Provincial control of irrigation.

Workmen's compensation act.

Unclean bank notes.

Extension Dominion immigration policy.

Provincial employment bureaus.

Simple chattel mortgage act.

"There are other matters that might well be taken up at later meetings of this organization. It is time we considered some questions as uniformity of commercial law; more promptness in handling legal work in our courts, and some means of more effectively dealing with insolvent estates.

"We must soon too give consideration to what can be done to advance manufacturing interests in the West. There should at least be better rates for raw material. I could go on to no end, discussing what we might do for the bettering of our conditions. This much I can repeat in closing that there is a great work for the association to do, and I do hope our deliberation will be fruitful of good results."

The Secretary's Report.

Secretary-Treasurer Webster was then called upon to submit his report as follows:—

"To the President and Members,

"Gentlemen,—I have the honor to present herewith the Ninth Annual Report of this Association, including the financial statement.

"The statement shows a balance on hand of $86.74. In addition to this there are outstanding debts for publishing the annual report, bulletins No. 4 and 5, and the pamphlets containing resolutions amounting to $249.25, or approximately $2.50. This does not include any balance due your secretary for traveling expenses or any remuneration whatever for secretarial services.

"The sudden demise of your late secretary, John T. Hall, referred to in the president's address, made it rather difficult for your secretary to take over the work, as there was no person with whom he could consult regarding the present conditions of finances or follow-up work. However, I am glad to be able to show a complete financial statement, dating from the time of the last convention, which sets forth the moneys received by the late Mr. Hall and the disbursement of same by him. Apparently, he received no salary after the month of February, 1911, Reason for Delay in Convention.

"At this point I would take advantage of the opportunity of explaining why this convention is being held in the month of September instead of at the regular time during the fore part of June.

"No doubt you are all aware of the fact that the Winnipeg Industrial Bureau had planned rather an extensive trip of Western Canada Business Men to cover a large portion of the British Isles, and visiting many of the industrial centres of England. It was the intention of a number of our members to take advantage of this opportunity, and amoung this number was our president, Mr. Georgeson. This naturally would have caused a shortage in attendance at the convention, and, in order to practically assure the attendance of these gentlemen it was decided by the Executive Committee to postpone the meeting until autumn.

"It is hardly necessary for me, at this time, to deal extensively with the follow-up work in connection with the resolutions that were passed at the Eighth Annual Convention, as these are dealt with extensively in the bulletins No. 4 and 5, copies of which were forwarded to all the Boards of Trade in Western Canada. However, there were a few that failed to receive definite attention, and I would submit the names of these, with the respectful suggestion that they be again dealt with by this convention, for the purpose of considering the advisability of having them again brought before the people for whom they were originally intended: — Freight rates on coal, traffic, facilities on railway bridges, good roads, Hudson Bay Railway, fire insurance commissioner, game preserve on eastern slope of Rockies, Government supervision on new town sites.

Telegraph Tolls.

"Resolution No. 153 having reference to public investigation regarding telegraph tolls. The question has been before the Board of Railway Commissioners for some time and as it was dealt with at their sitting in Winnipeg the association kindly asked the Winnipeg Board of Trade to look after the matter as they were instrumental in bringing the resolution in and have taken considerable action in that connection.

"Resolution No. 155, Bulk Sales Act. This resolution has been passed by the convention a number of times, and the Act is at present in force in British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and Ontario, (Editorial Note.—This Act has not yet been passed in Ontario.), and possibly other provinces. However, we have not, as yet, met with success in securing the enactment of similar legislation by the Alberta Legislature. The last communication received from the Premier of Alberta reads as follows:—

Edmonton, May 27th, 1912.

Chas. H. Webster,
Secretary Associated Boards of Trade,
Calgary.

"Dear Sir,—The Bulk Sales Act is a matter that requires legislation and will be dealt with at the proper time.

(Signed.) Yours very truly,
ARTHUR L. SIFTON,
Premier of Alberta.

For Fish Protection.

Resolution No. 157, Establishment of fish hatcheries at different points and an enactment of laws for the better protection of fish." In connection with this resolution the secretary read from bulletin No. 4 a letter received from the Hon. J. D. Hazen.

Bulk Sales Act.

"Referring again to the Bulk Sales Act, I am informed that the Calgary Board of Trade, who originally brought in this resolution, have asked to have it re-introduced so that certain points which they have in mind may be brought up for discussion. This matter, I have respectfully referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

In closing, I beg to express my sincere appreciation for the co-operation I have received at all times from the members of the association, the Executive Committee and more particularly our retiring president, Mr. Wm. Georgeson of Calgary, who, in spite of the well-known fact that he is a busy man, has, whenever required, willingly given his services for the furtherance of the work of the association."

The New Officers.

The election of officers followed. It was moved by R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, and seconded by Mr. Porter, Calgary, that M. Isbister, Saskatoon, be elected president for the ensuing year. As there were no further nominations the chief declared Mr. Isbister elected. In taking the chair Mr. Isbister thanked those present for the honor as it was one of the greatest honors that could be bestowed on any business man to be at the head of such an influential body.

As First Vice-President, Richard Loney of Moose Jaw was the sole party nominated and was declared elected.

For Second Vice-President E. D. Martin, Winnipeg, was elected by acclamation.

For Third Vice-President E. A. Dagg of Calgary was elected by acclamation, Mr. Wells, Regina, and ex-Mayor Fleming withdrawing. For Fourth Vice-President A. A. Wilson, Fort William, was re-elected, and the appointment of secretary-treasurer was left to the executive.

Terminal Elevator Problem.

Resolution No. 1, re "Terminal Elevators at Head of Lake," was then discussed. In consideration of certain existing conditions the resolution urged:

That the Western Associated Boards of Trade, in convention assembled, petition the Dominion Government to promptly enact legislation as will enable the Government to erect such terminal elevators at the head of the lakes, as will provide ample accommodation for storage, cleaning and drying facilities, conducive to the taking care of the grain commerce of Western Canada, allowing of safe and sure transmission to tide water during the season of navigation, and to permit of storage facilities at the head of the Canadian Great Lakes during the winter months."

The Matter Held Over.

In discussing this resolution, Mr. Loney, Moose Jaw, on behalf of the Fort William Board of Trade, made some contentions in its favor but admitted that he had not the latest information. J. T. Sweeting, who was a casual visitor from the C. P. R. Industrial Department stated that he believed the Dominion Government should arrange greater facilities for the construction of terminal elevators at Fort William and that plans were already submitted for a cleaning and drying plant at the head of the lakes also. It was agreed that no resolution should pass without the latest facts at hand and the resolution was, therefore, left over until next year.

RICHARD LONEY, MOOSE JAW,
Who was chosen First Vice-President for the coming year.

Grain Inspection Districts.

In connection with the establishment of Grain Inspection Districts, the resolution suggested that

"The Associated Board of Trade of Western Canada urge the Dominion Government and the Board of Grain Commissioners to create sub-divisions or sub-districts for the inspection of grain at such grain centres as are best situated or located for the purpose."

This resolution did not call for any discussion and it was decided unanimously to leave it over until next year.

Information on Freight Rates.

Resolution No. 4. "Freight Rate Experts" read as follows:

"WHEREAS the public of Western Canada have experienced considerable difficulty from time to time in obtaining correct information as to freight rates from the agents of the different railway companies at various points, and whereas at the present time if any dispute arises the shipper has no adequate redress.

"THEREFORE, be it resolved that the Governments of the different provinces of Western Canada be requested to appoint freight experts for each of the said provinces, whose duty shall be to familiarize themselves with the freight tariffs of the different railway companies which operate in their particular province, and to render what assistance they can towards settling any dispute which may arise between the different shippers and the railway companies."

The sponsors of this were Messrs. Loney and Crichton, Moose Jaw.

Mr. Loney stated that as no results had accrued from former discusions it was thought that it was better to reconsider it and press the matter once more.

Mr. Wells, Regina, sated that the need of freight rate experts had been discussed fully at Regina and that Regina Board had waited upon the premier of the province who agreed to consider it, but as yet nothing had been done. He thought it was a matter that the Boards of Trade of each province should handle, rather than the Boards as a whole. Ex-Mayor Fleming, Brandon, said that the officer should be from the Board of Trade form the city which had the complaint as he thought that would be the only way the various complaints could be remedied.

President Isbister drew the attention of the delegates to the fact that there was no Associated Board of Trade for the provinces, and that the matter, therefore, could not be handled by Provincial Associated Boards of Trade.

Information That Was Needed.

Mr. Georgeson contended that no harm could come from passing the resolution. The proposition was one that no individual body could cope with. We need some more information, he said, and this expert whoever he may be, or however he may be appointed could get the required information and data. The Government expert could secure such information as the rates per tonnage per mile, such as the Board of Trade could not do. It was a difficult question and required a knowledge of existing conditions and he thought it was necessary to have an expert's assistance. The resolution was carried.

Paper on Transportation Problems.

Chairman Isbister then called upon Superintendent Taylor of the C. P. R. Transportation Department to read a paper on transportation. He pointed out that west of the Great Lakes there were 109,000 men employed on the railways representing at least 350,000 people. The chief cause of congestion was the blocking up of terminal facilities. When they are kept free from congestion traffic flows freely.

"There are certain conditions," he said, "causing congestion which are practically beyond the power of the railway to prevent, but the most prolific cause of congestion is the delay in the unloading of cars after reaching destination. It may appear to the public that the railway companies have bene laying undue stress on this feature, but experience has proven that it is absolutely warranted. For instance, he cited, at one of the cities of the west there are at the present time 64 cars on hand which have been waiting unloading 815 days, or an average per car of 12 days.

A Selfish Viewpoint.

"In a great many cases where consignees have not given the matter close consideration, they are apparently under the impression that when they pay a $1 per day demurrage that their responsibility for any car shortage or congestion of terminals ends. This is, of course, a rather selfish view to take of the matter.

"To show that the railway companies have endeavored to keep abreast of the development of the country," continued Mr. Taylor, "it might interest you to know the progress our own company, the Canadian Pacific, has made during the past few years, in providing additional facilities and equipment, taking Sept. 1907 and 1912 for purposes of comparison. As to freight cars, there were west of the lakes on the latter date 41,000 cars, as against 22,410 in 1907, or an increase of 83 per cent. With respect to locomotives we had this year 945 road engines and 132 switch engines as against 623 and 59 in 1907."

Places Some Blame on Railways.

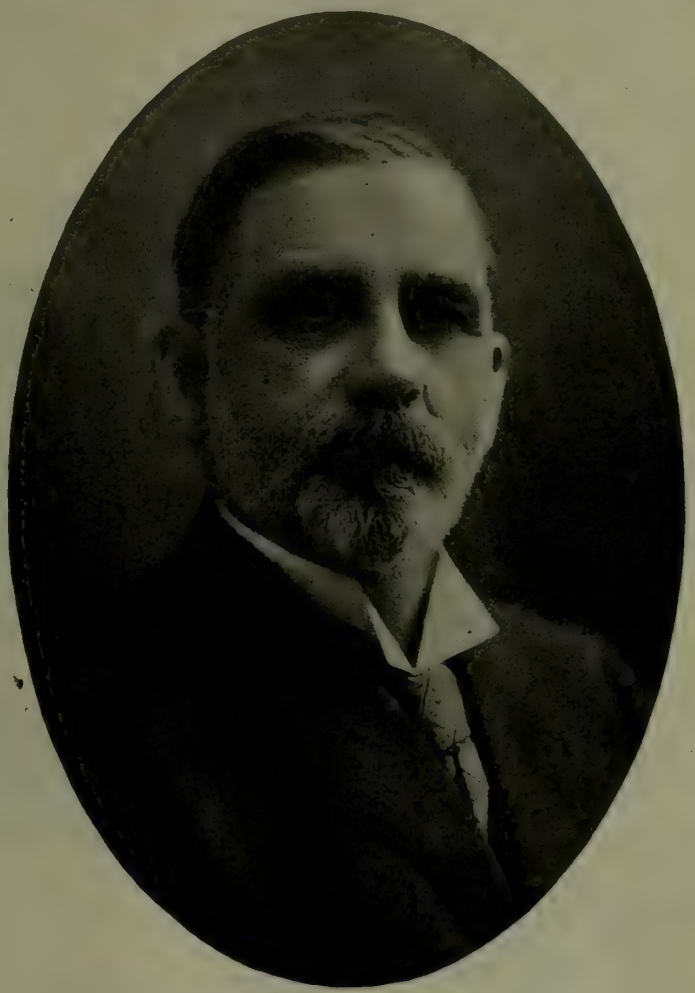
F. M. Sclanders raised a dissenting voice regarding Mr. Taylor's paper. He contended that in Saskatoon the Board of Trade had examined into the Transportation Problem and had found that the railway companies had seriously handicapped business by not delivering goods and according to Mr. Taylor the responsibility was placed almost entirely upon wholesalers and merchants in not unloading cars. He believed that the responsibility rested as much with the railway companies as with the consignees.

Mr. Georgeson stated that there was congestion in the warehouses and it is possible that merchants were unable to empty the cars as quickly as they would like and consequently they allowed demurrage charges to accrue, if their warehouses were filled. In so far as the public was responsible and not the railways he contended that the public should seek to apply the remedy in so far as it could.

E. D. Martin, Winnipeg, stated there was a great need of warehouse facilities and either the cities or the railway companies should provide necessary warehouse facilities in order that the cars might be free for other purposes.

West Developing Rapidly.

It was brought out that the the difficulty lay in the rapid development of the West, and as soon as the railway companies and consignees alike did their best to keep the rolling stock moving, the situation would be greatly relieved.



E. D. MARTIN, WINNIPEG,
Elected Second Vice-President at the convention. He is a wholesale druggist in Winnipeg.

The matter of the city providing its own warehouse facilities had been discussed at previous conventions, but nothing had resulted from it, owing, no doubt to lack of proper following-up system. There was no doubt in the minds of the delegates that such a remedy would greatly eliminate the grievance.

Industrial Education.

Resolution No. 5, "Industrial Education," submitted by E. J. Chewwin, Moose Jaw, seconded by Mr. Crichton, Moose Jaw, read as follows:—

"BE IT RESOLVED that this Convention of Associated Boards of Trade realizing the importance of a very decided advancement in the educational methods of this Western country and to that end is desirous of petitioning the several Governments of the western provinces in the direction of the promotion of industrial and technical education for the following reasons:

"First—To provide men and women capable of meeting modern demands of manufacture, and thus to enable Western Canada to take its place in providing for our home requirements and also to meet the necessities of the outside world, thus to conserve the many by-products of the Western country already largely going to waste.

"Second—To provide training under modern conditions for specialized manufactures which will be equivalent to the training which used to be given by systems of apprenticeship.

"Third—To give boys and girls a broad familiarity with the industrial processes which will open to them a wide range of useful employments.

"Fourth—To adapt public education to the real needs of the youth of Western Canada, nine-tenths of whom take up, directly or indirectly, industrial careers.

"Fifth—To collect and study facts of industrial education to provide for the discussion of methods, to publish information, and to spread the resolutions of successful experience in the field.

"Sixth—To aid local authorities and organizations in their endeavors to introduce organization effecting education for the privinces or communities, and working through committees or in other ways to furnish plans and other suggestions for such work.

"Seventh—To aid in bringing about Provincial legislation in those provinces that have not yet made adequate provision for industrial education."

The object of this resolution as outlined by Mr. Chegwin was that primary principles should be dealt with in our educational system.

Joint Railway Commission.

Resolution No. 7, was on "International Joint Railway Commission." This resolution came from the Regina Board of Trade and reads as follows:

"WHEREAS business conditions exist throughout Western Canada making it an absolute necessity to import and export merchandise of various kinds direct from and to the United States points, and,

"WHEREAS neither the Canadian Railway Commission of Canada have authority governing rates in the United States, nor the Interstate Commerce Commission authority governing rates in the Dominion of Canada; and,

"WHEREAS matters of through rates are at present adjusted almost exclusively by the transportation companies connecting with each other at the international boundary and the rates thus adjusted having to be approved by the Inter-state Commerce Commission and the Canadian Railway Commission often entailing tedious delays to the detriment of business interests; and,

"WHEREAS by reason of the fact that the transportation companies are frequently unable to arrive at an adjustment of through rates and thereby imposing upon shippers the necessity of paying two local rates made up from the original point of shipment to the international boundary and from the international boundary to destination, thus not applying the principle of the long through haul;

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this Board memorialize the Dominion Government to continue negotiations with the Government of the United States with the object of creating a joint commission vested with the necessary powers to regulate and control railway freights in international traffic."

"It was moved and seconded by Mr. Wells and Mr. McDonald and carried.

Outside Subdivisions Condemned.

Resolution No. 3 was changed somewhat to read as follows:

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this Association place on record its sharpest condemnation of all attempts to mislead the people of Eastern Canada and the Old Country by parties having worthless sub-divisions to exploit, and warn prospective purchasers to investigate fully all such propositions before investing, and would also memoralize the different Provincial Governments to give consideration to this problem with a view to taking steps as may be within their power to remedy the evil."

This resolution was moved by W. E. Knowles, Moose Jaw; it found hearty support and was unanimously carried.

Facilities For Grain Handling.

Resolution No. 8. "Development of Western Routes, reads as follows:

"WHEREAS the grain crop of the Western Provinces is increasing at such a rapid rate that the facilities for eastern shipment are totally inadequate to properly and expeditiously forward it to the ultimate markets; and,

"WHEREAS the development of western routes would relieve the congestion by providing an outlet which is open at all seasons of the year,

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada urge upon the Dominion Government and the Governments of the Provinces west of the Great Lakes, the urgent necessity of developing these routes at the earliest possible moment, and of providing proper facilities for the handling of grain at western terminal points."

Mr. Hunter, Regina, who introduced this resolution stated it was a well known fact that there was congestion in transportation and he did not believe the Hudson Bay Railway or the Grand Trunk Pacific would relieve the situation. He believed early action in the matter was necessary since it took a long time to get the necessary facilities.

In seconding the resolution Mr. Wells stated briefly, "We cannot get too many routes in moving our grain as the facilities and grain proposition is very urgent." The resolution carried.

Pacific Coast Facilities.

Resolution No. 9. "Government Elevators and Terminal Facilities at Pacific Coast," read as follows:

"WHEREAS, with the completion of new railroads with easier grades, to the Pacific Coast, and the opening of the Panama Canal, an enormous traffic will flow to and from the prairies via the Pacific ports; and,

"WHEREAS, with the enormous volume of business a saving in the cost of transportation will mean a great gain to producers and consumers of the Western Provinces; and,

"WHEREAS, such costs of transportation touch directly the interests of every citizen of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba,

"BE IT RESOLVED, that this Associated Board of Trade considers the providing of terminal facilities on the Pacific Coast a question of national importance, and that the Dominion Government be urged to proceed at once to provide elevators, wharves, and all terminals, to be owned and operated for the benefit of the people, by the Dominion Government."

E. A. DAGG, CALGARY,

Elected Third Vice-President of the Associated Boards. He is President of the Calgary Board of Trade.

Mr. Davidson, Red Deer, submitted this resolution and it was along the same line as suggested in resolution No. 8, Development of Western Routes.

According to the announcement by the railroad, the grades on the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern were good for transportation and there will, no doubt, be heavy transportation to the coast via Yellow Head Pass.

R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, seconded the resolution which carried unanimously.

Resolution No. 10, referring to the "Workmen's Compensation Act," was withdrawn owing to the absence of its author.

Unclean Bank Notes.

Resolution No. 11, relating to "Unclean Bank Notes,' was moved by F. M. Sclanders, Saskatoon, and seconded by Mr. Porter, of Calgary. He pointed out that apart from the unpleasantness in handling dirty bank notes, the health of the people was liable to be impaired. The Dominion Government will be urged to investigate this matter at once.

In the United States they sterilize bank notes by a secret process, and Mr. Sclanders had been in communication with the inventor of the process and he found that the cleaning system could be supplied to all banks at very low cost. The resolution was carried without further discussion.

Resolution No. 12, on the "Extension of Dominion Immigration Policy," was as follows:

"WHEREAS under the present immigration policy of the Dominion Government, the efforts of its Department and the benefit of immigration halls and other facilities extend only to homesteaders, and not to tradesmen, laborers and others now so indispensable to the general development of Western centres; and

"WHEREAS the policy aforesaid was doubtless advisable in former years when—prior to the advent of important and rapidly growing cities in the West—the settlement of the land was properly the first consideration; and

"WHEREAS homesteading lands throughout the Prairie Provinces are now in a great measure absorbed, so that the number of actual homesteaders to be handled to-day is trifling in comparison with that of tradesmen and other laborers coming in, and who, as is generally recognized, are so urgently required for the development of our towns and cities; and,

"WHEREAS, in view of the altered conditions of these times, it would seem that the existing immigration policy of the Dominion Government, had largely outlived its day and generation, and ought now to be revised and reconstructed,

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this Convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada, do request the Dominion Government to amend its present immigration policy so that in future it shall extend to homesteaders, agricultural labor, and also to such other classes of labors as are now or may hereafter be in general demand throughout Western towns and cities; and further, that arrangements be immediately made whereby ample, suitable accommodation for a reasonable period shall be provided for such new comers, and placed under the supervision of an adequate qualified staff of Dominion Government immigration officials."

This resolution was comprehensive and aimed at the taking care of a wider class of immigrants than simply laborers and that all classes might make use of the Immigration Staff for its information and accommodation.

The mover pointed out that in every town placards were posted up calling for laborers and in many places farmers were not able to get help. He thought that the immigration system should come to the relief of farmers in this particular and thus widen the scope of immigration system.

The Imperial Home Reunion which was established in a few cities was the thin edge of the wedge for the Government to advance further its work in regard to new comers. The resolution was carried.

Interior Storage Elevators Wanted.

Resolution No. 13, on "Interior Storage Elevators," read as follows:

"WHEREAS under existing conditions there is every year a great congestion in the handling and shipping of grain from the Western Provinces to the head of the lakes, and continued and aggravated shortage of cars and motive power; and

"WHEREAS the handling of grain from the Western Provinces to the head of the Great Lakes involves long hauls of both grain cars and motive power, thereby producing a minimum of service,

"RESOLVED that it be urged upon both the Provincial and Dominion Governments that they establish interior storage elevators at convenient points at short distances apart, so that grain can be taken from the field to such interior elevators, thereby increasing the service of the existing equipment."

In moving the resolution Mr. Georgeson, of Calgary, admitted that the remedy of interior storage elevators might not be the exact one as he was only aware that there was an evil and he believed everybody was trying to find the solution and overcome it. He believed that the railway companies were criticised too severely, and if the public could do anything to overcome the congestion or car shortage and agitate for lower freight rates they were obliged to do so. It was a great commercial loss he maintained when the farmer had no barns. The farmers were a generation behind the times as it takes a generation to educate them up to providing themselves with proper storage facilities. If the farmers had barns of their own there would not be such a great loss in the West of grain, but it might not be a solution to the present problem if the farmers had to sell their grain and place it somewhere in order to get their money.

"If elevators were placed throughout this country two hundred miles apart so the farmer could place his grain and get his certificate for it, and therefore get his money, it would be a great help to the country," he said.

"The only party who objected to the interior elevator system seemed to be the grain merchants, but these same grain merchants did not make any effort to relieve the situation and give the farmer his money, and thereby better conditions all around." The resolution was seconded by Mr. Porter, Calgary.

Little Relief in Sight.

In speaking to the resolution, Mr. Mellis, Humbolt, Saskatchewan, stated that the town of Humbolt was very much interested in the question of interior elevators and raised the question as the crux of the situation. He pointed out that the railways were much in need of labor and extension of construction and in that case he was of opinion that the railways could not give relief to the farmer for some time and to establish interior elevators would strike at the root of the congestion problem. If elevators were established the grain inspection by the expert from the Province could be easily carried out and it was the only remedy apparent which would give immediate relief and that was what the West wanted.

R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, pointed out that the additional expense in handling the grain would cut down the price to the farmer 3c, and he believed that, therefore, the farmers themselves would have objection to the interior elevators, and if interior elevators were established the farmers possibly would not use the elevators but would ship direct.

Might Delay Shipping Progress.

Mr. Hunter, of Regina, who previously brought in a resolution regarding terminal facilities at the Pacific Coast, stated that interior elevators would only delay the progress of shipping the grain out of the country and it would take a lot of money to finance the proposition, both in the construction of the elevators and also to advance the money to the farmers. He was of opinion that the trouble lay more in the terminal facilities than in car shortage. At one time last fall there were seven miles of cars of grain lying on the tracks between Winnipeg and Fort William and the Fort William elevators were blocked and to open facilities to the West would greatly relieve this situation.

There was trouble also in the Manitoba Grain Act, where Manitoba farmers were allowed to hold up the rolling stock.

Optional With the Farmer.

At this juncture the chairman called upon A. F. Mantle, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, of Saskatchewan, to discuss the question of interior elevators to the convention. Mr. Mantle stated in part: "Having interior elevators built, it would be a question of having them used and that rested with the farmer himself. He would ship to the interior elevator or to the terminal elevator, according to the price which he received for his grain, and if he got 3c less at the interior elevator he would not be inclined to use it. The elevators at the coast and the other terminal points could be built as speedily as interior elevators every two hundred miles throughout the Western Plains. We should get a low rate such as we got last year to ship via Duluth. There were fifteen million bushels of wheat shipped via Duluth last year and through the reduced rates the country saved two million dollars.

"One way in which the matter could be overcome to some extent would be the securing of cheap flour industrial sites so that flour could be milled in different parts of the country and bran and shorts of the grain retained for stock raising. Such phases as these were bound to come but the country was not yet ready for them and the time would come when more flour would be sent out than wheat he believed."

Hugh McKeller, of Moose Jaw, who had made a long study of the question was in favor of interior elevators and gave a graphic description of conditions, stating that many farmers throughout the West last year would have been glad to have put in their grain at 3c less in order to get something for it rather than haul it home again without any money. The interior elevator system he said would bring mills to the country. At the present time the grain was marketed, insured and taken care of at Fort William, Owen Sound and Saint John, and there was no reason why the same thing could not be done at the various interior elevators throughout the country. The farmers would get a graded certificate and all he would need to do would be to present that at the bank and they would advance him money. At the present time the banks will not advance any money unless the farmer has a certificate of grade of the wheat and he often has to wait weeks and months until his grain is delivered and word comes back.

F. M. Sclanders stated that the farmers should have granaries.

Mr. Chegwin said that throughout the discussion there was evidence that there were arguments on both sides. The country needed terminal elevators, interior elevators and granaries on the farms. The great trouble was to let the farmer sell his grain and get his money and to provide facilities for growing production.

This statement of Mr. Chegwin's practically closed the debate, and Mr. Richard Loney, Moose Jaw, the last speaker, stated that he believed one quarter of a cent was sufficient to handle the grain and that the farmers did not necessarily have to take 3c less in the interior elevators.

The resolution was then put to a vote and carried.

Want Simple Chattel Mortgage Act.

Resolution No. 14, on "Simple Chattel Mortgage Act," read as follows:

"WHEREAS under existing conditions, the legal and necessary charges connected with the taking of chattel mortgages is burdensome to the community and has the effect of practically creating a preference to larger claims; and,

"WHEREAS there is in existence in several of the States of the American Union, a simple Chattel Mortgage Act; and,

"WHEREAS in such States, a chattel mortgage may be made out on a simple printed form, and covers what it purports to cover, and can be registered at a charge of twenty-five cents (25c.)

"RESOLVED, that the Governments of the Western Provinces be urged to place upon the statute books a Simple Chattel Mortgage Act, on the lines of those now in force in the States of North Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and other States of the American Union.

Would Assist Merchants.

This resolution was moved by R. J. Hutchings, Calgary, who wished to see an Act passed along the lines of an Act now in force in the States of North Dakota, Minnesota, and other States in the American Union. The expense at the present time was too great in getting restitution for bad debts and under the present system the man who paid his debts had to expend for the man who did not pay. It was valuable to merchants who were giving credit and gave them an opportunity to meet their debts with the bank and with other creditors.

In seconding the resolution, Mr. Georgeson stated that the idea was to have a remedy which was least burdensome upon the community. There had been a long standing need for such an Act and it was found that this Act had worked well in the United States and it was therefore not a theory, but an established fact that it worked well. In the past it was a heavy task placed upon a merchant to collect from the farmer.

A Saving for the Dealer.

If the farmer wished to get credit the merchant could by the "simple chattel mortgage act" take a mortgage on the man's horses or any of his personal effects.

The storekeeper saved himself forty per cent. of the cost of bookkeeping by having a recourse to the simple chattel mortgage act. Such a system would facilitate business generally. The banks would not advance any money on notes, but they would on a mortgage and the merchant needed his money and the wholesaler needed his money, and therefore business generally would be benefited.

E. D. Martin, Winnipeg, favored the resolution, and it was unanimously carried.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Resolution No. 15 reads as follows:

"That in view of the practical benefit to all classes of the community, that labor bureaus have proved in Great Britain, New Zealand, Germany and other continental countries, and the urgent necessity of similar organizations in Canada, be it resolved that the Federal Government be asked to take immediate steps to establish a labor bureau system for the Dominion."

Mr. Georgeson pointed out that it would tend to balance labor conditions so that every single community would not be bothered by schemes of charity and the labor bureau could distribute skilled and unskilled labor more equally than they were distributed at the present time.

Richard Loney also pointed out that it would prevent individuals going to the Old Country and bringing over domestics and other help on condition that they would buy small pieces of property. The labor bureau should control all help and see that they were treated justly.

The resolution was carried.

Shipping Grain Through United States.

Resolution No. 16 was a new resolution brought in by Mr. Hunter, of Regina, and aimed at opening another avenue of transportation for the shipment of grain through the United States.

"Whereas the terminal facilities at the Canadian lake front were inadequate to handle the grain crop of the West last year, and whereas it was necessary for the Provincial Governments to make arrangements to ship grain via the lake terminals of the United States, and whereas the production of grain this year is largely in excess of last year, therefore be it resolved that these Western Associated Boards of Trade memorialize the Provincial Governments to secure a renewal of the arrangement of last year, thus insuring another avenue for our grains to reach the market of the world."

Without further discussion this resolution was unanimously carried.

Chairman Isbister then opened the convention for discussion of any new business and the next place of meeting was discussed.

The Secretary read the letter from Mayor Waugh, of Winnipeg, inviting the convention next year, and Mr. Martin who was present from Winnipeg, also extended the invitation.

To Winnipeg in 1913.

Last year some suggestion was made that in 1913 the convention meet in Fort William and had Fort William had a delegation at the convention this year no doubt it would have received the convention in 1913, but there was no delegation and the claim from Winnipeg was so strong that the convention decided to meet in Winnipeg in 1913.

It was moved by Mr. McDonald, Regina, and seconded by Mr. Georgeson, Calgary, that the executive should consider the matter of appointing a permanent secretary to the association.

The motion was carried.

The Men Present.

The following delegates attended the convention:—J. F. Porter, Calgary; R. J. Hutchings, Calgary; F. L. Body, North Battleford; H. Emery, Sutherland; C. Barraclough, Sutherland; E. J. Chegwin, Moose Jaw; Richard Loney, Moose Jaw; M. Isbister, Saskatoon; B. C. Crichton, Moose Jaw; Peter McAra, Regina; R. W. Morrison, Winnipeg; H. G. Mathison, Humbolt; G. A. Scrieber, Humbolt; J. Adams, Humbolt; F. W. Mellis, Humbolt; F. W. Sclanders, Saskatoon; W. E. Knowles, Moose Jaw; J. W. Fleming, Brandon; E. D. Martin, Winnipeg; A. P. Wells, Regina; T. McDonald, Regina; W. Georgeson, Calgary; C. H. Webster, Calgary; R. Volton, Moose Jaw; P. G. Wood, Swift Current; J. R. Davidson, Red Deer; A. T. Hunter, Regina; G. J. Johnston, Regina; L. C. Harkness, Winnipeg; G. A. Carpenter, Winnipeg; J. T. Sweeting, C.P.R. Calgary; C. J. Rollefson, Outlook; Hugh McKellar, Moose Jaw.

A banquet was held on Wednesday evening at which Wm. Georgeson, Calgary, and F. M. Sclanders, of Saskatoon, were the chief speakers. The convention was a most successful one and is bound to have its influence on the future history of the Prairie Provinces.

A TWO DOLLAR SALE.

The heading on an advertisement which Frank Coon of Havelock, Ont., is running in the local paper reads, "1700 customers wanted—with $2.00 each." Then follows: "See what you get for it." and a list of the goods which $2.00 will purchase at the store is given. The list is representative of an average purchase including sugar, tea, salmon, soap, laundry starch, culinary starch, and blueing.

A System for Compiling Display Statistics

Retailer Has Method of Keeping All Information With Reference to Window Trims for Future Reference—The Advantages of the Idea—How an Early Dried Fruit Window Brought Business.

It has been said that art and system never go together. There are grounds, undoubtedly, for the statement. The typical artist is Bohemian to his fingertips. He works when the spirit seizes him, orders his life to suit himself, and generally turns things topsy-turvy. The poet is equally free from the trammeling influence of convention. He and system are utter strangers.

There are some forms of art, however, which can be worked out only on a systematic basis. The work of the window trimmer is a form of art. He arranges in the window a picture which is designed to fulfill the same function as a picture on canvas—to attract and rivet attention; only he uses real articles to make up his picture instead of painting it. To achieve the fullest measure of success, however, the window trimmer cannot imitate the dilettante methods of the artist. He has to work on a definite system, following rules which experience has taught to be the best. He must keep right "down to brass tacks."

In a previous article something was said with reference to various systems which should be followed in planning out displays, in arranging material, in securing ideas and generally speaking, in striving after the best results. It is our intention in the present article to deal more intimately and fully with the question of a proper system of scheduling window displays.

It must be borne in mind that the window trimmer—unlike the artist who can seize his brush and depict anything which happens to strike his fancy—the window trimmer cannot make indiscriminate use of any material at his disposal. He is bound by seasons and by the condition of the stock in the store. Thus, he may have a splendid idea for a display of a certain line of goods, but not be able to make use of it because it is more important that other lines should be moving. To make sure that the window space is being used to the best possible advantage, the trimmer has to carefully plan out what lines he will use, well in advance, thus seeing that each article gets its turn at the proper time.

A Perfect System.

A perfect system to cover this phase of the work has been evolved by a Canadian retail dealer—perfect, because it not only insures the best results, but lessens certain difficulties and does not entail any great amount of labor. In brief, the plan is to keep a schedule mapped out a month in advance and to carefully tabulate statistics with regard to each display put in. Information is put down under the following heads:—Date of display, condition of weather, lines shown, description of display, amount of sales during the period and suggestions for the next display of the same kind.

It will be at once apparent that the window trimmer with information of this kind, relating to trims which he has put in for some years back, would find the work of planning out future displays considerably lessened. If he wanted to arrange a confectionery window, for instance, he could look back over his records and find what time of year previous displays of twine had been put in, what sales were made, and what new ideas for future use had cropped up at the time. He would thus be able to figure out when the projected display should be made to insure the best results. Further, by comparing the sales records and the styles followed in the construction of each window, it would be possible to figure which idea had been most successful in working up business; surely an invaluable hint in going about the arrangement of a further display of the same line.

To compare the results, it would be necessary to carefully note the sales during the time that the display was left in the window and also note how the same lines continued to sell for a fortnight, say, after the display was withdrawn. This is a necessary step because with many lines the results of a display may not be felt for some little time. Thus an early display of Christmas goods may bring sales a fortnight after it is first put in. Here is a case in point. A certain window trimmer put in a display of dried fruits and nuts early in December. The stock was taken out a week later with a certain feeling of chagrin because up to that time little of these goods had been sold. A few days afterward, however, two sales were made. The next day there were more sales and for two weeks a brisk business was done. Housewives had seen the display and been impressed. When baking time began and they needed fruits, they trotted down to the store where they had seen that display.

Experience is a great teacher but it is a common fault to forget its teachings. To a window trimmer of receptive mind, every display is full of suggestions. When it has been completed, he can see many ways in which it could have been improved. If he can't, others can. If the ideas which thus come up were noted down, they would be found of inestimable value when the time rolled around for the arrangement of a display along the same lines. We believe that ideas for the improvement of his work invariably crop up in the mind of the window trimmer when he studies his completed display, but in a majority of cases, the ideas are not put down, and are forgotten in time. Certainly, in this respect system is badly needed.

Of course a system of this kind entails a certain amount of work. A few minutes spent each night in totalling sales of certain lines, however, would supply the necessary information. The writing of descriptions would not take very much time each week. To a man thoroughly interested in his work, it would be more profitable and less laborious than keeping a diary.

Keep a Month Ahead.

System is needed again in determining what displays are to be arranged. In the opinion of the writer, a schedule should be made up for each month and the trimmer should always have his list arranged for a month ahead.

This plan gives the trimmer an opportunity to think out new arrangements and to utilize matter which he happens to run across. For instance, he knows that during the week of October 21 he will have one window devoted to goods that appeal to the hunter. He may run across an idea or an illustration in a magazine which contains a suggestion. Ordinarily, he would pass it by, but with that date in mind, it occurs to him that the idea will be of practical use. He notes it down.

When work of any kind is left until the last moment, it is not always possible to lay one's hands on the desired material, or to force the brain to respond with suitable ideas. Given a longer period of preparation, the necessary ideas and data can always be secured.

Seasonable Displays.

Window displays must be seasonable and the system outlined enables the trimmer to make all his displays thoroughly up to the minute.

An Inquiry for a Capable Store Manager

Is Wanted to Attend to the Sales While Proprietor Does the Buying—Question Arises, Which is Most Important—Positions of Responsibility With Big Possibilities go Begging—Cannot the Store Itself Fill the Position?

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Dashville, Western Canada, Aug. 28, '12.

Henry Johnson, Jr.,
c|o Canadian Grocer.

Dear Sir,—The writer is desirous of securing a competent head clerk or manager for his grocery store. That is a man who could take full charge of the staff of about thirty employes, but who would not have the buying to do, as that is done by myself. Neither would he have any office work to do.

Might state that I have been reading some of your articles and thought that you would be a good person to recommend a man for the position.

Should consider it a great favor and will gladly pay you any fee charged, if you could put me in touch with a capable man; young man preferred.

Will set down a few facts regarding my business:

Established about seven years. Carry a stock of between $25,000 and $30,000 exclusive of fixtures and turn this stock over about twelve times a year. Hardly expect you to believe this, but it is a fact nevertheless. Have a store twenty-five by one hundred and twenty feet; located near one of the busiest corners on the main street in this city.

Do not know what wages I would pay to a man capable of taking charge, but of course would have to have a real first-class man, capable of making the business pay.

Have been making very little money out of this business owing to a number of leaks, but think that most of them stopped now and have a very good staff of employes.

We have recently put in a cashier, whom customers pay for their purchases direct. This of course means our clerks do not handle the money, which, we believe, for the past number of years has been a big leakage.

Would ask you to kindly treat this letter as confidential and shall be pleased to have a reply from you at your earliest convenience. I remain,

Yours truly,
F——. S——. G——.;

This is some nut to crack, but I shall gladly do anything I can to aid Mr. G. There will be no fee—The Canadian Grocer attends to that part of it. This service is free to all our readers, and we are glad, more than glad, to have you ask for it.

More Questions to Answer.

I shall ask for some return, however. That is, that this correspondent tell me more about his business. I want him to answer such questions as I shall put in the course of this article for the good of the cause in general; for what he can tell us will help us as much—to say the least—as anything I am likely to be able to tell him. Perhaps—who knows?—the very questions that occur to me as I read this letter may point the way out to this man. Let us see.

The want is for a man "to take full charge of the staff of thirty employes" but "not have the buying to do" nor any office work. In other words, this proposed employe is to have full charge of the SELLING. Who, then, is to do the buying? I think that here we have part of the explanation of this man's failure to make profit out of his splendid business. He busies himself with the buying end of his business and delegates the selling to others. He does the secondary work and tries to get others to do the biggest, most important work about his business. I have a Jew friend of whose judgment I think a lot. He has always been a money-maker. Years ago, while I still held the idea that buying was so very important, he said to me: "Johnson, any fool can buy, but it takes a SALESMAN to sell!"

Put Responsibility on Others.

As this man's business grew from its small beginnings, as I suppose it must have done even though the time has been short—for they grow fast in some places in Western Canada—he should have delegated more responsibility to others. The way to develop ability in anybody is to load responsibility onto his back. F. S. G. should have assigned to one young man the task of buying his staples, such things as he must have frequently. G—— could have written his jobbers and told them of his plan to have Henry buy all usual things and put it up to the jobbers to do the right thing. As general manager, G—— could have kept in touch with what Henry was doing, but he need do none of it himself. If, after some fair trial, Henry did not fill the bill, put him back where he came from and try Bill.

This is not so hard as it sometimes looks. The material for managers is in your own store, under your own nose; but its familiarity makes you overlook it.

Where the Money Comes From.

Load all detail, routine work onto others. Keep after the SELLING yourself. The selling is the money-making end of your business. It is getting rid of the goods that counts. Out on the floor you will see things. You will hear what people say. You will learn about the week points in your business. You will know what customers like. You will be ready to meet everybody and see that they have attention. In a store of 25 x 120 feet you can practically see that nothing goes wrong, either in money or the treatment your people give to buyers. By all means, delegate the work—that is the WORK—of buying, accounting, etc., to others. Do the big, creative work of SELLING yourself.

Others Do the Buying.

Have I hit one of the nails? I incline to the opinion that my friend has failed to develop men from his own force. That is what he should do—what he must do, in fact. We all have to do that. I buy lots of goods in my store, but I do not touch certain departments at all. If the supplies are not right, or prices high, I dig up the buyer and ask him how about it but I do not take hold of it myself—I put it right up to him. Same with my deliveries and the order department. I know nothing of the details thereof, further than the simple planning of system and changes in the general system, from time to time.

What the Business Should Earn.

Just what does Mr. G—— call "very little money" on that business of his? That business should pay, normally, 4 per cent. to 5 per cent. on the sales, over all expenses, including proprietor's salary and 6 per cent. interest on the invested capital. That would give us from $12,000 to $18,000 per year. Yet it might not be an unhealthy business if it paid only 3 per cent. to 4 per cent. net.

What should be the salary of Mr. G—— and his first assistant? Begin small and build up. In a business of $30,000 the proprietor is able to earn

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

$900 to $1,200 per annum. That is from 3 per cent. to 4 per cent. on sales. He can earn this amount because, in such a small business, his own work can be made to count for such a large proportion of the needful productive labor. On $40,000 he can get $1,200 to $1,500, or 3 per cent. to 3¾ per cent. On $60,000, from $1,500 to $1,800, or 2½ per cent. to 3 per cent. On $250,000, he may get not more than $3,000 to $4,000, or 1.20 per cent. to 1.60 per cent. on sales. Thus it goes down in proportion as the head's capacity to manage details and work diminishes.

The Division of Salaries.

But, if it is reasonable for the manager of a $60,000 business to get 2½ per cent. to 3½ per cent. on sales as his salary, it is not unreasonable for the the manager and his assistant in a $300,000 to $360,000 business to get, say, 2 per cent. on sales between them. This is $6,000 to $7,000; say $2,500 to $3,000 for the assistant and $3,500 to $4,000 for the proprietor. This division is to be based on the idea that the proprietor does the more important work—handles the selling force, the sales, the advertising, the window trimming and everything else that has to do with sales. The assistant is to do the buying, superintend the offices and deliveries, see to the stock-accounting and all that. A man capable of asking for $2,500 to $3,000 is capable of doing that kind of work; but the master minds of merchandising everywhere are devoted to the art of SELLING—and that art is worthy of the very best that is in any of us.

The cashier and "pay cashier" plan is good. It is what the big stores have done for years—and there is a good reason for it; probably a hundred good reasons. It is not merely the saving of stealage, but the air of accurate accounting which pleases the buyer and strengthens the discipline everywhere. Nor should the factor of the removal of temptation be overlooked.

I should like to know:

1. What your expenses are?
2. Whether you give credit and how much on the books average.
3. Whether you have and believe in up-to-date fixtures and tools?
4. Whether you own or rent your store and what rent you pay or figure?

The Material Inside.

I shall be glad indeed to hear from you further and to know whether I have made any suggestions that seem worth while to you. As for recommending anybody for that job, I could not. I have developed two extra good assistants myself and the task has not been hard, because it is my habit, being impatient of routine work, to shove all daily jobs on to somebody else as rapidly as possible. I think it a good habit. I am satisfied that you can only get such assistants by developing them in your own business. I feel morally certain, too, that the material is there, ready to your hand, but that you have overlooked it.

W. H. Boyle, manager of the grocery department of the Glasgow House, Regina, Sask., for the past six years, has resigned his position and will leave Regina early in October for Vancouver to take up the position as manager for one of the London Grocery Co.'s branches in that city.

B.C. and Washington Grocers May Join Hands

To Keep on the Trail of the Professional "Dead - Beat" — Dealer in State of Washington Thinks This is the Only Feasible Method—Other Questions Discussed at Convention.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 26.—(Special.)—With a view to stopping the activities of the dead-beats" there is a likelihood that the grocers of British Columbia will unite with fellow tradesmen in the State of Washington. A Seattle grocer who attended the Washington State Grocers' and General Merchants' Convention held in Everett this week, stated it was decided to combine for the general good of the trade.

At the convention, he declared, a better system of credit protection was discussed. Providing plans already made are duly carried out, it is believed that "dead-beats" who find it too sultry to live in Seattle or other cities across the line, and who move to Vancouver, will be laid by the heels. "It will soon be found," said the grocer, "that 'dead-beats' who move from one city to another cannot establish credit."

For long the grocers of Vancouver have suffered from the intolerable "dead-beat" and at the last local convention it was advocated that steps should be taken to secure the co-operation of the grocers of Washington with a view to curtailing their field of activity. By correspondence which is expected to ensue between the local association and the one at Washington it is firmly believed that the first decisive blow will be delivered to stop the grocers being cheated out of their rightful property.

Asked as to other reforms which the grocers of Washington intended to place their influence on, the grocer stated that the retailers were working to have a net weight and measure law enacted, also a reduction on the tax on oleomargarine, and a law which will prevent fraudulent and deceptive advertising.

Editorial Note.—Oleomargarine is prevented by law from being made or sold in Canada.

SOMETHING ABOUT WHAT'S INSIDE.

In referring to The Grocer's Fall Campaign Number of October 11 last week, a number of articles to be used were enumerated. They were a few of many bright, practical and informative articles that will appear in that number.

Last week reference was made to a store interior with a gallery. There will also be an article on a warehouse of a new store fitted up with a gallery. This presents good ideas to dealers who have found the room in their warehouses inadequate.

From Western Canada come methods of some bright dealers. A British Columbia grocer tells what part concentration and quality goods play in the building of a successful business. Others from Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba demonstrate the value of the interior and store front in making extra sales. Western men evidently realize the drawing card a good show always is.

There will be a story from a dealer who sells his Christmas goods early. He has eight stores in the one city, having begun with one about twenty years ago. How did he come to branch out? This question will be answered, together with some of his methods.

Halifax, N. S., has one grocery business in existence for 52 years. An illustration of the present interior will be used to indicate how it has advanced with the advancing times.

The Fall Campaign Number will include many gems of ideas and methods for the retailer. It will be a number that any dealer will be anxious to keep on file for future reference.

The date is October eleven, nineteen hundred and twelve.

Geo. J. Saunders, Steelton, Ont., (Sault Ste Marie), was in Toronto on Monday. While there he called upon W. C. Miller, secretary of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association and talked over matters relating to the new organization. Steelton grocers are very enthusiastic over its formation and the platform evolved.

Geo. H. Campbell has again assumed his duties as manager of the Toronto office of T. H. Estabrooks Co., Ltd., after an absence of about 17 months. Mr. Campbell's friends will be pleased to hear of his recovery from the nervous breakdown that has kept him off duty for so long. He is at the office every morning, but in a few weeks' time he expects to be back in harness as before.

The first consignment of Niagara fruit left last week for the Old Country. It consisted of six baskets of peaches, addressed as follows: Four baskets to J. J. Adams & Son, Temple Court, Liverpool, and two baskets to J. J. Adams & Son, Monument Building, London, England. The baskets were shipped from the Niagara district by the steamer Chicora. The Dominion Express Company will care for them en route to Montreal, and they will be carried across the ocean by one of the Allan steamers. They were packed in sawdust and paper, and were valued at a total of $6. The chief difficulty of course is the prospect of them spoiling.

NOTES.

Calver Gordon has severed his connection with the H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburg, Pa., as publicity manager and is succeeded by S. J. Stoughton. Mr. Gordon becomes a member of the Ivan B. Nordheim Co.

The estimated aggregate of cereals produced in the United States this year, according to the Agricultural Department at Washington, amounts to 9½ billion dollars in value. Producer, consumer and transportation will benefit by this great yield, as the producer will sell more, the consumer pay less, and the transportation companies carry more.

The United States Government will make an investigation into lemons from Sicily and fruits from other countries with a view to determining if they are infested with an insect pest known as the Mediterranean fly. This fly is considered a menacing pest to the health of domestic fruit orchards and they hold it would be best to quarantine against the foreign fruits in order to protect home industry.

The Markets---Big Demand for Sugar

For Preserving Purposes—Market Has Been Steady But Easiness Ahead—Peels Will be High This Year—New Valencia Raisins Arrive—California Dried Fruits Unsettled—Some New Pack Tomatoes on Market.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Big demand.

Valencia Raisins—New stock in.

Coffee—Steady.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—September business has been on a fair scale, according to local jobbers. Demand for preserving and pickling necessities has assisted business materially. There has been a brisk demand for sugar during whole month and still continues appreciable. Sorting orders for sealers have been coming in while spices, vinegar, wax, and other pickling necessities have been called for.

SUGAR:—There has been no change in price of refined sugar, $4.95 per cwt. still ruling. There has been a particularly good demand. Big preserving demand and scarcity of nearby sugar has maintained a fairly steady tone to market, but with considerably lower prices being quoted on beets for October shipment, it is felt that the market will before a great while have to adjust itself. The weather in Europe continues fairly favorable.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES:—While molasses prices are unaltered, a firm feeling prevails in this market. Now with fall opening up there should be a better demand for this line while corn syrups should also become brisker with advent of cooler weather.

DRIED FRUITS:—There is a tendency to hold off in the purchase of California fruits. While grower's views are quite firm, it is argued that ultimately the growers must look to packers to market their crops in consuming markets and that prices will have to be adjusted to fit distributor's views.

General feeling in prunes on the coast is firmer, about the only premiums asked, being on 30's and 40's. Opinions on the raisin situation vary a good deal also.

This year's Valencia raisins are of good quality while dates this year are also reported excellent. Peels are higher than last year, citron commanding an especially high figure.

TEAS:—There is no change in local tea situation. Routine trade is being done, market ruling steady in sympathy with primary markets.

COFFEE:—Coffee prices are well maintained. There is a stiff front to New York market while reports of frost that have been coming from Brazil are apparently well founded. Some little damage at least has been done which will cut down the big yield which was expected for next year.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Easiness ahead.

Tomatoes—New pack in.

Peels—High this year.

Celery Seed—Will be lower.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The outstanding feature in the grocery trade is the big business being done in preserving supplies, both sugar and sealers having a particularly big run. There has been a tremendous crop of peaches this year and each day seems to make the fruit crop look larger. Naturally there has been a big demand for sugar most grocers having sold more sugar this month than they ever did before in September. Shortages in this staple have existed at times and even yet, some refiners are behind with their orders.

There has been a bigger sorting trade in sealers than for several years. Other years scarcity of fruit caused a small demand for fruit jars. Last season many retailers had stock left over and accordingly they ordered rather light this year with the result that they have now to replenish their stock.

The Christmas cake is going to cost considerable this year, or at least some ingredients are. Peels which are coming to hand are on a high level, particularly citron. Valencia raisins are also high but California stock is lower than for several years.

SUGAR.—There has been no change in refined sugar prices but possibility of a weakening seems to be looming up for the not far distant future. "Sugar is a hand-to-mouth game," declared one sugar man this week. "It is a mistake to buy more than for immediate needs. In 10 or 15 days I expect to see a decided readjustment. The weakness of market is shown in price of new beets which while quoted at a figure equal to $4.59 duty paid New York for September, are quoted as low as $4.03 for October."

"I expect market to hold steady until preserving rush is over," said another. "That will probably be 10 days or two weeks."

There has been a tremendous demand for sugar this year and several of the refiners both in the United States and Canada are still behind with their orders. Both shortage of sugar and of cars for shipping is in evidence. However wholesalers are keeping fairly well up with orders.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—That the sale of corn syrups has been on an appreciable scale all summer and that it has exceeded other years, is the statement of one manufacturer. This line is not dropped during the summer now as was the case years ago. Already fall activity is beginning to set in and this will increase as the year advances and the weather becomes cooler.

DRIED FRUITS.—First shipment of new crop Valencia raisins were received and with many houses have already all gone out at from 9 to 10 cents. The quality proved to be exceedingly good, although there is no denying that the price is high. Other shipments are expected to be worth about 9 cents.

Some new figs have also been received on this market, a few lots of first arrival being brought along by express. One firm sold fancy stock at 15 cents. Prices in general are expected to be much similar to last year. Dates will not come in until well on in October but quality this year is reported to be excellent. There will be a big demand for the first shipment on account of the bareness of the market.

It is somewhat difficult to ascertain what can be expected of the future in California fruits. In some quarters there is a feeling that present coast prices are too high and prices may ease later. However, growers, have exalted ideas. The total result of the September rains on the coast was in the aggregate not great, affecting more the quality than the quantity.

Ideas on prunes at coast vary a good deal. However, values have started off at more reasonable figures than last year. One local jobber quotes the following prices on new crop goods:—30 to 40's, 12c; 40 to 50's, 9¾c; 50 to 60's, 8½; 60 to 70's, 8c; 70 to 80's, 7½c; 80 to 90's, 6⅞c; and 90 to 100's, 6¼c. These are prices on 25-lb. boxes, 50 lbs. being ¼c less. The same dealer quotes apricots at 14 cents and peaches at 9 cents.

TEA.—A fair trade is reported in tea locally at steady prices. Situation shows no particular change. A report from the London market says:—"Consumption of tea at home and abroad has not proved sufficiently expansive of late to absorb the increased production from India and Ceylon; the continued large percentage of increase in the Java yields also, is a menace to the prosperity of Indian and Ceylon companies; yet further the reports from the producing districts in India still continue favorable for a large production of tea. The figures, therefore, both actual and anticipated appear to be distinctly unfavorable to a higher range of prices.

"With regard to Ceylon tea, the outlook is better, as the shipments from Colombo to the United Kingdom for August were 8,750,000 lbs. and the estimate for September is 7,500,000, which indicates that quality will appreciably improve and in all probability a correspondingly higher range of prices will result."

COFFEE. — There is a good steady feeling in local coffee, demand continuing along steady lines. The market in New York has ruled quite strong. Confirmation of considerable damage by frost in Brazil has been the direct cause of the strength, as this reduces the chances of the bumper crop expected in 1913-14. In addition, receipts coming forward to the Brazil coffee ports from the plantations are now about 700,000 bags below those of last year and this disparity increases rather than diminishes as the season advances.

Thus general conditions seemingly point to a continuance of present steadiness, although New York reports buyers as still inclined to hold off, confining purchases to immediate requirements.

SPICES.—As high as 50 cents per pound is now being asked for celery seed but lower prices are likely soon. It has been the exceeding scarcity of this line that has boosted prices from a normal level of 16 to 18 cents up to present figure. Shipments are now on the way to New York and are quoted considerably under prices that have been ruling.

Peppers still hold a steady position, both black and white being included. Cloves maintain a stiff front, reports from Zanzibar confirming reports of a short crop. There is a good sorting demand for general lines in view of the pickling season now in full swing. Retailers should push spices while it is possible to reap a good trade. This is business that will shortly disappear.

RICE AND TAPIOCA. — There are no figures available to show whether high prices are affecting consumption of rice, but there will probably be some curtailment for this reason. At least this will likely be so in the lower grades. For some years, Montreal milled Rangoon was sold by the majority of retail trade at six pounds for 25 cents but with present prices, this cannot be done.

General steadiness marks all grades of rice.

EVAPORATED APPLES:—The new "evaps" on market are bringing around 8 cents per pound, which is a low opening figure as compared with past few years. Ideas are still lower for later goods.

PEELS:—It has been pointed out before that peels were due to be high this year. New shipments are now coming to hand and quotations bear out former reports. Lemon is quoted at 13 cents, orange at 13½ and citron which has been high for past couple of years, is up around the 19 cent level. Higher cost of raw material is responsible. High sugar is a contributing factor.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO:—New pack tomatoes have been received and in the absence of any prices being named, they are being quoted at ruling prices for old goods—$1.45 to $1.50. New corn is now packed, but none has come to market because it is not needed, there still being a considerable quantity of old goods on hand. There is nothing particularly new in regard to prospects for corn and tomatoes. As stated before much depends on the length of season. Naming of prices will probably be delayed quite late in order to ascertain as near as possible the size of the pack.

The pack of peaches will be large or at least it should be as there is a tremendous crop this year. Situation in plums was not nearly so good.

There is said to have been some easing in certain lines of jams since opening prices. For instance, one firm which quoted strawberry and raspberry in 16 oz. jars at $2.25 is now said to be down to $2.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Sept. 25.—With an active city trade and a steady stream of country orders coming in, wholesale grocers and jobbers are well satisfied with the business situation.

Markets are steady in all lines and there are no changes to report.

Weakness in certain lines of dried fruits points to reductions in near future, but for present there is no change. The saving of the new crop will, when completed, lead to a general revision of prices.

More activity in teas and coffees is reported, but no prospects of any changes of importance in prices.

Bad weather during the latter part of last week delayed threshing, but is not responsible for any serious harm. Collections show some improvement, but the serious movement of wheat has not yet commenced. Until it does there will be no great influx of cash.

SUGAR.—The phenomenal demand for this commodity is being well sustained, and supplies are taxed to meet it. Prices are steady and market at present time appears settled:

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Sept. 24.—Local market for past week has had little of special interest to offer as there were few deviations from ordinary routine. Local grocers advise that market in Ontario flour will be quite firm for some time to come and that there is no likelihood of lower quotings, but should weather conditions continue favorable, Manitoba patents should be cheaper. In Ontario estimates give the wheat crop this year as 13,000,000 bushels as against 19,000,000 in 1911. But it is confidently expected according to local advices that Western Canada crop will yield 180,000,000 bushels, an increase of 30,000,000 bushels over last year. There has been no local change during week. Oatmeal gives promise of going slightly higher.

Local dealers have commenced to get busy laying in their stock of provisions for winter, and the last week has seen quite a stir in this regard. Grocers are finding that they must pay considerably more for their stock of vegetables this year than for some years past, but there seems to be a plentiful supply to draw from.

Dairy products are still gaining strength and advancing continually in price. Eggs are now bringing 30 cents a dozen for fresh stock and 28 cents in case, but these prices are only temporary and will be increased in a few days. Butter is also steady and as the season advances gains greater firmness.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Sept. 26.—That the man with a good cellar or storage room will not make a mistake at present in investing in cheese is evident; this commodity has risen sharply within past week and as scarcity seems to become all the more acute there is a probability that prices will continue to advance.

Bacon is also on the upward grade. It appears that there is scarcity for a short period and retailers believe the commodity will reach the average price within a week or so.

Some idea of the local wholesale prices prevailing may be gleaned from the following quotations:

BUTTER:—Local creamery, 35c; Ontario creamery solids, 30½c; prints, 31c; Separator creamery, prints, 28c; solids 27½c; New Zealand butter, prints, 34c; solids 33½c.

CHEESE:—Canadian solids, 17c; twins, 17½c; Stilton, 19c.

LARD:—3s, 5s, 10s, 15 and 16c; 20s, 14¾ and 15¾; 50s-80s, 14½ and 15½; substitutes, 11 to 11¾.

VEGETABLES:—Local potatoes, $12 per ton; horse radish, 15c; cabbage 1¼c; sweet potatoes, 4c; carrots, 75c; turnips, 75c; beets, $1; garlic string, 12c; lettuce, hothouse, $1; onions per sack, $1.25; pickling onions, $2 per basket.

THE EVAPORATED APPLE QUESTION.

Montreal Wholesaler Insists on Quality Pack.

Montreal, Sept. 26. — A Montreal wholesaler, who has been associated with the grocery business for more than a few years, draws attention to the evaporated apple situation, referred to in last week's issue.

While there is apparently no government regulation inducing manufacturers to pack high grade apples, nevertheless he regards the dealer who is crying out about pure quality goods like the man who enters a haberdasher's store to buy a tie, and in spite of his disgust at certain rainbow creations actually purchases one. He kicks about the look of it but who is to blame?

This particular wholesaler points out that he has evaporated apples in his warehouse, not in the cold storage, never have been, over a year old and they are as fresh and nippy as the day they were packed. He explains this by the fact that they are quality goods. He pays the higher price and satisfies himself on their purity before he purchases. His travelers in turn sell the retailer the better class article and the latter in turn educates the customer. By insisting on getting pure goods the retailer can do a great deal.

Editorial Note.—Quality goods should be insisted on all round and then the evaporated apple business would be on a better basis. But there are always some wholesalers and retailers who are looking for price, and this appears to necessitate a grading such as has been proposed. Then the manufacturer who furnishes good quality apples will be rewarded for the extra cost to him in packing them. Otherwise there is always a tendency to manufacture as cheaply as possible.

New Flour Crop Expected to be Lower

Trade Awaiting Lower Prices on New Crop Manitobas—Quotations at Reduced Figure for Future Shipment—Rolled Oats Advanced 25c. per Barrel on Saturday—Will Probably Ease Again When New Oats Come Forward Free Enough.

Rolled oat prices went up on Saturday as it was announced last week that they would. The advance amounted to 25 cents per barrel or 12½ cents per sack and balanced up the recent decline of a similar amount. When the decline took place, it was felt that Ontario oats would tide millers over until arrival of western stock. Ontario oats that have come forward so far have been of poor milling quality and with scarcity of old crop oats some mills have had to bring in U.S. oats for grinding in bond for export.

Towards the end of last week oat prices on Winnipeg market showed a big bulge. Indeed it is hinted that a corner exists in this commodity on that market. However, it is expected that when new crop comes forward in appreciable quantity that an easing will set in. In face of scarcity of old oats, prices can be expected to hold steady till then. There is a good crop of oats in the U.S. and Western Canada yield is also large but late.

Lower prices are expected on new crop Manitoba flour. This is the general opinion of the trade and retailers are holding off with this in view. Indeed sales of new flour are reported at a figure considerable under present quotations. There was a price as low as 50 cents per barrel under current rates reported this week but not confirmed. Sales for October delivery have been made at a 30-cent concession. While some mills are quoting prices, others are not going after this business as yet.

"There is no question but that prices on new crop flour will be lower," said one big miller this week. "No, we are not going after this business," he said in answer to a query. "We would quote a price if asked but would not advise dealers to buy at it as values will be lower."

The question now is "When will the adjustment take place?" The change will come when deliveries of new wheat become large enough to warrant it. The first shipments are just now arriving at points east of the lakes. The movement to market so far has on the whole been rather tardy. The trade are patiently waiting.

Export trade in flour is quiet and prices will have to be lower to induce business. United States and European countries are now getting Britain's trade by reason of their lower prices. Exporters are expecting prices to break in near future sufficient to allow for foreign trade.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The foreign demand for new crop spring wheat flour is good, much better than it has been for some time past, but the increase in ocean freight rates has reduced the actual volume of business transacted. The natural result of the increase was to cause an increase in quotations from the millers.

The local demand for old crop flour has improved also and business has been rather more active. Very few orders, we might mention, for new spring wheat have been booked so far.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—In Manitoba flour, retailers continue to purchase for immediate needs only, feeling that new crop will be on a more reasonable level. Indeed this is the general opinion and some mills are reported to be taking orders at a considerable concession over present values. "There is no question that prices on new crop flour will be lower," said one miller this week. "The adjustment will not take place until wheat deliveries reach larger proportions."

Winter wheat flour is in an unsettled condition, prices of raw material varying a good deal at different points at present. The yield of winter wheat was undoubtedly small, so small indeed that we will have no more than would supply domestic demand in normal year. However, as prices on this flour are practically as high as for Manitoba, it is said that bakers this year will use Manitobas in place of it. If this should prove the case then prices will have to come down to level that will create business. However, winter wheat flour must be used for pastry purposes so that this demand is certain to be maintained.

CEREALS.—As announced last week, an advance of 25 cents per barrel or 12½ cents per sack took place in rolled oats on Saturday. Local price for small lots is now up to $2.50 per sack. No further advance is anticipated but when deliveries of oats reach a large enough scale, prices are expected to ease again. Spot milling oats are scarce and some mills have brought in U.S. oats, grinding them in bond for export. Western Canada will have a good yield of oats but the crop is late, deliveries so far having been small.

This Has Been Big Year in Peaches

Yield Has Been Large—Good Demand for Preserving Purposes — Threatened With Basket Famine in Niagara District—Lemons Hold Steady—New Crop Quite High—Large Sizes Will Command Premiums—Good Stock Oranges Firm.

This has been a big year in peaches, the yield being larger than for several years. In fact, in the Niagara district of Ontario, shipments have been on so large a scale that shippers have been threatened with a basket famine, and in some cases fruit has had to be shipped out in odd sized baskets. The quality of the fruit this year has been generally good, and as a result there has been big demand for preserving purposes, prices ruling at a popular level. Demand still continues on an appreciable scale, but attention to this line will shortly dwindle and be given more to grapes and pears.

Warmer weather would prove beneficial to grapes, as in some sections, at least, they are not ripening up just as rapidly as they might. Even with the increased supplies of domestic grapes, Malaga still continue to sell, while fancy peaches from across the line are still being brought in.

The situation in lemons varies at different centres, and while, for instance, values are unchanged at Montreal, prices at Toronto have reached a record level. As before stated, there will practically be no further shipments until new crop arrive around Nov. 1. The Italian Government has been taking all the lemons for the use of their soldiers at Tripoli, paying 1 cent each for all sizes. Market on new crop lemons has opened slightly higher than last year, and indications are that large sizes will be scarce, as lack of rains in the spring proved detrimental to the growth of the fruit.

There is a firm feeling in good stock oranges, late Valencias being the only variety now available.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUIT.—The market has not been as lively of late, practically all orders for the last few weeks of preserving having been placed . Lemons have dropped back a little, the cool weather having taken the edge off the market. Apples are selling freely, but in some cases, quality is not all that one would desire. Basket fruit is still moving out freely.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—So large has been the yield of peaches this year that some dealers are threatened with basket famine. Quality of fruit has been good, and demand has been brisk. However, the popular prices which prevailed last week for late Crawfords and Elbertas still continue. "Owing to a basket famine," writes one shipper, "it may be necessary to use some 9 quart baskets for peaches." Grapes will be more plentiful if we get warmer weather. Present cool weather is keeping them back. Niagara grapes are not offered, as they are not quite ripe. Tendency for number of years has been to cut this choice grape too soon, which has spoiled its reputation to a certain extent. Moore's Early and Red Rogers are selling now.

As intimated last week, oranges are higher, selling up to $5 for good stock. Lemons have also continued on the ascent, as stocks are small and as high as $7 is quoted this week. New cranberries are now on the market.

VEGETABLES.—Through the wholesaler at any rate, biggest demand in vegetables is for pickling lines. Peppers, onions, cucumbers, tomatoes, cauliflower and similar lines are being called for. Pickling cucumbers are selling at 65 cents per basket.

Potatoes are easier again, now being down to 90 cents per bag. Few further shipments of New Brunswick are being brought along until the rot question is settled. Some dealers lost money on their first shipments. There are plenty of Ontario stock to fill the demand. There are some reports of rot on account of wet weather, but no serious damage is as yet reported. If damp weather continues, it may prove quite serious.

Grocer Advertises Recipe to Sell Spices

Methods of an Oshawa Dealer to Make Extra Spice Sales—Displays Them in the Store Where They Can be Readily Seen and Uses the Newspaper as Well.

Oshawa, Ont., Sept. 26—(Special).—J. E. Beaton, an Oshawa grocer has been putting special efforts behind spices during the pickling season. As soon as the least sign of demand became visible he began to swing them into prominence. At most times of the year he keeps his spices in closed tins behind the counter. However, as the season of demand approaches, he puts them in square glass bottles fitted with glass stoppers which he has specially for the purpose. They are properly labelled with the price, giving the amount per pound as well as the weight given for 5 cents. Mr. Beaton believes in letting people know the price. People want the best quality of spices and are ready to pay a reasonable price. Quality is made the keynote in pushing their sale.

Where They Can be Seen.

These bottles are placed on a counter at the front, right under the eye of every customer who enters the store. Thus showing the spice as well as announcing the price, they serve as excellent silent salesmen. In addition, the quality of the spices is not affected as if they were exposed to the air in display.

The local newspaper was also used by this store to promote spice sales, a commendable method being employed. It was in the form of a recipe for catsup, giving the exact quantity of each ingredient required.

Kept on File.

This recipe was something that many housewives appreciated and no doubt several clipped it out to preserve from year to year as a guide. The exhortation at the bottom, "Ketchup made by this recipe will not spoil if you purchase the ingredients at Beaton's," attracts many a housewife in quest of good catsup to the store. In fact the Beaton store has done a big trade in spices since the pickling season opened.

Editorial Note.—The idea of using a recipe in advertising in order to attract the attention of the housewife is not altogether new but sufficiently so to be interesting. A recipe of any kind is something that holds a great deal of interest for women and there is no doubt that the same plan could be used in pushing many other lines besides pickling supplies. For instance some dealers use a recipe for Xmas cake in the same way. The sale of oatmeal might be helped by telling the housewife how to make oatmeal cookies. In fact the use to which the idea might be put is quite extensive.

THE WEEKLY FISH COLUMN.

Keep your eye on this space every week. We are not in the fish business, but we can give you "fresh from the water" news.

Some dealers are bringing haddies direct from the coast.

The finnan haddie market is getting lively. Retailers are finding haddies good sellers just now.

It is a little early to ship fillets just now, but cooler weather will soon be at hand, so make room for some fleshy ones. Customers will appreciate them.

Kippers and bloaters are coming along "swimmingly." Be a live one and fish for some of this trade.

Fish is brainy food. But sometimes it is too bad to waste the fish

Do you try to cater to lumber and mining camps? Why not use good bait and catch the order for such lines as Kinless cod, put up in 50 and 100-lb. boxes.

Salt herring are a great favorite in the mining centres. You can buy them by the barrel and half-barrel.

The pen is mightier than the sword, but the sword-fish cannot keep abreast of the times. It's a dead one for another season.

Prepared boneless cod is a great seller just now. No waste with it in any sense of the word.

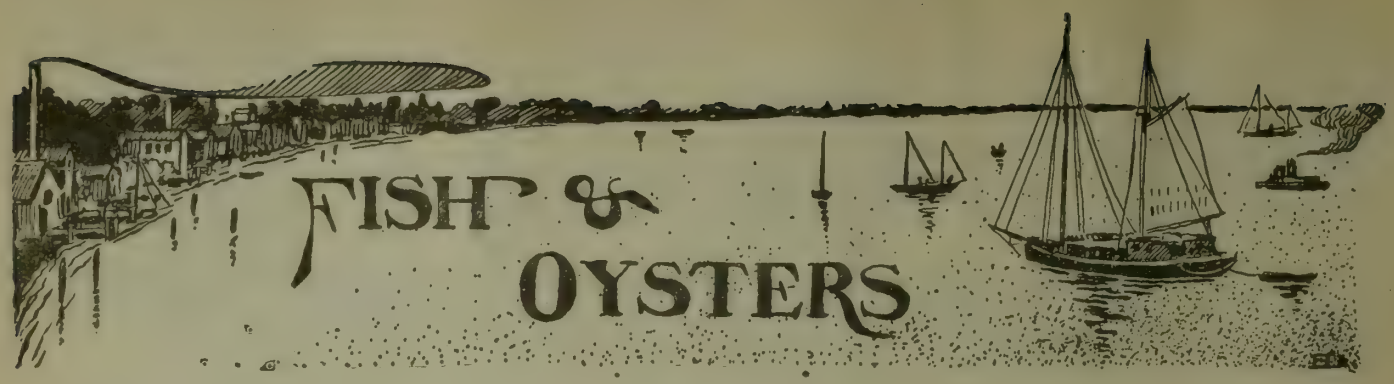
The usual fall gales were experienced on the coast last week. But there is plenty of fish all the same.

Don't have any holes in your net, some profits may slip through.

N.B. APPLE CROP NOT LARGE.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 27—(Special).—Much interest is now centering amongst local grocers, and dealers in other parts as well, concerning the apple harvest in New Brunswick, and it is generally admitted that it is expected to fall considerably short of other years. At the opening of the season prospects seemed bright. Later on doubt was expressed because of the unfavorable weather conditions, and yesterday S. L. Peters, Dominion inspector of fruit for New Brunswick, who was in the city, said that he calculated upon a shortage of about 50 per cent. of what had been expected. Cold rains at the period of polination, he said, had had an injurious effect upon the growth, and had also hindered the bees from working and the latter are an important factor in the fertilization of orchards.

The consumption of fresh fruits in the United States is estimated at $200,000,000 annually.



Prepared Fish Now Coming to Front

Supplies Will Soon Be in Place and Season Under Way—Retailers Now Ordering—Prepared Cod Lines Will Keep Indefinitely—Scarcity in Some Lines of Fresh Fish—Halibuut Short and Firm.

Prepared fish are now coming to the front, more attention being given them by wholesalers and more interest displayed by the retail trade. Some markets are just now beginning to receive their advance shipments of prepared cod, but supplies will soon all be in place and the season will be under way. Already retailers are sending in their orders, and it is pointed out by wholesalers that these lines will keep indefinitely, and that it is to the advantage of retailers to start the fall with a complete stock.

There still continues a scarcity in some lines of fresh fish. Halibut is short and prices accordingly firm. Lack of bait is hampering fishing on the east coast, and while there have been some catches of herring and mackerel, cod and haddock are short. Lake fish are in a little better supply.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—There was practically no fresh halibut on the market this week, this line being particularly scarce just now. Fresh haddock and cod are none too abundant either, but apart from these lines, there is a generally good supply. There is an increased demand for smoked fish.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Last week was an encouraging one in fish department of most dealers. There was a fairly plenteous stock to select from and a ready sale, increased largely by fact that there were three fish days in the calendar, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. The latter part of the week was not so good, owing to weather conditions, as was the first portion and supplies fell somewhat.

Haddock and cod remained the staples most abundant, bringing the same price, 5 cents, while halibut was received in better quantities, although still high, bringing 16 to 18 cents. Some herring are being caught along the bay and bring 15 cents a dozen. They are of good size and ready sellers. The run on oysters and clams thus far has been rather slow, dealers looking for a big increase when colder weather sets in.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Fish trade is running along in even lines, with a tendency to improvement. Lake fish are in somewhat better supply, there being plenty of trout now to supply the demand. Fresh halibut is still scarce, and on account of shortage of fish at coast, local prices are firm and may be higher.

The week is marked by the arrival on this market of Labrador herrings in both kegs and barrels, as well as Labrador trout. Scottish herring are expected in week or so. Skinless cod has been added to the list, and other different varieties of cod will be on market in a week or so, and fish season as far as supplies are concerned will be really under way. Oysters are quoted at $1.75 per gallon.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax.—From all points along the coast come reports of an unusual scarcity of fish. Fishermen are unable to secure any quantity of bait, and as result fishing operations have been greatly impeded. Cod and haddock are scarce. Fishing on the inshore grounds is particularly poor for season. Local dealers are now finding a heavy demand for scallops, a shell fish that is gathered along the shore in large quantities. Consumption of oysters here this week was enormous, there being hundreds of visitors in the city for the Exhibition, and oysters were in demand.

Smoked fish business is good, but demand for salt and dried fish is light.

Produce & Provisions

Hogs and Pork Products on High Level

Supplies Are Also Scarce—Live Hogs at Record Price at Several Centres—Dealers Are Wondering How Prices Will Shape This Fall—Feeling That There Will be Easing—Many Poor Quality Eggs Arriving—Butter is Steady.

Interest at the present time is centred to a large extent around hogs and pork products in general, which, by reason of the high level which they have gradually attained naturally attract attention. Not only have live hogs attained the high water mark in regard to price at many centres, but they are scarce. The number coming forward does not measure up to the demand.

Lard has already reached a high price. Rather stinted production along with a fair demand has kept markets pretty bare while in sympathy with hogs, prices have been on the upward trend. There is also a general firm feeling in other lines of pork products. For instance in Toronto long clear and backs are not only higher, but scarce, some houses having little or none to offer. Fresh meats have been in such demand and command such appreciable prices that packers find it to their advantage to sell in the fresh state.

Dealers are now wondering how live hogs are going to do this fall, more so in view of the curious fluctuations which took place in the market last year. On Sept. 1, last year Toronto dealers were quoting $7.70 at country points. Then came heavy deliveries and before the end of October prices had been reduced $1.70 per cwt. to $6.

There is no denying that hogs are now at a record price for Toronto dealers are quoting around $8.60 at country points. There are various opinions expressed as to future, but there is a feeling that deliveries will be freer later on and that prices will ease. Dealers are wondering when the turning point will come.

One wholesale dealer declared that this week the poor quality of eggs now coming in is seriously affecting the consumption. The damp weather of late has seriously impaired the quality at most centres while the complaint is also made that shippers in some cases hold eggs in hopes of better prices, so that when they arrive they really are not fresh and naturally the public don't take kindly to them.

There is a slightly firmer feeling in butter in some parts of Eastern Canada. Demand from the West has prevented any accumulations on spot, although stocks in storage are large, a considerable portion of which is held for northwest and coast firms.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS:—The market has become firm for practically all lines, there being a good demand for the available stock which, everything considered, is none too large, as the receipts of hogs have been disappointing. At the end of last week, prices for live hogs advanced 10c per 100 lbs., owing to limited supplies coming forward. The increase was also partly brought about by the higher levels reached in Toronto. There is a good demand also for Abattoir fresh-killed hogs at firm prices.

BUTTER:—A decidedly stronger feeling has developed in this market and though large stocks are still held, it looks as if some dealers have been holding off for some time past in anticipation of an easier situation, because there seems to be no hesitation whatsoever when the higher price is demanded. Of course, with a heavy demand from the West, six or seven cars having been shipped recently, the stocks on spot will drop off considerably and prices may decline temporarily, as present high level may bring about large shipments from the country and thus cause a kind of slump. However, recent advance in the country has simply turned out as we stated a couple of weeks ago.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS:—The feature of local provision market at present time is scarcity and high prices for live hogs as well as shortage in certain lines of pork products. Hogs have been coming forward exceedingly tardily of late. For instance, the arrivals at both stock markets last week only amounted to 4,906 as compared with 10,879 for same week last year. As a result, prices have been on the ascent ranging at $8.60 at country points and as high as $9.10 for best grades locally. Dressed hogs are up to $12.50 to $13.00 now.

Wholesalers are low on long clear and price is firm at 15 cents. Some houses at moment have little or none to offer. Backs are also scarce. Explanation given by one dealer is that demand is so good for fresh meats that packers are selling it that way instead of smoking.

BUTTER:—There is really no change in butter situation and prices remain same as last week. Dairy prints range all the way from 24 to 28 cents, according to quality. The production is quite large and there is plenty coming along although reports from Quebec indicate firmer feeling. Opinion is expressed in some quarters that when factories begin to change from cheese to butter that an easier tendency is possible.

EGGS:—It was pointed out last week that prices would have to go up in the city or down in the country. It seems as if the adjustment is to take place in the country. In fact, tendency is already easier there. There seems to be plenty of eggs coming in. Some dealers say there are more coming than there is a good demand for, and some have to be stored. Wholesalers claim that they are not making any money on eggs on account of the large shrinkage.

"It is hard to get fresh eggs," said one wholesaler this week. "The damp weather is impairing the quality, while shippers have the foolish habit of holding off in hopes of an extra ½ cent, so that when they get here, they are not fresh. This is cutting down demand considerably, for naturally when they can't get fresh eggs they don't want any."

CHEESE:—There is a slightly firmer feeling in cheese and some dealers would quote ¼-cent higher. The production is still appreciable, but brisk export enquiry buoys up the market. Many factories turning out cheese in Ontario are said to have made contracts for the shipping of cream to United States points, as it pays them better than to make cheese.

Pushing Provisions by Window Display

Good Time of Year for Showing Provisions in Window is Now Here—Excellent Method of Creating Demand—Goods Well Displayed Beget Purchases—Suggestion for Arrangement of a Window Trim.

During the summer months, conditions are not exactly favorable to the display of provisions in the window. The higher temperature and the presence of flies makes this rather a difficult problem with many stores. These disadvantages are now, however, beginning to disappear and the showing of provisions in the window once more becomes a possibility.

Window is Valuable.

There is no disputing the value of a window display as an agent in the sale of pork products. These are lines which have to be shown in order to be sold, or at least their sale is greatly increased if they are in a position where people may see them. The dealer knows how the showing of these lines on the provision counter even if it be in a remote part of the store, helps their sale. How much greater must be the value of a display in the window where they are seen not only by those who enter the store, but by those passing the store as well.

How it Strikes a Customer.

A customer is on her way to Jones' grocery to buy some cooked ham for supper. On the way, she passes your store. You have a window display of provisions. It is attractively arranged and the cooked ham looks particularly enticing to her. She decides she will try yours for a change. You slice it nicely for her and she is well pleased, so much so that she continues to come to your store for ham. Therein lies the value of a window display. People are frequently not married to the one store. They change around. The store which goes after their trade in the proper manner gets it.

Having decided that the window is a valuable asset as a sales creator, the next step is the arrangement of the display so as to attract the largest possible amount of business. Some enticing and attractive windows can be arranged if a little care is taken.

Suggestion for a Trim.

A provision dealer gives a suggestion for a display of pork products in which is shown lard—a line which will shortly begin to sell well. The grocer might even add butter and eggs, as they are really assorted lines. At the rear forming a background, he places hams and backs, alternately hanging from a bar, which if the dealer has not in his window may be arranged temporarily. Slightly to the front of this is a row of lard. In the centre is placed a sixty pound tub tilted on its side with the mouth facing the front. The lid is of course removed. Ranging from each side in a curve are smaller tubs and pails arranged on their sides in the same manner. For instance, after the 60 pound tub might come a 20 pound pail, a ten pound, a five, a three and then a one pound block. The fruit row next the glass is given over to hams and bacon. These should be arranged tastily, preferably on platters. Such a window as this evenly built up should present a good appearance and attract business.

Can Easily be Handled.

There are many business getting trims which can be arranged which will suggest themselves to the trimmers. The main thing is to realize the value of a window trim and the desirability at just this time—a good season for the sale of provisions and when they can be handled with minimum expense and trouble.

As in all windows, the trim should be even and symmetrical and arranged with a view to appealing directly to the customer's palate.

DRIED FRUITS

The dried fruit market has shown some erratic tendencies so far this campaign, which is not unusual, for often, along with other large commodites of commerce it develops vagaries which are frequently quite unexpected---The Valencia Raisin market opened high this season owing to reported shortage in the crop. The prices quoted are so high that no doubt business in them will be very much curtailed, especially so, as the California kinds are offered at such moderate figures. We offer best select Valencias at $8\frac{1}{2}$.

CALIFORNIA RAISINS

California Raisins are so reasonable in price, that there should in consequence be an excellent demand. We have some very attractive offerings in this class of fruit and shall be glad to have your orders. We quote

ONE SELLING REASON BUT THERE ARE MORE

It is human nature to prefer to sell goods guaranteed in quality by the manufacturer, and it is human for the public to prefer that class of goods. Elgin Brand Pure Lard, Cooked Meats, Smoked Ham and Bacon are guaranteed quality; but we don't want you to sell for that reason alone. There is another.

Very shortly after you start to sell it, Elgin Brand goods will give you another reason. It very seldom loses an adherent, once it gets him.

Sunday as a Day of Rest

The men of the household rest on Sunday—and eat.

The women who cook the big Sunday dinners which the men enjoy do not get much rest, but they are learning to take some "short-cuts" to save unnecessary work in the hot kitchen.

JELL-O

is one of the labor-savers. Delicious Jell-O desserts, which just fit the Sunday appetite, are made by dissolving Jell-O in boiling water. It is done in a minute, and adds a good many minutes to woman's share of Sunday rest.

Are you getting your share of the demand which is being made for Jell-O by women who want to rest and at the same time give their families something extra fine to eat?

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO.,
Bridgeburg, Can.

The name JELL-O is on every package in big red letters. If it isn't there, it isn't JELL-O.

THE ELGIN

National Coffee Mill

The "Elgin" Mill is easily first favorite with the up-to-date grocer, because it combines easy running and rapid grinding qualities with beauty of appearance and finish. It is very durable and is fitted with a special adjuster for regulating the grinding.

Equipped with the new style force feed steel grinders. Investigate this grinder carefully. Its price is very reasonable.

The Food That Serves the Appetite

Sardines preserved in the whole state in pure olive oil are precluded from contamination. Besides, the sardine has appetizing qualities, and where the appetite serves digestion follows.

"KING OSCAR" SARDINES

embody all the features that make sardines an appetizing and health-giving food. Careful selection of fish and always uniformly pure; sweet and well packed in pure olive oil.

They produce satisfaction and incidentally profit.

PURE MILK ?

Milk is a drink and a food that is on every table three times a day, and the big question is to keep it pure and sweet. LAURENTIA MILK has solved the question. The mechanical process of homogenization does it. It keeps the milk pure and sweet indefinitely until opened. No chemical ingredients are added. Every grocer should handle it, and recommend it for all delicate children.

Don't be hobbled—

Cut Loose From Poor Flour

WHEN a flour stops pulling, Brother Grocer, it drags. How can you forge ahead with poor quality neutralizing your efforts?

Are you working for your competitor or for yourself? Stop wasting your energy, your planning, your enthusiasm.

Cut loose from poor flour once for all.

For the very best salesmen you have can't make bad flour good, nor can it ever make good itself.

Cut loose from dissatisfaction, impatience, apologetic explanation, from dreams that never come true.

Consider now FIVE ROSES flour, Brother Grocer.

Ever since 1888 it has helped realize the hopes, of the best retailers, brought back the customer and done missionary work outside.

Many a grocer has changed the drag into a pull by merely changing his brand to FIVE ROSES.

What else could you expect from a flour that has jumped its sales from 800 barrels to 10,500 barrels?

Customers with the same flour needs as you write us that FIVE ROSES sales are going up, always going up.

Are you going to be held back any longer?

Ask your jobber or write our nearest office.

TALK MONEY INTO YOUR POCKET

You know our brands, they're advertised for you to your customers. This means that your customers know them by name if not by taste.

This makes it one of the easiest things to talk money into your pocket. Very often the mere mention of the name BORDEN'S will recommend the goods and the sale is made.

BORDEN'S PRODUCTS

are produced with the aid of only the most modern and scientific condensing machinery, and can be relied on for their purity. Coupled with this is long experience and the most rigid sanitary regulations. It's the Brand you should feature. It will bring the money in.

Will not injure the hands or fine fabrics

Wash day often leaves a woman's hands in very bad shape, owing to the use of strong ammonia or washing compounds. Parsons' Household Ammonia does not injure the skin or fabrics nor discolor white goods.

It is an ideal bath requisite.

Parsons' Ammonia is cloudy in appearance because it is pure Ammonia mixed with other ingredients which prevent injurious effects.

From a Hard Headed Business Standpoint

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service.

They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

PUTTING BOTH PACKAGES IN AN ORDER

When a customer asks for KNOX SPARKLING GELATINE you'll find it easy to sell her KNOX ACIDULATED GELATINE as well, because our advertising in the magazines is calling your customer's attention to the value and convenience of the ACIDULATED package. It contains an extra envelope of concentrated lemon juice in addition to the two envelopes of gelatine—enough to make two full quarts of jelly—flavor and all in the one package for 15 cents. It is far superior to the cheap, flavored, ready prepared gelatines which make only one pint of jelly per package. No wonder KNOX GELATINE is such a fast seller, and no wonder grocers like to sell it at the profit it pays!

The Proper Care of Oysters

There are many false ideas with reference to this subject. There is one thing the dealer should firmly establish in his mind that he does not require expert knowledge, and that he should not fuss with his oysters. All they want is to be left alone with lots of ice on them. There is absolutely nothing else you can do for them; never wash or put fresh water in them, neither should you put your ice among the oysters; keep them in a compartment package, preferably a Display Case, where ice and water will be separated from your oysters. Sell them as you receive them and get a price that will afford your doing so. When you add water to cheapen your oysters, you are short-changing both the customer and yourself. If it was a case where the water simply took up the space on so many oysters, it would not be so bad, but as soon as you put fresh water among your oysters you immediately depreciate materially every oyster the fresh water comes in contact with, so that what you give your customer is not as good; you have really not treated him as fairly as though you simply took a few oysters out of his pint or quart package. The dealers who are making money out of the oyster business to-day are those who are getting the price, and put the stock out the best they know how.

200,000 lbs. of Tea are Drunk in Ontario Every Week

The last two weeks' "SALADA" sales in Ontario alone amounted to 85,018 and 80,922 lbs. respectively. This means that in Ontario there was sold one pound of SALADA out of every two and a half pounds of all kinds of tea used in the Province of Ontario. These two weeks were certainly the largest two weeks' business we ever had; but even so, the record of the past justifies the conviction that this immense share of the tea trade will soon be the usual weekly output. What does this show? Simply the reward of serving the public with fine tea.

Friday Planning for Saturday Sales

Guelph Firm Lays Great Stress on the Week-End Window—Special Sales Announced Ahead by Means of Show Cards—These are Made Descriptive of the Goods and, Prices are Frequently Quoted—Window Changed Twice a Week—Otherwise Customers Ask the Reason.

The Friday evening window display is always an important feature of the week-end business in many a grocery store. Saturday is recognized as the big day of the week so far as sales are concerned and great efforts are made to attract by means of the window as many buyers as possible.

Herewith is shown one of the Friday evening displays of Robinson Bros., Guelph, Ont. It was dressed by R. S. Robinson and the original was undoubtedly an enticing display.

Full of Fruits and Vegetables.

This is a fruit and vegetable window. It includes such lines as watermelon, apples, peaches, pears, oranges, corn, cauliflower, celery, beets and cabbage.

Robinson Bros. are strong believers in the power of the window in making sales. Practically any line of goods they wish to sell, can be sold by a neat display. Just now the Saturday window is devoted to fruits and vegetables. The window here shown according to Mr. Robinson made a very profitable display.

"There can be no question of the advantages derived from these displays," he said to The Grocer. "We change our window twice a week and find if left longer than that time, some of our customers wonder why such is the case and often ask us the reason."

Employ Show Cards to Sell.

Robinson Bros., as the window shows, are strong believers in the advantages of using display cards. "We use show-cards in every space possible," remarked Mr. Robinson," describing in a plain manner something interesting about the article, as well as the price."

Among the show-cards used are the following: "Fresh Fruits for Saturday," "Try Our Fresh Fruits," Saturday, Choice Cauliflower," Quality," "Quantity," "Saturday, Sweet Juicy Oranges, 40c dozen," "Saturday, nice Crawford Peaches, dozen, quart, basket," etc.

Such cards as these secure the interest of many passersby on Friday evening. With the display itself, they are the means of many making decisions as to where their Saturday fruit and vegetables are to be purchased. They sell in advance.

The Why of Frequent Changes.

The point brought out by Mr. Robinson as to changing the window twice a week is worthy of notice. When a passerby sees the same window very often he soon loses interest in it, just as does the visitor to a great city when he has become a resident for any length of time. Buildings that originally held his attention becoming commonplace and are passed with scarcely a glance. Human nature will predominate at all times. The window that has been looked at a dozen times has no further interest. The retailer should see that windows are regularly changed. Robinson Bros. find it necessary to make the change at least twice a week. At any rate it should not be allowed to run over the week and those who have experimented with an every-other-day chasge from one line to another claim this is the most profitable.

Planning ahead in the matter of the window display should be made a feature in every store. There are great opportunities for the dealer who has prepared a schedule of plans to be followed from week to week and month to month throughout the year.

Photographs of Good Displays.

Editorial Note.—As before remarked The Grocer is desirous of securing good photographs of grocery windows which dealers or their clerks have trimmed. By reproducing these, all readers of the paper of course will benefit but none more than those whose windows are shown.

Opportunities Presented by October

Busines That the Retailer Should Go After Strongly in View of the Arrival of Fall in Earnest—Place Fish and Oysters to the Front—Cereals Again in Prominence—Trade in Late Fruits, Sugar and Sealers—Get Rid of Remaining Summer Goods.

With the opening of October fall trade can be said to be really under way. The important point for the retailer to remember in going after trade during this month is that the season has advanced and the goods which were in chief demand but a short time ago are no longer required. They must be relegated to a secondary position and those lines which are more in keeping with the season swung to the fore.

Get Rid of Summer Goods.

In regard to relegating summer goods to the background, there is a second side to the question that would be well to consider here. The grocer who has still goods on hand that are really summer goods should not banish them to the remote parts of the store without first making an effort to clean them up. It it surprising what success some retailers have met with in pushing a line even when the season for them was really past. It is, however, worth a real final effort for if not sold now, probably a large proportion will have to be carried over for another year and no grocer desires that. For this reason he should put them to the front for a last time and talk them to customers.

Must Follow the Season's Changes.

However, as stated before every grocer should realize that summer is past and that fall is here and certain goods peculiar to this particular season will now be in demand. A lax point with many retailers is that they fail to follow the changing seasons closely enough. They are outstripped in the race for trade by the man who notes the arrival of new seasons and new opportunities and at once puts forth a strong effort and secures the cream of the trade. The less progressive man follows after and picks up what business may be left. Therefore, let the dealer profit by recognizing that fall and the demand for fall goods is here.

Look to Fish Department.

One of the lines of trade which is boosted into greater prominence by the arrival of fall is the fish department. Many retailers have already lent great attention to this line while others have all their plans made and are about to commence.

Smoked, salted and prepared lines of fish in nearly all their varieties are now available, in addition to fresh fish, so that the supply is now extensive enough to commence the fish campaign in earnest. It is well to do some planning in this department to attain the best results. If you have handled fish in former years you probably recognized some features that need close attention. Now in the early part of the season is the time to plan to overcome these.

There is an advantage in getting started early in fish which, although it has been mentioned on previous occasions, will probably bear repetition. Habit is a powerful factor in guiding our actions, and so it stands to reason that if you get customers coming to your store for fish early in the season, they will probably continue to come during the whole year. This is worth considering.

The same thing is true of another line ushered in with the fall season, namely oysters. Many dealers, now that the cooler weather is arriving, are taking up this line and as a considerable time has elapsed since it was procurable, they will probably find sales appreciable right now from the start. Proper display and cleanly handling are two of the important points to be observed in handling this line. Display cases are now available which show this line up well and protect it from dust or dirt. Proper refrigeration is of course necessary.

Place Cereals to the Front.

The demand for cereals will now begin to amount to larger proportions. During the summer it is the general custom of the people to turn to lighter varieties of breakfast foods, and in some instances to banish them entirely from their morning diet. A change has come however, with the change in seasons and people are beginning to turn their thoughts more to this line. Consequently now is the time that attention to it will be productive of good results.

An occasional window display should prove of material assistance in promoting cereal sales. Both package and bulk goods allow of some good window trims. The window may be devoted to one particular line while some retailers consider it best to show different varieties in the one display, drawing attention to the fact that now with cooler weather these lines are most seasonable.

Last Stand on Fruit.

While peaches and some other varieties of fruits are now in less liberal supply and are fading into the background for another year, there is in certain sections still some time in which to push the sale of this line. Pears are still to the front while grapes are yet to have their innings. Some dealers find a larger demand for grapes for preserving than others, due perhaps to the people in that district being better acquainted with the method of "doing them up." In order to promote the sale of this line some progressive dealers have gone to the trouble to publish a recipe for grape jelly in their advertising space. This has tended to interest not only those who had previously made grape-jelly but also those who had never made it before.

Sells Sugar and Sealers.

A good feature about selling fruit towards the end of the season is that it generally brings with it a demand for sugar, sealers and associated lines. There has been a considerable amount of preserving done this year and there will probably be a larger demand for fruit jars late in the season than has been usual in past years.

Pickling Requisites.

The pickling season is still with us and will probably be for some little time yet. It may be termed the "tail end" of the season but the tail end frequently finds a good demand for pickling necessities. This will probably be more so this year as most housewives have been busy with preserving during the past month. Spices and pickling vegetables should be featured, therefore in October.

There are several other lines that could well be pushed to advantage during October. For instance, housecleaning is now to the front on myriads of homes throughout the land and all kinds of soaps and cleansers will be in demand. All considered there are many live opportunities for the live grocer during October.

NEW WHOLESALE GROCERY HOUSE.

Anderson & Co., Ltd., is the name of a new wholesale grocery specialty firm establishing in North Bay, Ont. Wm. Anderson, the managerial member of the firm, has been for some time traveler for Davidson & Hay, and the Young Co. in the north country. The firm will specialize in tobaccos and cigars as well as groceries.

The Unconscious Effect of Advertising

An Interesting Side of the Ad.-Writer's Work — Advertising Your Advertising to the Public—Plan Adopted by Selfridge & Co., London, England—Building for the Future.

The ad. man, the window trimmer, the merchant who seeks rather than shuns an honest criticism of his work from the people with whom he expects to do, or is doing, business is taking one of the surest routes to improvement, provided he knows enough about his business to sift the useful from the impracticable. He must carefully apply his own judgment in a process of elimination.

This training is most valuable to a specialist. He obtains ideas from the most trival occurrences and suggestions from sources which to the person whose mind has not been trained in that direction are most unfruitful.

This ability to concentrate has been regarded as one of the evidences of genius, but it means nothing more than industry combined with intense, thoughtful application. It must enter into the make-up of each person having anything to do with the success of the business, or who is training himself for any particular field of activity.

Study Impressions.

A receptive, as well as a retentive mind is essential to the ad. man. He must study the impressions created upon other minds by his work, and must be able to play upon those impressions to the advantage of the enterprise in which he is engaged. Step by step, it is possible to bring the public unconsciously to that point where results, impossible at one bold stroke, are finally achieved. This process of education is one of the most interesting phases of the ad. man's work. It represents the cumulative power of advertising—the effect of the influence of continuous suggestion leading up to a certain object. Its foundation at first is the serious confidence of the merchant, the ad. man, the window trimmer and the salesforce, and ultimately it meets with the appreciation of those whom it sought to influence. This approval is demonstrated chiefly by dollars and cents.

Advertise Their Advertising.

A case which illustrates the point is presented by Selfridge & Co., Ltd., London, England, who recently adopted the plan of advertising the influence of its advertising to the public. In a very clever way they invited the public to study the effect of their advertisements upon the public. One of the advertisements which undoubtedly compelled attention in that direction was as follows:—

"The effect of honest, unexaggerated advertising is known to the initiated to have two results—one direct, the other indirect. In the one case it leads to a quick sale of the goods advertised, and in the other it has a cumulative effect which is subtle and far-reaching. The one result is as important as the other.

"Readers of the Selfridge advertisement pages are, therefore, affected in two ways. They may feel impelled to go at once and purchase some particular item which seems to be a bargain. They may be among those who really watch for and study the announcements every time they appear, buying with a judgment and discretion which it would be difficult to cultivate without this information. Or they may be just casual readers, people who glance at the pages with a certain interest, which is more curiosity than anything else.

"As matters stand at present in the advertising world these latter are probably greatly in the majority. But this is not to say that they are unaffected by the things they read. They are affected very greatly, but so subtly that they themselves are hardly conscious of the fact. The cumulative effect of these Selfridge announcements which stare them in the face so often and so strikingly is influencing many buyers unconsciously."

Here are some splendid points for the consideration of the writer of advertisements. To be the more effective advertisements should be business building and not merely useful for the time being.

Has the Country Too Many Middlemen ?

Question of an Enquiry Raised by Farmers' Publication — Claim is Made that There Are Too Many Merchants in Some Towns and Cities and that a Fewer Number Could Serve the Public Efficiently—Co-operation Advocated.

From Farmers' Magazine.

The farmer gets too little for his produce, while the consumer of it has to pay too much. As quoted elsewhere in this issue, the wide price difference in these respective products suggests an urgent enquiry. The unthinking public throw the blame upon the middleman, that is the commission, wholesale and retail merchant. They forget the freight, cartage, delivery, insurance and other necessary additions to the cost, but after these are deducted, there is still an apparently unnecessary large profit to the middleman. Therefore, it is not unreasonable to blame the middleman.

With these large profits the middleman should be the richest class in the community, but as a matter of fact, careful investigation shows that the majority of them are not as well off as the average farmer. Investigations made by Farmer's Magazine led the editors to the conclusion that the trouble is too many middlemen. We find, for example, in one town ten merchants with one or two clerks supplying the needs that could be quite as readily filled by half that number. But the other half must live, therefore the average profit which the middleman must add to the cost of his goods to enable him to make a fair living must be based on providing a living for ten stores instead of five. Suppose the average expenses of each store, including wages, rent, heat and so on, were $2,500 a year and half the stores were closed, the other half could do business very easily at little additional cost. Allowing $2,500 for additional cost it is clear that this town has to support five additional stores at an extra and unnecessary cost of $10,000 a year. This $10,000 could be distributed and should be distributed to the farmers and on lower prices to the consumers. It would mean that five smaller merchants with their clerks would have to seek employment elsewhere. They would be available for positions as farmers or workers —which would probably mean that they would be better off and happier than they are to-day.

This is a subject that will bear careful and united consideration on the part of farmers, merchants and consumers. They should get together and gradually eliminate the unnecessary merchants, and they should discourage the establishment of unnecessary stores in their locality.

This would be a good thing for the merchants, too; the few left would be able to make a better living and give a more satisfactory service.

Farmer's Magazine does not, in drawing attention to this important subject, advocate the immediate driving out of established merchants, which of course would not be fair, but the adoption of a policy which will gradually reduce the number of wholesale and retail merchants and commission houses who buy the goods the farmer sells and sell the goods the farmer buys.

WHOSE SCALES ARE WRONG?

Investigations made by the government commission into alleged short-weighting of cheese at the port of Montreal will likely prove to be a sort of boomerang against the cheese producers. It will be shown that the cause of the discrepancies has been due to the disorder of the producers' own scales—the scales of the men who laid the complaints.

Here is a point analagous to the one The Grocer has often referred to in connection with scales operated by individuals in the private home. Consumers are urged by women's economic societies, daily papers and other high-cost-of-living alarmists to buy scales and test the weights of goods sold them by grocers. These scales are of course tested by Inland Revenue officers before leaving bond and at first are correct. But are they ever tested afterwards? When they have been left in the back shed, or in a damp cellar for five or six months, could they be expected to be correct? Yet such are the scales brought in occasionally to "test" the honesty of the family grocer.

If the dealer always knew of these tests he could no doubt prove his honesty but the average individual does not give him the opportunity. The grocer is changed, and all because the family scale is out of order by never being tested. At the same time the dealer has to pay the government his dollar or two every once in a while whether his scale is correct or not. If this is not discrimination and class legislation, what then is it?

One would have thought that the cheese producers would be sure of the accuracy of their scales before making such serious charges against fellow-men.

KEEP TAB ON YEAR'S PROGRESS.

The merchant must keep close and constant watch on his progress. It is the only way to be sure of success.

When an engineer is running a train from Montreal to Winnipeg, he doesn't wait until he gets to his destination to see if he is on time. He knows that if he hopes to reach Winnipeg on time he must make a certain progress all along the line, so he watches the time at every station.

The merchant must do the same thing. He commences each year bent on achieving a certain volume of sales during the ensuing twelve months. He must not wait until the end of the year to ascertain his progress towards this end. He must figure out just how sales should stand at certain periods of the year. He must figure out what his sales should be for each week, for each month and each quarter and strive to attain or exceed that amount. If at any set period he finds himself behind his schedule, he must put forth greater efforts during the next period to gain up on what has been lost.

But unlike the engineer, even if he is ahead of his schedule he should work for greater things. This year especially the merchant should show a larger increase than usual because the country is in general very prosperous.

We are now entering on the last quarter of the year. Entering upon the last lap of the year's race, the merchant should know where he stands. If behind the schedule, all departments of the selling force should be livened up to attain the desired aim. If ahead of the schedule, strive for a record year.

CROP CONDITIONS IN NORTHERN ALBERTA.

Harvesting operations in Northern Alberta, according to The Grocer's correspondent at Calgary, were progressing rather slowly last week on account of the unfavorable weather conditions but with finer weather since the work is going on rapidly. In the district around Red Deer and south towards Calgary, much has yet to be done. The crops all along the line are almost without exception good, except some of the late grain which was no doubt more or less damaged by the heavy frost.

However, through that section of Alberta, farmers are not so much alarmed over weather and other conditions, as they do not depend altogether upon grain raising. Of late years they have gone largely into mixed farming. This is a great improvement and much more profitable both to themselves and the country generally. The climate of Northern and Central Alberta is too uncertain for the farmer to depend entirely upon grain raising, and it is a hopeful and encouraging sign that so many of them have recognized the fact and adapted themselves to circumstances.

In Southern Alberta where the crop is earlier there is a large amount of grain and the bulk of it is harvested and threshing in progress where the weather conditions will permit. Owing to the continued wet weather not much of the threshing has yet been done and as a consequence but little grain is being forwarded. At nearly all the main stations along the railways there are large numbers of freight cars standing idle waiting for the arrival of the grain.

It scarcely seems possible that with the most favorable conditions from now on one-third of the Alberta crop can be shipped before the close of navigation and a very large quantity of it will be left on the farmers' hands till Spring. The amount of grain so far going forward is less than a year ago, unfavorable weather being spread over a wider area than it was then, but there is not the quantity of rain falling and there has been little snow.

It seems that with the best possible efforts of the transportation companies the grain blockade will be pretty bad if not worse this year than last. There is one great consolation, however. There will be no large quantity of low-grade and frozen wheat as there was a year ago. The frost came much later and the general quality is better.

HOGS AND PORK PRODUCTS.

There is no denying the fact that hogs and hog products are on an extremely high level. Not only has it been a case of high prices, but at some centres, the porkers have been coming along in such small numbers that there is a shortage of certain lines of products.

Lard has been steady for some time, and of late greater strength has marked the market, as the approach of cooler weather means a bigger demand for this line. Another strengthening feature is that hogs have been running very light in weight, and accordingly the production of lard has been smaller.

The top figures attained by hogs at some centres last week have not been maintained. Prices were not far off the record figures reached in 1910. The slowness with which supplies have come forward, even under the high prices, would tend to indicate that there is not the supply in the country. However, feed has been scarce, and hogs are light, so no doubt farmers feel it more to their advantage to wait and fatten up their stock.

The question now is as to whether the usual fall decline in hog prices will take place. For the past three years it has been the rule for prices to slump some time during the fall. Last year prices went down to a figure about $3 per cwt. below present quotations.

Prices can hardly be expected to reach anything like last year's low figures, as the supply of hogs is not in the country. It is the same old story that has marked the hog business for years. If prices fall off one year, farmers neglect this line and then comes a period of high prices. Last year's low prices discouraged farmers and they have not been giving the necessary attention to hogs.

MODERN DOGS IN THE MANGER.

In the past few days several cases have come up wherein clerks and salesmen have been keeping valuable information in their heads. They would put nothing on paper where it might be used by others. If questioned perhaps all would answer in the words of one, "Why should I pass on my knowledge? If I do another man may get my place."

Cowardice, unreasoning cowardice. The kind that causes men to fret and worry; the kind that makes men old.

Why should not a salesman keep a list of the prices he is to quote on certain goods? Why should he not jot down all valuable facts relating to these goods? To begin with he owes this to his employer. If a salesman gets sick, or is away on a holiday, the one slipping into his place temporarily will be greatly handicapped unless there are memoranda giving the required information.

And what harm can such memoranda do the regular salesman? "It will enable the one under me to take my place," some will say. Of course it will, and the wise man is glad of it. How can he be fitted to take the position above unless he gets such assistance from above?

When men think less of keeping the man below them down, and think more of pulling themselves higher up, they will do better for their employer and themselves. Having a man to step into one's shoes is an advantage. Many a man has been denied a promotion because there was no one fitted to take his necessary place.

A dog in the manger is a dog doomed. There is no place for him but the manger.

A Woman Clerk and a Lost Opportunity

The Inevitable Result When Indifference Develops — Some Pointers for Clerks—Tieing Parcels Properly and the Saving it Incurs—A Jobber's Circular on Candy Prices —Computes Profits Improperly and Doesn't Get the Order.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I have just had an experience with a woman clerk which is interesting. She came at a time when we needed efficient help; stepped right into the place and filled it well. She was of good appearance, which does not mean "pretty," but businesslike, prompt, intelligent. She knew goods and could talk them well. She had a splendid telephone voice and that fortunate faculty of smoothing out troubles by phone which is always so valuable. She could take the most irate customer, by phone, and very shortly have things adjusted, simply by manifesting solicitude that the customer have satisfaction. Very soon we were depending on her for the correct performance of any particular kind of work—I mean work that called for some skill and judgment. We advanced her steadily until she was getting $10 per week on a 55-hour schedule—which is supposed to be good for any woman.

A Gradual Transformation.

Then suddenly she fell down. With more pay and perhaps some special consideration which we were glad to extend to her she began to be less reliable in numerous ways. She was not so prompt in the morning and became moody. To-day she was bright; to-morrow indifferent. It all came upon us gradually—I could not believe it at first. Several things, however, soon shook my confidence in her. For instance:

She had charge of the candies and had filled the candy case for months. One day a new girl was attempting to serve a customer and I asked Mary how many of a certain chocolate would go for a cent. "Why, they are four for a cent, aren't they?" she replied. As they were large chocolates and sold for 30c a pound, I knew that was not right; so I weighed ½ a pound and counted them, to find that there were 19 in the ½ pound. That meant 1c. each. I then talked generally to all the clerks on the subject, trying to show that there was only one way to arrive at a price and that was to test the goods and determine value beforehand; and that is was certainly not good business to sell a bigger ratio for the penny that would go for the pound, while in this instance we had actually been giving away goods at a rate that would return us not only no margin but would show us a 50 per cent. loss.

It puzzled me that such a girl should know so little, and care so little about merchandise—she in whom we were placing such confidence.

Fell Behind in the Schedule.

In making out my schedule of daily duties, I assigned three morning duties to Mary. Fifteen minutes was allowed for her to make out the fruit and vegetable prices for the day; then 25 minutes for her to go over the cracker department, a duty I felt would be well performed by her and which it was important should be well and regularly done; then 30 minutes for the calling of the customers for their daily orders.

But her delay in arriving threw the schedule behind; then she made no effort to catch up, so the cracker duty was not done at all and she was so slow and apparently indifferent in making up the price lists that she had to be relieved of that work in order that we might make the necessary headway in the morning.

End Came Suddenly.

As I was thus brought to scrutinize her work more critically, I noticed that she was hard to work with when she "did not feel just right" and that she hindered in this way instead of helping. When that came home to me good and hard, there was little left to do except the usual thing; but I wanted to take time at the first opportunity to have a talk with her to see whether we might not again reach an understanding and stay together. But one busy day she stood in the way to such an extent that she was called to time quite brusquely —and then she gave notice that she was going to quit. That is something that I do not believe should have to be said more than once by any employe, so the end came quickly.

I make no comment other than to say to any employe who may read this, that no man or woman on earth is indispensable to any business; that advancement does not indicate that you can "let up" on your efforts nor allow your interest to lag; that work is a continual climb and there is no stopping place. The "appreciation" of your efforts on the part of the employer which is manifested in the substantial manner of advanced salary is something that must be met on your part not by relaxation, but by redoubled effort; for there is no point where you can stop advancing without retrogression. In other words, "it's up to you." With everything in her favor this girl failed. That is the FACT. Now work out the explanation yourself and see that nothing exactly like it happens to you.

Efficiency in Parcelling Goods.

The making of good packages is rapidly becoming a lost art. We must strive to revive it for the sake of all concerned. One must use the right size of bag or paper; of the right strength for the duty it is to perform; and it must be securely tied in a workmanlike manner. This work must be standardised, so that when the right way is found it can be done that way EVERY TIME —then the work goes efficiently and and rapidly forward.

We complain that customers do not want to carry things; but it is not long since a lady took up a strong, neat, handy package I made for her and remarked: "Customers would carry more things with them if grocers would put up such packages as that, Mr. Johnson."

When the neat packages are made up, put them together into one strong bundle, or drop them together into a bag large enough to make it easy to carry the whole together. It is a paying investmest not only because any bag, no matter how costly, is cheaper than time taken to make a delivery, but because of the reputation you gain for neatness and being accommodating; the good-will investment will return cost with profit "a hundred fold."

Jobber Figures on Wrong Basis.

I have before me the offerings of a jobber who seeks to sell me candy assortments. The first is four pails, costing $13.50 and selling for $24. "Profit to retailer, on cost, 76 per cent." is what he says about it. Second lot costs $19.50 and sells for $36. On this the same kind of "figuring" gets us 84 per cent. The third costs $15.85 and sells for $27. Profit said to be 70 per cent. The fourth drops down so the profit is stated at 27 per cent. The last, on the same basis, shows us 33 per cent.

Now, not an intelligent reader of to-day will accept such computations—and what other kind of reader does this circular seek to influence? Analyzing the figures, I get 43¾ per cent. on the first, which is good. I get 45.83 per cent. plus on the second, which is better. I see 41.3 per cent. minus on the third, which is good. I get only 21.85 per cent. plus on the fourth, which will not do on candy; and I can only find 25 per cent. on the last, which is still not enough.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Will Not be Bamboozled.

But I do not like to have a jobber try to bamboozle me in this way. I feel that he does not properly esteem my ability to compute my margins, nor do I like to have him mislead me, or try to mislead me, into thinking that margins and profits are the same. In what way does this jobber win out with me when he stirs up such a response in my consciousness? I do not think he wins at all—and he does not get my candy orders, either.

I am sure and certain that the time is coming when sellers of merchandise at wholesale will approach the retailer in a more tactful manner. I am sure that very soon jobbers will appreciate more fully the desirableness of granting to the retailer a fairly well developed faculty for correct computation. I know that when they do so approach the retailer, they will realize better returns from the approach.

Determining Customer's Mental Attitude

Reading a Man's Mind from His External Appearance and Peculiarities—Certain Physical Defects That Have Corresponding Mental Infirmities—What the Erect and Stooping Figures Suggest.

To what extent is it possible for the salesman to size up the character of a customer from his appearance? Authorities declare that there are physical peculiarities in many people which serve as a reliable index to their mental outlook or temperament, and that the apt merchant who has made some study of these, can, with something like intuition adjust his own mental attitude so as to meet the customer most satisfactorily to all concerned. Discussing this question, a writer in an English journal has this to say:

"The question has been revived in my mind as to how far any physical abnormality can be shown to have a corresponding mental or moral deficiency, or peculiarity; or, to be more concise, whether there exists any connection between physical disproportion and mental inharmony.

"I remember a former employer of the writer's seriously informing him that persons with a squint invariably had a corresponding moral squint or obliqueness in their nature, and for that reason, with such persons, cash transactions only should be the rule.

Judged by External Appearances.

"Whether this is true or not, it is a recognized fact that most persons, consciously or unconsciously, associate certain physical defects with corresponding mental infirmities. Indeed, our literature teems with examples of this, and before the novelist delineates the mental peculiarities of his characters, he carefully describes their external appearance, color of hair and eyes, type of face, and so on, so that the reader may infer their disposition, or moral bias—or immoral, as the case may be—and thus in a degree anticipate what follows.

"That mental and moral states affect bodily conditions cannot be gainsaid; therefore it is by no means so ludicrous as may appear at first, for the merchant to be able to estimate the character of many of his customers by their physical peculiarities, and then deal with them accordingly.

"For, after all, most physical abnormalities are primarily and solely mental, and really only expressions of varying individual characteristics.

Some Common Types.

"One of the most common types of disproportion any salesman has to deal with is the customer with a decided rotundity of outline, supposed to be becoming to city aldermen, and known technically as corpulency. With such a person one usually associates a love of ease and enjoyment, a fondness for things gastronomical—pleasure loving—and of the good things of life generally. While his antithesis, the spare, lean man of sharp outline, and many angularities, may be regarded as overanxious, highly-strung of a worrying disposition or temperament, and liable to extremes of depression or elation.

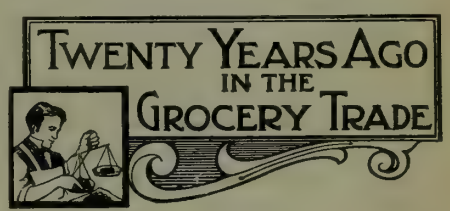
Who ever knew the erect figure to be anything but dignified, self-confident, proud, and oftimes vain and haughty in bearing; excepting, of course, the military type, which is really artificial and acquired, and the result of training and repression? And the ne'er-do-well is represented in the round-shouldered stooping, head-forward, narrow-chested type. For the humble, diffident, shy man, the man lacking in confidence, and unwilling, or unable to assert himself, always leans forward in a self-depreciatory manner, as though wishful to escape observations, as he really is. Hence the mental characteristics of the head-forward figure are the reverse of the erect type, in agreement with the physical formation.

Significance of Necks.

"The long-necked person is generally considered to be of an aspiring and devotional turn of mind; while the short-necked square-shouldered individual may be judged to be pertinacious and pugnacious, with a love of sport and physical exercise.

"The lop-sided physique would be sufficient ground for inferring an odd, eccentric, unbalanced character; but whether the physically hump-backed person possesses the unenviable predisposition for taking the "hump" on the least provocation or is given to taking offence on any and every occasion, my readers must decide for themselves."

Here then are some interesting observations which salesmen would do well to follow up. Undoubtedly there is a great deal in them and if closely studied would prove valuable.



Following items are from The Canadian Grocer's file of Oct. 7, 1892:

"J. E. Beaton, Oshawa, Ont., has done quite a shipping trade in fruits this fall, all of which has been remunerative, not only by a profit on shipments but has increased his trade with the grower and no doubt turned some accounts into cash."

Editor's Note.—Mr. Beaton is still in business in Oshawa. Last week an article appeared in The Grocer in reference to some of his selling methods.

The Oct. 7, 1892 issue of The Grocer was the annual fall number of that year. Next week the 1912 fall number will appear. In 1892 this number contained 80 pages. Watch for the advance next week.

Kay & Kay, general merchants, Otterville, Ont., have sold out.

E. Mailloux, general merchant, Ruscom Station, Ont., has sold out.

Wm. Holland, grocer, Victoria St., Toronto, has decided to sell out.

Hammer & Donnelly, grocers, Toronto, have dissolved, F. Hammer continuing.

C. S. Wright, general merchant, Bigwood, has been succeeded by T. McDonald.

The Farmers' & Consumers' Co-operative Co. of New Ontario, Ltd., North Bay, has assigned.

H. Wainwright has opened a grocery, provision, flour, feed and fruit store at 1333 Dundas Street, West Toronto.

Jno. Snellgrove has opened a grocery store in Southampton, Ont. He advertises that his prices are strictly cash.

Meakins & Sons, Limited, broom and woodenware manufacturers, Hamilton, Ont., have been incorporated at $100,000.

Alex. Hardy, Cannington, Ont., is having the store formerly occupied by Ross & Matthews renovated and has opened a general store business in it.

A. B. Bourne, general merchant, Grimsby, Ont., has recently moved into a new store. He is fitting it up in good shape and anticipates better business during coming Fall and Winter.

The grocery drivers of London, Ont., are circulating a petition asking the retail grocers to declare every Wednesday a half-holiday, except those in December and those in weeks in which there is a holiday.

Joseph Pugh, of Wingham, Ont., and formerly of Bluevale, has bought the grocery fixtures from Geo. Nahrgang, Palmerston, who has gone to Vancouver. Mr. Pugh has also rented the property and will establish a grocery again in the same stand.

THE PRESIDENT OF A RETAILERS' ASSOCIATION.

The portrait shown below is that of J. A. Kelly, Lambeth, Ont. (near London), who was elected president of the newly organized Retail Merchants Association at Delaware. The new association comprises a large number of the merchants of West Middlesex. Mr. Kelly and his father before him have been in business in Lambeth for the past sixty years as general merchants. He is enthusiastic over the success of the new organization as well as that of the Ontario Retail Grocers Association. His present plans call for a meeting of the association at Mt. Brydges during the second week in October and he has already invited a delegation from London R. G. A. as well as from East Middlesex to help along the work. Mr. Kelly is a Mason, well-known in his district, and, having occupied the Chair several times is well fitted for his work as president of the new association.

J. S. Fry & Sons, Ltd., cocoa and chocolate manufacturers, have moved their Toronto offices from 32 Colborne St. to 105 Front St. East, corner of Front and Jarvis Streets. The new building gives them much more room.

The Sarnia, Ont., grocers held their annual picnic at Lake Huron Park, and, as is customary, a large crowd was in attendance. The weather was threatening during the morning hours, but cleared up in the afternoon, and the citizens turned out in force. The program was one of the best of recent years, and was thoroughly enjoyed.

Two employees of a Toronto foodstuff firm, one the shipper and the other a driver, have been committed to jail for 90 days for theft. They conspired together to supply certain restaurants with butter and cheese at about half price, each of them making about $20 a week on the deal. It may be that other arrests will follow against alleged receivers of stolen goods.

A despatch from Gananoque, Ont., states that the village of Elgin was startled by a terrific explosion which occurred in the Ripley grocery store and was caused by escaping acetylene gas from the generator coming in contact with the lights in the store when the cellar door was opened. The damage to the stock was comparatively light, the greatest damage being the loss of the two large front windows, which were blown out completely. No fire followed the explosion, and the loss is covered by insurance. The occupants of the building escaped injury.

Certain Ottawa merchants are objecting strenuously to freight delays and have given the secretary of the Board of Trade particulars to enable him to prepare specific cases for presentation to the railway commission, with the object of compelling the railroads operating there to give a more expeditious and convenient service to merchants in delivering and receiving of freight. One merchant says that between September 9th and 13th he sent 28 shipments of freight to one station. On the 19th inst. not one of the shipments had left the station and as far as he can learn, he says, the whole of the goods are still in the local freight sheds.

William J. Bonham, a grocer on St. Clair Avenue, West Toronto, was acquitted by Judge Morgan in the County Criminal Court on a charge of receiving a large quantity of stolen eggs. His Honor found that there was a reasonable presumption to come to the conclusion that Bonham did not know the eggs had been stolen. Hugh Dewar, foreman in the egg department of Gunns, Limited, was convicted of the theft of the eggs and sentenced to three months. His thefts covered a period of eighteen months. He sold the eggs to Bonham at about 4 cents below the market price. During a period of two weeks in August Dewar's sales to Bonham amounted to about 900 dozen.

The Toronto branch of the Retail Merchants Association have decided to organize a movement having for its object a reduction in the taxes and the business assessment. This was the outcome of a discussion at a meeting of that body of the large increase in the Ward Three assessment this year, an increase described by some members as unwarranted. It was decided, on motion of W. Dineen and A. E. Renfrew, to appoint a committee to circulate a petition among the Yonge Street merchants between King and Davenport Road asking for a reduction of taxes. This committee was also authorized to ask the Board of Control to obtain a reduction in the business tax on retailers from 25 to 10 per cent. This, it was pointed out, was assessed at a much higher rate than wholesale or manufacturers' property. Some of the merchants recited how the increase had affected them. Mr. Renfrew stated that the corner of Yonge and Adelaide streets was assessed at $160,000, as against $41,000 last year, on a frontage of 50 feet 6 inches. Merchants in other sections told of increases of from 30 to 40 per cent. "The jump is out of all proportion in comparison with the earning powers of the properties," said E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association. The retailers, according to Mr. F. C. Higgins, grocer on Yonge Street, were bearing more than their share. The merchants decided that it was time to call a halt as, if a protest were not made, the city would continue increasing the assessment.

Western Canada.

R. H. Weaver, grocer, Vancouver, has sold to D. H. Sexton.

Robt. Stark, grocer, Winnipeg, has sold to F. L. Davis.

The Okanagan Valley, B.C., will produce the largest crop of fruit, principally apples, in its history, this year. There has also been an abundant yield of pears and peaches.

Speer, Gregg & Pim, general merchants, Alsack, Sask., suffered loss by fire.

M. A. Black, general merchant, Biggar, Sask., is succeeded by D. O. Crossley.

Letters patent have been issued incorporating the Alberta Pacific Grain Company, Limited, with a capital stock of three million dollars. The head office is to be in Calgary, Alta.

David Spence, Ltd., department store, Vancouver, B.C., did the catering for the banquet recently held in that city in honor of the visit of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. About 800 guests were present.

Tobacco growing at Kelowna, B.C., is becoming an important industry. The British North America Tobacco Co., Ltd., an English corporation, had 100 acres devoted to it this season. The crop was an excellent one, the leaf being of good quality. Half of it has already been harvested. The cultivation of the leaf will be engaged in next year on a larger scale than ever.

A hardware dealer in Victoria, B.C., was accused recently of refusing to supply names of his employees to a tax collector. He pleaded lack of courtesy on the part of the collector and also that he wasn't sure of his credentials. The collector had a different story to tell and the magistrate adjourned the case until the following day so that the matter could be fixed up, at the same time remarking that the accused was liable to a fine of $100.

A vegetable market was operated in Winnipeg last week at the Industrial Bureau under the management of a committee of women in an endeavor to reduce the prices charged at the general market and by retailers throughout the city. It is said to have had the effect of bringing down the prices on vegetables from one-third to one-half in many cases. The producers are bringing the goods directly to the market and selling directly to the consumers. It is claimed by the women that an understanding exists at the general market for keeping prices at high mark, but it is a pretty safe bet that these women are misguided in their laudable endeavor and that their new market will not last very long.

FALL NUMBER NEXT WEEK.

Every grocer is anxious to increase his business. Progressive dealers know that if they sat down and waited for demand they would sell but little. They know that with modern methods and clerks who can sell and not simply hand out goods asked for, they build up business.

In the Fall Campaign Number of The Grocer, to be issued next week, there will be many articles apart from those already mentioned which will, by concrete examples, prove the power of the retailer to increase his sales.

A certain Ontario dealer for instance tells how one window display of cereals sold for him 20 cases in three weeks time.

From Winnipeg comes a story showing how a grocer there decides on new and profitable lines of goods to handle. He consults his better-half—probably more of us would be better off if we did the same more frequently—and together they test the quality and figure out the price.

Still another dealer illustrates the influence a grocer may have over the purchasing of a customer who has confidence in him. "The Power of Personal Contact in Selling" will be the title.

No small part of the success of some of our best Canadian grocers has been due to economy and close attention to delivery, debt collecting and daily sale records. This side of retailing will be given much attention and our readers will find it a profitable department. The delivery section will include an article from a Montreal grocer on how he has built up a good "far-from-home" trade by systematic and efficient delivery.

The Fall Campaign Number, we believe, will be one you will keep on file for a long time. You have every assurance that it will be brim full of bright ideas gathered from all parts of Canada from retail grocers themselves.

Canned Peaches 40c. Below Last Year

Opening Prices on Late Fruits and Most Vegetables Are Out — Lawtonberries Higher—Plum Prices Same as Year Ago but Canned Apples Are Lower—Vegetables Remain About Same—A Table of Comparisons.

The opening prices on the majority of late canned fruits and vegetables which have been so anxiously awaited by the trade are out, or at least The Grocer has been able to secure the figures at which they will open, in advance of the general announcement. They include all the late fruits and vegetables with the exception of tomatoes, corn and pumpkin on which the canners have not deemed it possible to name a price yet. Greater interest was centred around these prices by reason of the short pack and high prices on the greater number of the early lines.

Canned Peaches to be Lower.

The outstanding feature in prices on late fruits is the lower prices on peaches of which there has been a big crop. Other fruits are the same as last year or lower with the exception of lawtonberries which are higher. The higher price on lawtonberries was expected, for the same reason as figures this year are higher on strawberries and raspberries. The same conditions affected all three. The price on lawtonberries last year was given out in July but this year was delayed until the present time. In heavy syrup 2's are $2.02½ as against $1.80 last year while preserved are $2.22½ as against $2.00 last year.

Peaches is the line that has shown the big reduction. Both white and yellow in 2's are 40 cents per dozen below last year while prices on 3's show a 65-cent concession, being quoted at $2.25 as against last year's price of $2.90. Pie peaches both peeled and unpeeled are 22½ cents lower. These more favorable figures on this line were generally expected as there was an enormous crop of this fruit this year as could be gleaned from the floods of fresh fruit on all the markets. Consequently the pack was large, prices lower and a full delivery is assured.

Plum Prices Maintained.

Although plums were not as large a crop, especially in some varieties, as other years, prices on all lines have been maintained at last year's figures. A reduction of 2½ cents per dozen has been made in the price of pears which turned out fairly well, while grapes have been set at the same level as a year ago.

The expected has also happened in the case of apples on which prices are lower this year, 3's being worth $1.00 as against $1.10 last year, while gallons are $2.55 as compared with opening price of $3.05 last Fall. Blueberries or huckleberries are high again although no higher than canners' opening prices of last year, 2's selling at $1.50 and gallons at $5.30. These prices certainly look high as compared with a few years ago but in recent years the pack has not measured up to the demand and thus the higher figures. A good portion of the Canadian pack is put up in Maritime Provinces and frost in early Spring affected conditions adversely there.

Not Much Change in Vegetables.

In price of late vegetables so far given out there is not much change from a year ago. Cabbage, cauliflower and parsnips show no alteration while beets are 2½ cents lower. The most important lines which are yet to come and around which a great deal of interest centers are tomatoes and corn. Prices on these will be announced as soon as the pack is in shape to make it possible. There are at present some new pack tomatoes on the market but in the absence of any opening prices they are quoted at current figures for old stock. Prospects for corn and tomatoes look good if the right kind of weather is only experienced for the next couple of weeks. Suitable weather will mean a large pack.

Prices have yet to be named on canned pumpkin.

Montreal, Oct. 3. — Wholesalers are now busy with fall orders and a good business in all lines is reported as passing.

SUGAR.—Wholesalers report a good volume of business passing still, it being generally believed that fall preserving has not all been finished yet.

Various reports are to hand about the situation in Cuba as far as the weather is concerned, some claiming that the heavy rains have proven detrimental, others stating that the downfall has just been sufficient to give enough moisture to soil to improve growing conditions. Undoubtedly the final yield will depend to no mean extent on the behavior of the elements during this month.

The European market on the other hand, has presented a downward tendency as the weather has been highly favorable for the growing crop, and prices have declined reaching the lowest point so far this season.

Bearing in mind this fact, and looking at Cuban situation from all standpoints it seems as if steadiness will prevail until the new crop movement commences.

DRIED FRUITS. — The market has become a little more active and a firmer feeling has set in. Last week the market for California raisins was none too promising and the sudden change is hard to account for.

The stock of currants arriving from Greece is in first-class condition and the fruit is said to be superior to last year's crop. The latest cables from centres of production reflect a general firmness. There has been considerable short shipping of figs and dates but extra supplies are now on the way which should relieve the situation some.

The local market is livening up and good business is anticipated.

COFFEE.— Trading continues fairly active in this market, but, of course, there is no change in price to note. The receipts for present crop are said to be well behind last year, and considerable damage has already been done to the next crop by frost, but as one might expect, the bearish element contradict this statement. However, be the reports what they may, as far as the truth is concerned, there will be high prices for some time to come yet.

RICE.—There is not so much business doing just now, dealers working along on a hand to mouth basis. Some few weeks ago there was a replenishing movement started, but it is evident that the trade as a whole have once more decided to play a waiting game. But, whether they will derive any actual benefit, is hard to say, as the situation in the Far East is not one bit easier.

NUTS.—Tarragona almonds must be called scarce for at this time of the year the supplies are generally heavier, and the firmness now prevailing in market has not been so marked during any corresponding period of previous years.

Prices for Sicily filberts are slightly higher in the primary market and an advance is expected here soon, if nothing unforeseen arises.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Brooms.—Easier.

Canned Goods.—New prices on several lines.

Cloves—Firm.

Nuts.—General firmness.

Salmon.—Alaska Reds being sold here.

Toronto, Oct. 3.—There is a general good business reported by local jobbers this week. Pickling and preserving is still in progress, while housecleaning is also bringing a demand for lines of goods used in this work. There continues a good demand for sugar but it is being pretty well cared for. The volume of preserving fruits coming to market is still quite large and there will probably be a week or more of good brisk trade in these lines yet. While sugar is steady at moment, there appears to be easiness ahead.

Opening prices have geen given out this week on majority of late fruits and vegetables. In most cases they are fairly favorable. Some Alaska red salmon has been purchased by local jobbers. It will retail at 25 cents per 1-lb. tin.

There is an easier feeling in brooms on account of approaching new crop of broom corn and lower prices are being quoted by some firms.

SUGAR.— There is really not much change in the sugar situation since a week ago. The big demand on account of preserving season naturally has a steadying tendency on immediate situation. However, there is an undertone of easiness by reason of the lower figures on forward shipments of beets, and there is a feeling that with a let up in demand, lower prices are probable. As showing the general tendency to easiness, new crop Cuban cane for January is quoted ½ cent below present prices and even then is not finding purchasers.

Europe promises a big crop of beets this year. One estimate is for an increase of 2,179,000 tons over last year and 410,000 tons over previous large crop of 1910-11.

DRIED FRUITS. — The supplies of new Valencia raisins which have arrived on the local market have been taken up well, quotations ranging around 9 cents per pound. There is still a considerable quantity of old stock held, selling at 8 to 8½ cents. New currants should arrive at any time now. The quality is said to be quite good and in advance of last year. The company in Greece controlling the output of currants has agreed on 35 per cent. as the amount of retention on the first 100,000 tons. Reports indicate the yield as about 160,000 tons and with 35,000 tons retention, leaves 125,000 tons for the world's markets which is much the same as last year. There is a firmer feeling in primary market after recent break.

"We are getting our bumps this year," said a broker who handles only Mediterranean dried fruits, "on account of the big crops in California and accordingly the low prices. Even at present low figures, buyers do not seem to be inclined to take hold."

There is not much change in the general situation on the coast. Prunes and raisins are steady. The effect of the rains of a couple of weeks ago is more noticeable in inferior quality in some of the dried fruits than in any other way. Some peaches and some prunes in the northern districts that were well wet down show the effects in quality. This, however, so far as we have learned, is not very widespread.

Evaporated apples still point to low prices for this year.

TEA.—There is not much change in general tea situation. Local market is quite well maintained and this is also true elsewhere in regard to high quality tea. There has been a good deal of coarse and low-grade tea produced this year. Local trade is fair.

COFFEE.—As far as local situation is concerned there is no particular change to note. Market has been steady for a long time now and same tone is maintained.

The New York option market swings backward and forward like a pendulum as favorable or unfavorable news comes forward from Brazil. The frost news is at least becoming no better and it appears that some fairly serious damage has been done.

The present crop rather than the prospective is having no little influence just now. "The one is real fact," says one coffee report, "the other more or less conjecture. The coffee already grown can make the pot boil, the other bubbles only in fancy. This crop can be bought and sold as it is in tangible form: the next is not yet in its swaddling clothes."

SPICES.—One of the features in spices is firmness in cloves. This is the result of higher cables from London and further bullish news from Zanzibar. Crop reports estimate the yield this year at less than 50,000 bales and if deliveries prove this correct, firmness can be expected to continue. Peppers show no special change. As pointed out before celery seed will be lower but will not reach the low levels which it has held other years.

Trade is running along in even lines with no complaints from wholesalers.

RICE AND TAPIACO.—Dealers are operating on a hand-to-mouth basis but it does not seem likely that much will be gained by this policy. The immediate future at least looks steady, as indicated by reports from the Far East where crops with exception of Burma are generally short. One report estimates the Chinese crop as 60 per cent. below normal.

The Louisiana rice crop is a large one, while a large yield of rice is also reported in Arkansas. However, general high prices will have the tendency to firm prices in States also.

NUTS.—Market for nuts is in general strong. Almonds is one line showing this tendency and prices have advanced considerably above those named earlier in the season. Late advices from Spain confirm previous advices to the effect that the Tarragona crop will be small. The same applies to filberts. Primary markets are still advancing and though some buyers are disposed to hold off, market is firm for both spot and new crop.

Reports indicate that Brazil nuts are turning out shorter than expected.

BEANS.—There are no new features to beans. Spot prices still hold their strong front while new crop promises no better and it seems as if we are going to have high prices for the ensuing year. At least, the Canadian production is expected to be considerably below the average demand. Demand in Canada is yearly on the increase.

BROOMS.—The lower prices on broom corn by reason of the approaching new crop is having a depressing effect on the broom market. There is an easier feeling noticeable which will shortly probably resolve itself into lower prices. In fact one firm will this week reduce prices 25 to 50 cents per dozen. Others may probably follow.

Indications are that there is going to be plenty of corn and one estimate places the yield as 25 per cent. above last year. However, a great deal of it will be coarse and of poor quality. This is the result of so much wet weather.

"Wet weather has caused much of the corn to be coarse, speckled and red tipped," said a manufacturer who has just returned from a tour of inspection of the corn producing states. "Choice corn is going to be scarce and the only thing that has saved it is the second cutting, which is satisfactory except fine weather is needed."

He expressed the opinion that on really choice stock prices would not be much cheaper this year but prices on common brooms would be lower than those that have been ruling.

Prospects of coming crop has weakened ideas of holders of spot corn and some more favorable prices have been secured of late by manufacturers and thus the easier feeling in brooms.

Brooms are moving out well now, the housecleaning season being responsible for a larger demand.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—The feature of the week is the giving out of advance prices on all late fruits and vegetables with the exception of tomatoes, corn and pumpkin, figures on which will be announced as soon as the pack becomes advanced far enough.

The outstanding feature of the new opening prices is the lower price on peaches which, however, was expected in view of the large crop this year. Canned pears, apples and beets are other lines which are lower. Grapes, plums and blueberries show no change from last year but lawtonberries are 20 cents per dozen higher. The percentage of delivery in each line is not known but a local canned goods broker is authority for the statement that majority will show a full delivery.

Interest now centers round tomatoes and corn. Much depends on the weather. Tomato vines are well loaded and it is now a question of ripening. Bright weather with absence of frost will mean a good-sized pack. Corn was doubtful for a time but is now promising well on account of improvement in weather.

A car of new pack sockeye salmon has arrived. There are no new lower grades in. On account of high price of B. C. pack, some Alaska red salmon has been purchased by local dealers. This is a bright red salmon and will go to the consumer at 25c. per 1-lb. tall tin. B. C. sockeye will have to be sold at about 30 cents this year to make a profit.

Last four weeks of lobster fishing did not turn out well. One local broker says he will be able to fill early orders but he is taking on no more business.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Oct. 2.—Some uneasiness has undoubtedly been felt at the continued wet weather of past two weeks and consequent delay in threshing. But prospects have much improved in this respect during the last four days. Country merchants are, however, by no means alarmed and have been ordering goods to an extent that shows their confidence is in no wise shaken.

As regards prices there is nothing of note in this week's review. Steadiness prevails in all lines and there is no staple that is in particularly heavy demand with the exception of sugar. The volume of business done in this commodity since the preserving season proper commenced has been surprisingly large.

Collections as might be expected from the slow progress made in threshing are somewhat disappointing but with wheat now coming in at 500 cars per diem they should soon improve.

SUGAR.—Sugar prices are steady and market is reported as being in a more settled condition. Demand for this commodity is brisk and sales this season have been much in excess of those of last year.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Oct. 2.—Potatoes are now easy on the Vancouver and New Westminster markets. Lowland potatoes are going at $12 while those from the highlands are bringing from $12 to $17 per ton.

Eggs are at 45 to 50 cents per dozen and are none too plentiful at that.

There has been a good demand for chickens with only a limited number in the market to supply requirements. The price has as result advanced considerably, price now asked being 35 cents per pound. This is an advance of approximately five cents.

There is a goodly supply of New Zealand butter on the market at present and prices for this article are about the same as last week. The presence of New Zealand butter at this time of year acts as balance wheel in butter prices, when grass and other articles of food for cows in the British Columbia region is becoming eaten off or dried up, with a resultant falling off in butter production. A steady supply of good butter can be depended upon to reach this market from New Zealand throughout winter. This variety of butter is selling at 40 cents a pound. There is not much Ontario butter on market just now.

A car of Tokay grapes has been received and also the first shipment of this season's pack of California figs, as well as some fine Carabas melons, and canteloupes and sweet potatoes. Receipts of peaches are becoming light and this fruit is nearly over.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Oct. 2.—Local trade conditions still continue in prosperous vein, but for most part, markets are in a state of remarkable quietness. There have been few changes during past week but quotings still retain the firmness which has characterized the market for several weeks, or rather months. Business has been encouraging, and between the pickling and preserving which has been in progress, there has been quite a steady run on many lines, particularly sugar, spices and the commodities required for bottling purposes. A local dealer gave it this week as his opinion that the high prices which prevailed during last winter and present summer on packed fruits, such as apricots, peaches, prunes and apples, have induced housewives to exert greater energies in preserving, and that this has accounted for the particularly heavy run which has been noticeable in this regard, sales of preserving stock, both in berries, plums, pears, etc., being greatly in excess of other years. As a result of high quotings on last year's stock of evaporated apples, peaches, apricots, etc., many dealers have been left with considerable supplies on hand, and will consequently have to buy lighter than heretofore, or else dispose of their present stocks at a loss, or at least at a much lower price than they anticipated.

Changes in Flour Prices being Awaited

Trade Waiting for Change in Manitoba Flour in Keeping With New Crop Wheat —May Come at Any Time—Considerable Speculation as to Values on New Crop—United States Wheat Being Milled in Bond for Export by Canadian Mills.

The trade at the moment are wondering when the anticipated concession in Manitoba flour in keeping with the prices on new crop wheat will come and how much it will amount to. These are points of interest and speculation and the announcement of prices on new crop is being anxiously awaited.

An indication that the change is drawing nearer is seen in the reduction in cash wheat which has been brought down to a basis in keeping with option prices. New wheat is coming forward in larger quantities and a certain amount is now being milled by some mills. "A change in quotations may come at any time," said one man in touch with the situation. "There is a tendency to hold off to see what the other fellows are going to do."

What new crop flour will be worth is quite an interesting question. Present prices are 40 cents per barrel above those ruling a year ago. The world's yield is large, while Western Canada has an appreciable crop which is grading quite well. There has been some talk of prices being 50 cents per barrel below present values and sales for October shipment were reported last week at a 30-cent concession. "There is not going to be as big a reduction as some are looking for," said one man this week. "The high value and scarcity of Ontario wheat is going to throw a greater strain on Manitoba."

In fact farmers in Ontario have been holding their wheat at such a high figure that millers have been bringing in United States wheat and milling it in bond for export. It is estimated that about 300,000 bushels of United States wheat have been brought in already for this purpose.

Rolled oats are unchanged but last week's advance is fully maintained as spot oats are scarce and Western receipts cannot be said to have got really under way. They will before a great while take on larger proportions and a weakening in rolled oat market can then be expected. Consumptive demand under the cooler weather is on a brisker scale.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.— Considerable business has been transacted lately for export account, the millers being pleased with the tone of the demand and prices from European sources. These orders though are for November and December shipment, those for October having to be refused as supplies were not plentiful enough. New crop winter wheat flour has also been in fair demand for close shipment. The local or domestic trade in old wheat flour is growing active owing to a steady increasing demand from all parts of the Dominion, and those millers who have a good stock on hand have done a large business.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—With new wheat now arriving at points east of the lakes, the premium on spot wheat has been removed and prices lowered. No. 1 Northern Manitoba wheat is now quoted at 99 cents, lake ports. Some mills are now using a certain amount of the new wheat and this should shortly bring about the anticipated concessions in flour prices. Some millers are of the opinion that a change may not be far distant now. "I don't think prices are going to be as low as some are expecting," remarked one miller. Higher freight rate asked on wheat from Fort William was one of the things mentioned.

Ontario flour still keeps tight. Deliveries of winter wheat have been slow and this has caused millers to bring in American wheat and grind it in bond for export. In fact Ontario wheat is being held so high that it is practically now on a par with Manitoba.

Feed flour still ranges from $30 to $33 per ton.

CEREALS. — There is no particular change. Rolled oat prices are maintained at last week's advanced figures. Spot oats continue scarce and high thus accounting for steadiness. It will probably be a couple of weeks before there comes any tendency in other directions. Receipts so far are small and must become fairly large to bring cash prices down to level of operations.

Demand is showing an improvement with the cooler weather. One mill states they have done some future business on strength of recent advance but on understanding that they will protect buyers in case of decline.

Spanish Onions on Reasonable Level

Prices Lower Than Last Year—This Should Help Their Sale —New Crop Florida Oranges and Grapefruit Will be In Shortly—Crops of Both Lines Reported Large — Domestic Fruit Supplies Falling Off—Cranberries on Market.

Spanish onions this year are on a reasonable level and prices are ruling considerably below last year's figures. Summer stock was lower than usual and winter stock which is now available is also low. There are quite a few on the way from Europe at present. The lower price should induce more business in this line and now with the arrival of cool weather, dealers will find an increasing demand for them.

Oranges, especially for good stock maintain quite a steady position. At present time California late Valencias is the only variety obtainable, but Florida will be sending along some new crop goods in a couple of weeks. Grape fruit will also be arriving in two or three weeks. First shipments may probably command a premium but a large crop is anticipated this year in both these lines. Last year's crop of grapefruit was very short and prices were high during the whole season.

Lemon situation has shown no change. Prices are apparently well maintained at those centres when high levels have been attained. Little or no break is expected until arrival of new crop lemons from Sicily which will probably not be until after first of November. There is no brisk demand at present for this line. Cold weather is now needed. In the summer, it is the hot weather that causes lemons to move.

The late preserving season has now reached the pinnacle of both supply and demand and is fast moving to smaller proportions. Peaches after a record season's trade are beginning to dwindle and will pass fall off now. Grapes will now be the domestic fruit in prominence.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—The colder weather setting in has somewhat cut down demand and as a result the briskness of the business done has not been so marked. Still the basket fruit is still moving and it looks as if some tall orders for preserving requirements have been placed. The recent snap of frost is reported to have done considerable damage to some of the younger fruits still on the trees. But it is too early to compute the damage.

VEGETABLES.—The vegetable market generally is brisker at this season and wholesalers are somewhat at a loss to know what has cut down the demand for certain lines. A good trade continues in potatoes, and the market is fairly active. Cobblers are selling in car lots at 65c to 70c per bag, and in a jobbing way at 85c to 90c per bag.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—The height of the peach season has been reached and passed. Supplies are now on the downward trend. At the first of the week, shipments began to dwindle and are growing smaller. Major portion of one of the biggest peach seasons is now a matter of history. Plums are now in short supply and prices are now higher around 50 to 75 cents. Grapes are now coming more into the limelight, selling at 18 to 20 cents. Warmer weather would help their ripening. There is still a big portion of the season to come.

Oranges maintain their steady tone, ranging from $4.50 to $5. Florida oranges will be coming along in a couple of weeks. Grapefruit will also be another addition in a short time. Lemons show no change and probably will not for about a month.

Fall apples are arriving in barrels and selling at $2.50 to $3.00.

VEGETABLES. — Potato situation is much the same. Ontario stock is selling at 90 cents, ranging up as high as $1. Reports from provincial markets note abundant supplies with prices easing. Farmers report presence of rot in some parts but this exists only on low ground. The potato crop is generally large.

Cold weather has put a crimp in tomato supplies and prices are higher at 25 to 30 cents. Cucumbers are also higher at 25 to 30 cents while picklers range from 75 to $1. "Oh- anything," said one dealer re an inquiry for price of vegetable marrow.

Onions are on a reasonable scale and with cooler weather should begin to move.

A Large British Columbia Salmon Pack

In Canneries Near Vancouver It Is Stated to be Very Satisfactory—Different Situation with Puget Sound Packers—Pack There Said to be Small—Prospects Regarding Prices—Big Run Again Next Year.

Vancouver, Oct. 2 (Special).—According to reports gathered by The Canadian Grocer's representative in the canneries near Vancouver the salmon pack this year has been extremely satisfactory, being nearly double that of last year. Once every four years there is an exceedingly big pack and the Pacific Coast is due for the great haul next year. This being the case, the record to date is better than the most optimistic expected.

F. H. Cunningham, the Dominion Inspector of Fisheries, stated that the present season was satisfactory to both the net men and the canneries. Last year, he said, the total number of cases of sockeyes packed was 58,000 while with the present season not yet ended the pack up to date is easily double that of last year.

Poor Pack on the Puget Sound.

In contrast to the British Columbia pack, advices from Seattle show that the shortage of the Puget Sound salmon pack is turning out to be larger than expected. Reports show that the decrease from last year's Sound pack will probably exceed 1,250,000 cases. The pack will not total a quarter million cases. The output is the smallest in recent years with only an insignificant quantity consisting of pinks and chums. The situation is quite unprecedented. It is the result of more causes than one, among them being the competition of Canadian canners for the raw fish, and the generally disappointing run.

Forecast as to Prices.

The output will not be added to this Fall. It is doubtful if any of the Sound salmon canneries will be operated on Fall fish as the prices are too low to be an inducement.

Among salmon men here the feeling has been improved by the facts as to the extent of the shortage becoming known, and not a few believe pinks will advance and that Alaska red salmon will also go higher.

THE WEEKLY FISH COLUMN.

Facts and Fancies in Brief About This Profitable Line.

Cold weather now prevailing is fillet weather. Clear a part of your counter and fill it up. They are great sellers.

Remember that fish is not only canned sardines, etc., but smoked and fresh fish as well.

Did you ever hear of a boneless and skinless cod? It has got many kinds of beef "skinned to death."

Halibut catches the housewife's eye. The fine, plump, juicy steaks into which it can be cut suggest a good meal for the whole family.

The best adjective to use when explaining qualities of fish is, "palatable."

Keep the customer biting. Fish is good bait on a Friday.

You need not tie up your money for six months with this line. No necessity to put it in the cellar. The counter is the place for it. Its gone before closing time.

There is great competition between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts in the fish business. No chance of a merger, though!

The Ontario people know all about the lake fish. No necessity to go into detail.

The cod fisheries for 1911 amounted to $5,921,248. Just imagine! Yet some dealers say there's nothing doing.

The shell oyster business including malpecques and all Eastern Canadian oysters opened on Tuesday last, Oct. 1st. Shell out a few dollars and get supplies.

Scottie. — Did you know that my daughter had got a ring recently from a fish?

Shredded cod is getting a fair share of attention. It's a ten-cent article.

If the wet weather keeps on the fish will be hard to dry. Maybe they'll catch cold and there'll be no curing them!

The cod is like many a woman—takes plenty of time being "prepared" for the table.

Time to Open the Fall Fish Campaign

Weather is Now Favorable Supplies Quite Extensive—Advantages of Getting an Early Start—People Get the Habit of Buying Fish at Certain Stores—Opportunities in Oysters.

If he has not done so already, it is now time for the retailer to get his fall fish campaign under way. There are many reasons why he should make an immediate start. When people get the habit of going to a store for their fish, they continue to go there during the entire season. This is one advantage that should not be considered lightly. In addition there is the immediate profit to be derived and also the other trade that is secured through this department.

Supplies Coming Along Well.

Supplies have now reached a scale that will allow of the working up of an extensive trade. In addition to fresh varieties, smoked, prepared and pickled lines are now on the market as well as oysters. The dealer who puts in a stock of all these different lines and now with the advent of cooler weather institutes a real aggressive campaign should find results particularly pleasing. This trade is worth going after and going after now.

A View of the Oyster Market.

Recent weather is now more favorable to oyster demand. Indications now point to a good season. A New York report says anent oysters; "Stock is showing some improvement daily, and while it is trifling and visible only to the practical eye of the oyster grower, it is still sufficient to encourage the shippers in this section of the country. The whole trouble is that the present season has been a backward one. Oysters were about a month late in spawning, and consequently they are late in showing perceptible full growth. It is there, though, and will grow more distinct each day."

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.— Halibut is somewhat scarce but prices so far have not advanced, nor is it likely that an advance will take place as there is some frozen stock to fill the demand. The season for brook trout closed on 30th ult., so that there are none on the market now and supplies cannot be had till next May. Haddies, kippers and bloaters are moving freely.

Produce & Provisions

Should Be a Good Fall Make of Butter

Especially If We Have Open Autumn — Considerable Butter Held in East for Western Account—Big Purchases Reported of New Zealand by Vancouver—Egg Receipts Falling Off but Quality Improving—Hogs Hold High.

It looks as if there would be a good Fall make of butter in Canada, this year, especially if we have an open Fall. Even at the present time there is a fair production and later on with cheese factories closing in many sections, it should show an increase. The situation is different from last year when there was a shortage of feed for this year it is plentiful and there is no reason why farmers should dry their cows up or sell them.

In spite of fair receipts of butter, firmness still continues to characterize the markets at some points. However, there cannot be said to be any accumulations of any account. On Eastern markets where such a thing would be possible this has been prevented by Western demand. Up to present shipments to Northwest since May 1 have shown a large increase over those of the same period last year and this will no doubt continue to be the order of things until farmers in West go more extensively into mixed farming.

There is considerable butter now being held in Montreal on Western account. A certain amount is now being shipped out. One dealer this week made mention of the possibility that if New Zealand make becomes plentiful it is possible that butter held in Montreal for Winter delivery to the West might be thrown on the Eastern market. There is reported to be 5,600,000 lbs. of butter ordered from New Zealand by Vancouver.

The cooler weather of late is more conducive to better quality eggs which is something to be thankful for. Receipts, however, have a tendency to fall off injecting a steady tone into the general market. In fact if receipts continue to fall off at present rate, it will not be long until cold storage supplies will have to be called on to supply the demand in full.

Pork products hold steady. Not only are prices high but there is a scarcity of some commodities for hogs have been moving into market slowly, although the high prices are inducing a better movement. Present conditions would seem to indicate that the hogs are not in the country, although the opinion is expressed in some quarters that later on there will be an improvement in the situation. It is said that feed has been so high that hogs have not been fattened enough to market but as feed becomes more plentiful this will be overcome. At any rate hogs are now commanding a record figure.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—A general steadiness is the order of things in this market, all lines being in fair demand, cured and smoked meats being particularly in prominence. The demand for lard is just as heavy with prices unchanged. Fresh killed dressed hogs are also unchanged.

BUTTER.—The strong feeling reported last week has been well maintained and prices are moving steadily upwards at country points, but it is a well-known fact that large stocks are held on spot, so that the situation is somewhat hard to explain. TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Scarcity of live hogs still continues an outstanding feature, resulting not only in high prices being asked for the porkers but also in short supplies in certain lines of provisions. For instance, stocks of long clear are extremely low. Some dealers note a shortage of backs. Breakfast bacon is becoming scarce also and is higher at 18½ to 19 cents. Some dealers think it may go higher. Long clear is quoted at 15 to 15½, an exceedingly high figure.

Lard is unchanged but steady. Besides scarcity of hogs, they have been running light thus injecting a stronger tone into lard market.

After a further move upward, hogs are back to the level of a week ago, supplies having increased towards end of last week.

BUTTER.—Local quotations on butter are unchanged and there cannot be said to be much change in general situation.

There is a considerable quantity of butter coming along now and there should be a good Fall make, which should cause a tendency to easiness unless some new conditions arise.

"There is lots of feed in the country this year," said one dealer this week, "and farmers have no reason to dry up or sell their cows, so that with an open Fall there should be a good flow of milk."

EGGS.—One feature in eggs this week is the smaller number of complaints heard from wholesalers regarding shrinkage in eggs. This weather is more favorable to the maintenance of their quality and this should improve as the Fall advances. "It's a good thing," said one wholesaler anent improvement in quality of eggs; "it was heart-breaking for a time."

Prices are unchanged but receipts are showing a certain falling off.

CHEESE.—Firmer feeling noted in cheese last week has developed into a quarter-cent advance. Montreal, however, reports a slight easing in general situation due to lull in export enquiry.

There is practically none of last year's cheese available now.

POULTRY.—There has been quite a heavy delivery of chickens, and as demand is slow, the Jewish trade being over, there is a tendency to easiness. "Prices on all poultry," said one dealer, "depend on whatever packers are willing to pay for stock to place in storage."

"We are quoting chickens at 13 cents, delivered here."

Butter Market Continues Firm

Canadian Farmers Not Producing Enough—Lack of Surplus Cuts Off Exports—Western Canada a Big Buyer — Importations During Past Year From New Zealand and United States.

The high price of butter compared with former years continues to be a much discussed problem with the wholesale and retail trade.

Are there any chances of a decline? To answer such a question some close attention must be given to it, and even then there must be something of a doubt remaining.

In the report of J. A. Ruddick, chief dairy and cold storage commissioner for Canada for the year ending March 31st, 1912, some interesting material bearing on this subject is available.

In the course of his summary of the features of the year, he makes some interesting remarks on the subject of the home market.

Supply of Butter Lacking.

After noting that the unfavorable weather of 1911 caused a shortage of butter and cheese, Mr. Ruddick says:

"It became apparent early in the winter that the stock of stored butter in Canada, plus the winter production, would be available. As a result a large quantity of butter was imported, principally from New Zealand, the total quantity coming from that country to date (March 31) being 2,139,944 pounds.

"There has also been imported during the year 929,318 pounds from the United States."

In explanation of this, Mr. Ruddick says that the freight and duty (3c per pound) on freshly made butter from New Zealand, amounts to about the same as the cost of carrying Canadian butter from summer to March. Canada, he says, does not produce enough butter during winter for her current demands, and must either hold some summer butter in storage or import from the southern hemisphere.

"It is not unlikely," he says, "that the Pacific coast, at any rate, will continue for some years, as in the past, to secure too partial supplies from Australia."

Export Situation.

Dealing with the export market, he says: "Germany continues to grow in importance in the international trade in dairy produce, every year importing larger quantities of butter. It would appear that, on the whole, the world's consumption of dairy products is increasing rather faster than production and that reserve stocks are lighter at the present moment than they have been for many years.

"The outlook for dairying at present is exceedingly good, and there is every encouragement from the market point of view for Canadian farmers to increase their production."

Dealing with the home trade, Mr. Ruddick remarks that, while it is very large, it has not in the past attracted as much attention as its volume would warrant.

Demand From the West.

There is no doubt that the big demand from the West for Eastern butter has much to do with the firm prices. A few years ago we used to ship large quantities of butter to Great Britain, but now we need it all at home, and then can scarcely get sufficient to go round. The same applies to eggs, canned goods and other lines. The West is growing rapidly, and as there is little mixed farming done there, it is unlikely that we will see much lower prices on butter than those that prevailed during the past year. This year pasture has been particularly good, but in spite of this, prices have been more than maintained. While it may not be that butter prices will reach the same level as last winter, yet prices will undoubtedly be higher.

SCALES OUT OF ORDER.

The report of the commission appointed by the Minister of Agriculture to investigate the alleged shortage of cheese weights at the port of Montreal will show that the scales of all of these factories in Western Quebec and Eastern Ontario without a single exception were out of order and indicating inaccurate weights. This will explain the discrepancies alleged by the former in the weights at Montreal, and cuts in weights so frequently complained of by cheese makers and salesmen.

THINK IT OVER

You will realize that

LAWRASON'S SNOWFLAKE
Bath Powder and Watersoftner
(PERFUMED, ANTISEPTIC)

is a line that will add prestige to your store and a line that the public has long been looking for. It pays the dealer a good profit and is moderate priced to the consumer. Neatly packed in green and red lithographed tins, with nickeled screw tops.

LAWRASON'S SNOWFLAKE AMMONIA

equals in power any similar powder on the market selling for twice its price (5c). This statement is supported by a $500 guarantee.
This ammonia will save 90 per cent. soap, and is the best for all household and disinfecting purposes.
Fall Housecleaning will soon be in the air—this is the dealer's opportunity.

Women Wouldn't Make Mincemeat

It is doubtful if women would go to the trouble of making their own mincemeat if they realized that tastes just like the finest home-made. It is prepared in spic-and-span kitchens from the finest ingredients. The fruit is carefully selected and the spices are of the highest grade. The price at which you are enabled to sell Shirriff's Mincemeat and clear a good margin of profit is low enough to make it a very attractive proposition to housewives.

Shirriff's Mincemeat is put up in 6, 12, 28 and 65 lb. wooden pails. How many pails shall we send you?

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail book-keeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.

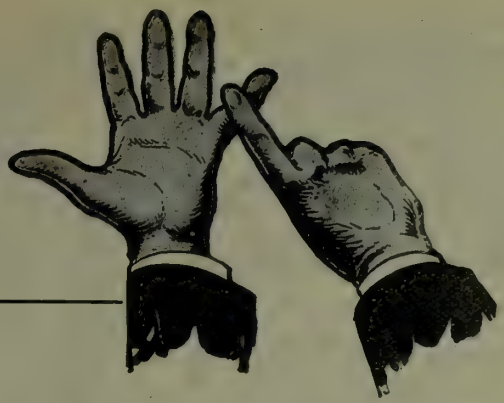
FACTORY AT HAMILTON



IMPORTANT FACTS

Every one a strong point why up-to-date dealers should handle MEAKINS' SANITARY WASHBOARDS:

1. They are made in one piece, all metal.
2. Do not rust or corrode.
3. Has no parts to get loose to scratch the hands.
4. It will many times outwear the old-fashioned wooden kinds.
5. Dirt has no place to lodge on the all-metal, therefore it is perfectly sanitary.

and the process of manufacturing it are protected by many patents in this country and Europe. It is a "patented specialty." It is in a class by itself. It has no competitor among cereal "breakfast foods." Millions of dollars spent in advertising enables you to sell it for 13 cents a package, and when you sell it for 15 cents you are making a better profit than you can make on the ten-cent cereal foods. We stand behind you with a one-price-to-all policy —a fair deal for a fair dealer.

Shredded Wheat is packed in neat, substantial, wooden cases. The thrifty grocer will sell the empty cases for 10 or 15c. each, thereby adding to his profits.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

Figs Selected Carefully

Goods Packed Attractively

Camel Brand Figs are now recognized as standard for the finest quality in Smyrna figs. This superiority is admitted by the expert buyers of Europe and America after careful investigation and convincing tests.

The figs packed under Camel Brand are the pick of the crop. They are thin-skinned, rich in honey and come so packed that their delicious flavor is long retained.

Camel Brand is the only one packed by Aram Hamparzum, whose modern factories and carefully supervised workers guarantee the absolute cleanliness of the figs.

You are sure to find Camel Figs a good buy. If your jobber cannot supply you get in touch with the nearest of the following firms who are our Canadian representatives:—

GETTING THE BUSINESS

From the grocers' viewpoint depends upon the demand there is for the goods he has in stock. That's why

Crown Brand Corn Syrup

Is sold by all good grocers. It brings business because the demand for it is national.

When Crown Brand is asked for, no other Corn Syrup will do.

Crown Brand is known throughout Canada as the ideal table syrup, and custom comes where Crown Brand is sold.

This is the season and now is the time to stock Crown Brand. It will please your customers to know that you have it —and prove a steady source of profit to you.

The Demand is There—You Simply Have To Supply It.

SEAL BRAND always moves. That's why SEAL BRAND stock is always fresh. Once let a family try—it is ever after demanded.

The few people who do not know—are attracted by our strong advertising campaigns.

There's more than mere coffee profit in SEAL BRAND. It's a customer maker. Have you ever considered what is the value of a regular customer to your store?
No business is built on single sales. The goods that repeat, that have established a position by constant recommendation, are the customer-making goods.

When a customer buys coffee she hopes it will be as good as SEAL BRAND. So why not sell SEAL BRAND to her yourself?

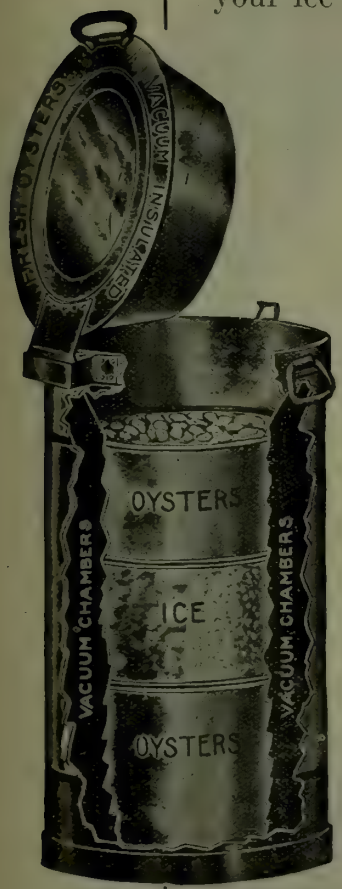
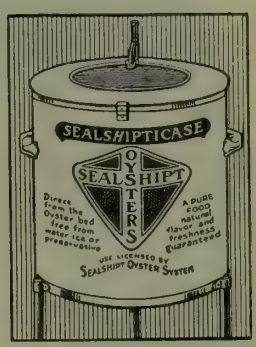
The Proper Care of Oysters

There are many false ideas with reference to this subject. There is one thing the dealer should firmly establish in his mind that he does not require expert knowledge, and that he should not fuss with his oysters. All they want is to be left alone with lots of ice on them. There is absolutely nothing else you can do for them; never wash or put fresh water in them, neither should you put your ice among the oysters; keep them in a compartment package, preferably a Display Case, where ice and water will be separated from your oysters. Sell them as you receive them and get a price that will afford your doing so. When you add water to cheapen your oysters, you are short-changing both the customer and yourself. If it was a case where the water simply took up the space on so many oysters, it would not be so bad, but as soon as you put fresh water among your oysters you immediately depreciate materially every oyster the fresh water comes in contact with, so that what you give your customer is not as good; you have really not treated him as fairly as though you simply took a few oysters out of his pint or quart package. The dealers who are making money out of the oyster business to-day are those who are getting the price, and put the stock out the best they know how.





The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

We are the only exclusive oyster house in Canada. We devote our time and energy to the one thing we know best. If you desire information pertaining to the proper handling of oysters, forward us your enquiries. We will reply to the customers of our competitors with the same courtesy that we extend to our own patrons. We are anxious to have oysters properly handled and in this way increase their consumption.

REDUCE SHIPPING-ROOM LABOR AND EXPENSES

by using

Double-faced T&N Corrugated CELLULAR BOARD BOXES

The old-time wooden box to withstand heavy jolts, must of necessity be made of fairly thick material, which, of course, is quite heavy.

The new double-faced Corrugated Cellularboard box is just as strong or stronger, will withstand more abuse in shipping, even when filled with heavy materials. It takes up very little store room, and when needed can be ready at a moment's notice without expert labor. No nailing or wiring—just cement and a brush.

Thousands of manufacturers and shippers are using these boxes to-day, made to their own special requirements, at a great saving in cost, shipping room labor and expense in freight bills.

We make all kinds—double-faced corrugated cellularboard boxes, and can give you information which will knock a big slice off your shipping expense account and place it on the profit side.

Use the cheapest, safest and easiest way to ship your goods.

Write to us for railway regulations regarding shipping in double-faced corrugated boxes

We are thoroughly posted on the railway regulations regarding the use of double-faced corrugated cellularboard boxes for shipping, and will be pleased to send such information to you upon request.

"PURITY"

MORE THAN A NAME

The Name of a Salt

What's in a name? You may say that there is absolutely nothing, and yet the original names of our ancestors had a direct bearing on some trait, some quality, or was in some way directly associated with the history of the person who bore it. In the case of salt, when we call our product "Purity," you and your customers at once associate it with a quality. We dare not mislead—"Purity" stands for our salt — and time has proven this fact beyond a shadow of a doubt. There is more in this name than you may think, and if you are wise you will trade on the name "Purity" and

The Quality of a Salt

A LASTING FOUNDATION

The man who started to build up trade on a foundation of quality is in business to-day, while the man who built on "any goods at all" has long since turned the key in the door. You can guess why.

Apple Products from 140,000 Trees

If all the apple trees on our exclusively owned and leased properties were placed in single line they would extend over 950 miles.
At Mimico, our model cider mill, vinegar factory and evaporating factory convert the apples by the most advanced processes under the personal direction of an expert.
Our exceptional facilities enable us to supply the trade with products of superior quality at prices independent of any trust or other financial combine.

APPLES: by the car load. Northern Spies, Ontario Greenings, Tolman Sweets, Baldwins, Russets, etc.

SUN GOLD CIDER: in casks. Sun Gold Cider is unfermented and free of alcohol. The best being made from Georgian Bay Northern Spies.

SUN GOLD VINEGAR: in kegs of convenient size. A pure cider vinegar that has no rival the world over.

EVAPORATED APPLES: Superior to the ordinary kind by reason of the flavor being preserved with the fruit.

We invite correspondence from Grocers regarding prices for the above named apple products

CHINESE STARCH

This is a line that has a well established place in most homes. Some homes, however, have not as yet had it introduced to them, and it is to the dealer's advantage to enlighten the housewife. Chinese Starch is the best, the "quality" is unsurpassable, and the quantity is the fullest—full 16 oz. to the package. This is the line of starch you should feature.

From a Hard Headed Business Standpoint

Coles Machines embody in quality of materials and workmanship, a construction, guaranteeing a long term of service.

They are very economical to operate, due to their great simplicity and design. For instance, to grind one pound of coffee requires no more power than to burn an ordinary electric light for three minutes, or, in other words, one-fiftieth of a cent.

Again, by comparison you will find that in every instance there is a considerable difference in favor of the COLES. Combine these facts then, Price, Endurance, Economy, and they will present three very good reasons why the COLES is the one logical machine for you.

SOMETHING for NOTHING

The above may sound strange, nevertheless, it's true. We intend giving every householder a large sample tin of ANTI-DUST, just what every householder likes, something for nothing. But, Mr. Grocer, just imagine what a demand this will create for you, without much effort on your part. All you require to do is to see you have it on hand to supply the demand, and remember, ANTI-DUST will do all it claims to do.

Absorbs the Dust.
Exterminates Moths and Insects.
Kills Germs.
And leaves a clean, healthy, pleasant and refreshing odor.

Light in weight.
Easy to brush.
Does not cling to the carpets or floors, and above all, shows a good profit.

Packed in Crates, 3 doz. 15 cent size.
2 doz. 35 cent size.
In Bulk, 100 lb. Drums.

THE "MEADOW-SWEET" NIP

Makes the Muscle
Makes the Man

The Package That Catches The Eye And Corrals The Nimble Coin

You are to-day, no doubt, handling different kinds of cheese, put up in as many different forms and of as many different qualities, some good and some no good. But have you ever tried "Meadow-sweet"—the cheese that has a flavor all its own—a peculiarly nippy and appetizing flavor that the cheese cranks like? "Meadow-sweet" is put up in a dainty package that adds attractiveness to your store and sells the cheese, adding dollars to your weekly sales.

"This is highly nutritive and palatable cheese."
MILTON HERSEY CO., Limited.
(Signed) Milton L. Hersey.

Analysis of Report.

We have very carefully analysed and examined the samples of Meadow-sweet Cheese and we find them to be pure and to contain large proportions of muscle and heat forming constituents, easy of digestion. The cheese is very nutritious and valuable as a food.

BIG BUSINESS AWAITS YOU!

"Last year, from April to August 1, the figures for immigrants were 182,799; this year for the same time the figures are 209,640, an increase of 15 per cent. Of this number, 143,742 entered Canada through the ocean ports this year, against 127,925 last year. From the United States during the same months last year, 54,814 came in and the record for this year shows an increase of 14 per cent., 65,907. The proportion of United States settlers is less this year than last on account of the increased British immigration."—Winnipeg Telegram.

98 per cent. of these immigrants came to Western Canada.

To supply these people 400 Grocery stores, besides general stores, have been opened in Western Canada this year.

Does it not sound reasonable that there is, therefore, a big field for your goods, if they have merit?

A Quality Trio

Quality is the keynote of the Shirriff Products illustrated above. They are pure. The ingredients are the finest procurable. They are skillfully made. They are fully deserving of the high reputation they enjoy.

Shirriff's

True Vanilla

Shirriff's is named True Vanilla, because it is the REAL extract of Mexican Vanilla beans. Your customers will be glad to use it if you tell them about it. It is far superior in delicacy and bouquet to chemical imitations. And it goes farther, too.

Scotch Marmalade

A pure food product of the highest class. Made from selected Seville oranges and high-grade granulated sugar. It has the real, delicious tang so delightful to the palate. A quick seller, and a big seller.

Jelly Powder

Shirriff's Jelly Powders are greatly favored by particular housewives, because of the deliciousness of the true fruit flavors of Lemon, Orange, Pineapple, Raspberry, Strawberry, Wild Cherry and others. Certainly a good line for the grocer to handle.

MAISON

The Ideal Cit

MR. MANUFACTURER OF FOODSTUFFS, you are seeking the most advantageous location for your factory. Then you will have regard for these facts about Maisonneuve, the most rapidly-growing industrial city in Canada. There are reasons.

ACCESSIBILITY. Maisonneuve is easily reached from all points, lying directly alongside Montreal, with its stores and supplies, affording convenient market for the purchase of raw material and marketing of finished products.

SHIPPING FACILITIES. The C.P.R., C.N.R. and the G.T., with a terminal electric railway linking them all together, furnish sidings for practically all sites, besides which there is the St. Lawrence River with its great docks for ocean liners and up-the-lake boats.

IMPORTANT CONCESSIONS. Ten years' exemption from taxes are freely offered the bona fide manufacturer.

SPLENDID SITES along the terminal railway and elsewhere are available at low prices.

ALL THE IMPROVEMENTS, gas, electricity, water, sewers, power, are readily obtainable.

LOW POWER RATES, the result of competing electric companies, give the manufacturer in Maisonneuve a very distinct advantage.

FREEDOM FROM LABOR TROUBLES is offered by Maisonneuve, which has the finest labor market in the Dominion of Canada, male and female, skilled and unskilled, for practically all the workmen own their own homes.

How a Got

WHEN we first came in contact with this grocer, whom we shall call Mr. Pennywise, he was not at all inclined to our point of view. He had been doing business for about twenty years along the old lines, and had been successful. He had been able to struggle along so far with the ordinary day-book and ledger and regularly every month he sent out his statements to his customers. He was pretty close-fisted, and when it came to spending money for fancy office equipment he "had to be shown."

"But, Mr. Pennywise," we said, "isn't it true that when you bill your customers only once a month you are actually hindering them from paying their bills for thirty days?"

After some mental effort to dodge the issue, he admitted this was true.

"And, Mr. Pennywise, isn't it also true that under this system many people run larger bills than they can really afford to pay, and isn't this, perhaps, the greatest cause of bad accounts?"

After making a few exceptions to defend his position, he also admitted that this was true. Then we followed along, pointing out one by one the different arguments in favor of the Barr Register System that everyday common sense must admit to be sound. We showed him how this would save an immense amount of time in bookkeeping; how it would prevent losses through mistakes in bookkeeping; how it would enable him to throw his daybook and ledger out of the window, because with the making out of his counter check his bookkeeping was done without a further penstroke.

We showed him how the customer was given a bill of his current purchase and at the same time a statement of his account to date, thus abolishing the old monthly statement bugaboo. We showed him how, at the same operation, all of his accounts were posted right up to the minute, and we told him of the famous 16 things that the Barr Register did immediately.

And at last his common sense came to the rescue and overpowered his prejudice against "new-fangled" machines, and he bought a Barr Register.

A little while ago one of our representatives happened to call around his way.

"How do you do, Mr. Pennywise," our salesman greeted. "How is the Barr Register working?"

200-300 Account Register for Counter

300-400 Account Register with Sanitary Base

Grocer $2,500

Mr. Pennywise was brought up in the old school and had developed his muscles in no inconsiderable degree, and the hand-shake of welcome that our representative received from him made him feel as though a trip-hammer had fallen on his hand.

"I want to tell you," said Mr. Pennywise—who was no longer pound foolish—"that your making me buy that Barr Register was the best thing that ever happened to me since I was converted at Camp Meeting. It has actually, in cold dollars and cents, reduced my outstanding accounts from $3,000 to $500."

Have you, gentle reader, any outstanding accounts?

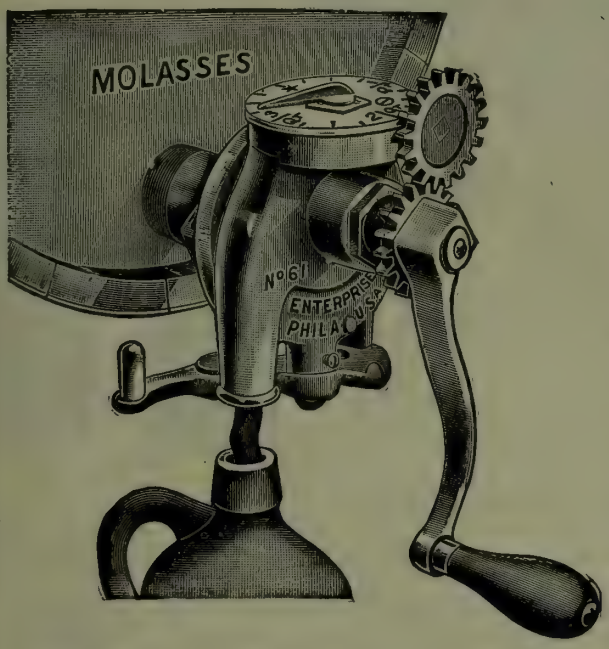
There isn't a grocer in the land who can afford to be without one of these two trouble savers

Many dealers, who know that their trade demands that they sell molasses by the quart or gallon, would like to dispense with it altogether because it is troublesome.

Here are the devices that take away the difficulties—that make the drawing and sale of molasses both profitable and convenient.

ENTERPRISE

IMPROVED PATENT SUCTION AND FORCE MEASURING FAUCET

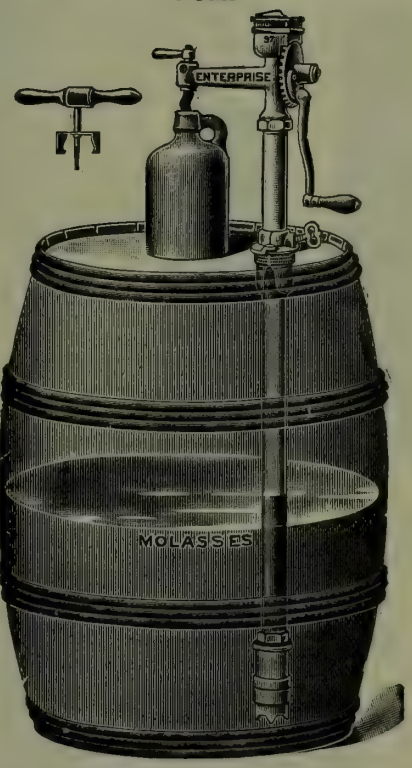


THE ENTERPRISE IMPROVED PATENT SUCTION and FORCE MEASURING FAUCET draws molasses both summer and winter directly into the jug or bottle and without the use of a funnel. It is cleaner and dispenses with the use of measures; does away with the fly and dirt nuisance.

It will draw a gallon of molasses in winter in one minute. It is the only measuring faucet that has shown that it can stand the wear and tear of service.

You simply open the nozzle gate, turn the crank until the register hand indicates the quantity you desire to draw. Eight revolutions draw a quart—absolutely without fail. We warrant this faucet to measure according to United States Standard.

SELF PRIMING AND MEASURING PUMP



THE ENTERPRISE SELF-PRIMING AND MEASURING PUMP draws molasses at the rate of four revolutions to the pint. It is equipped with our new total register device. Just put the pump into the barrel and it is ready to use. The new total register device shows you precisely how much you have left in the barrel, so that you can order before your supply is exhausted.

Bear this in mind. Our pump will not agree with any inaccurate measure. It measures. It measures a gallon, which weighs just the amount that a gallon should weigh, and every time you test it you find it right. Use one of the Enterprise devices and do a satisfactory molasses trade. Like all Enterprise articles—Meat and Food Choppers, Cherry Stoners, Fruit Presses, Sad Irons—these are made to give you absolutely satisfactory service. There isn't a part that is not made to the highest standard. Send for the Enterprise catalogue.

A Series of Advertisements for CASH STORES

A GOOD many people think I have written the best advertising for cash stores that has been produced. I think so myself, but I don't ask any merchant to accept my opinion in the matter. Any dealer who wishes to form his own opinion can see a sample. I have just prepared

Now Ready—A New Series of Ten Ads for Cash Stores for $10.00

This series of ads is fully protected by copyright. No one may use them without arrangement with the Fisk Publishing Company. Also no one may copy them after being used by a dealer. I will send one sample ad on request. The first dealer in any town who sends an order, with check for ten dollars, will receive the set of ten ads for exclusive use in his town. The basic principles of cash selling are the same for all lines of trade, therefore these advertisements will answer for any line of trade, if the store is a cash store. The ads are designed for display in a double-column, six-inch space, and are ready to send to the printer, who simply "follows copy." They can be displayed in larger or smaller space if desired, and can be used either with or without prices. Personally, I think they are the best advertisements yet written to convince consumers that a cash store is the only place to trade. Write for sample, using request form below.

GOLD MEDAL AWARD AT QUEBEC EXHIBITION.

TO THE TRADE,

Gentlemen:-

We feel sure that you will be very much interested in learning that we have achieved a further success, in this our first season of operations, by being awarded the GOLD MEDAL at the "QUEBEC PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION" held during the week of August 26th-31st, 1912, for the QUALITY of our CANNED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

We have received letters from nearly all of our customers expressing their satisfaction in regard to the quality of the goods we have shipped them, and these letters, together with the GOLD MEDAL awarded at Quebec for QUALITY certainly demonstrate the fact that we have done everything possible to live up to our guarantee of furnishing our customers with Canned Fruits and Vegetables equal or superior to those of any other Canadian packer. We have not yet received a single complaint in regard to the quality of our Canned Fruits and Vegetables, and considering the difficulties that beset every manufacturer in the first year of operations, we think we are safe in predicting that our products of 1913 will be the finest in quality that have ever been offered to the Canadian Public.

You are no doubt aware, that the 1912 Canning Season, which is now rapidly drawing to a close, has been about the most unfavorable in the past ten years. The crops of practically all canning fruits and vegetables have been a failure and most Canners have only been able to make a small pro rata delivery on orders booked by them. The Crops of Corn and Tomatoes are suffering from the unfavorable weather conditions more seriously than any of the earlier crops of fruits and vegetables, and consequently, the Canadian pack of Corn and Tomatoes is likely to be much smaller than in any of the past ten years.

We mention this fact because the information may be of much benefit to some Members of the Trade, but we would point out that if we are favored with warm weather during the remainder of the month of October all Canners will be enabled to pack a large quantity of both Corn and Tomatoes and therefore, the ultimate pro rata delivery that will be made by Canners on orders for Corn and Tomatoes, depends entirely on weather conditions of the next two weeks.

We would also point out that Canners have not only been hampered by small crops this season, but the quality of the fruits and vegetables delivered to the factories has been greatly inferior to the produce of the average season, and therefore, as we have been so successful in satisfying our customers with the quality of our goods this year, we are confident that next season we will more than gratify the desire of all Members of the Trade for quality Canned Fruits and Vegetables.

We intend to greatly increase our output next season and therefore are anxious to show our qualifications for the business to more Members of the Trade, and we repeat our former offers to send you samples of any of the varieties of goods we have packed this year. We want your business because we know we can give you satisfaction with the finest quality of goods and still make a reasonable profit for our Shareholders.

We will be in a position to take care of your entire requirements of Canned Fruits and Vegetables, Jams, Catsups and other Specialties during the season of 1913, and the superior quality of our products will more than compensate you for placing your contract with us.

Yours very truly,

THE IMPORTANCE OF FRESH TEA

The flavor of tea is contained in an essential oil. With age the oil decays. This affects the flavor and is quickly detected by the consumer. Tea keeps better when not exposed to the air, but it deteriorates, more or less, under any circumstances. Fresh tea is as necessary to a successful tea trade as fresh butter to a successful butter trade. No retailer should keep a pound of tea in his stock for more than four months, and he should be sure that wholesalers are not supplying him with old goods which they have had on hand for years.

In Ceylon, tea is picked every week in the year, and you always get it fresh and fragrant in "SALADA."

If any retailer—anywhere—at any time—has any "SALADA" in stock that is over six months old, let him ship it back to us—freight collect—and we will refund the full purchase price. We back up our belief in the paramount importance of fresh tea by this sweeping guarantee.

FOR THE FALL CAMPAIGN.

THE Fall Campaign Number of the Canadian Grocer herewith makes its bow. We believe that what it has to say to you is something worth while. It has come out at a time when dealers are preparing for their Fall campaigns, and in view of this, both its editorial and advertising pages will be found particularly advantageous.

The Fall Number has long since come to be expected. It is an essential part of our annual volume, and is to the year what the ordinary issue is to the week. It celebrates the season of natural replenishment, as do the fall fairs in our Canadian towns and cities.

In the articles following there are depicted the methods and opinions of many men in the trade from the Atlantic to the Pacific. All these methods or opinions are, of course, not applicable to the business of every reader. But we can confidently say there is something in every article that will appeal to all.

We have been particularly fortunate in securing a number of fine illustrations of Canadian stores and windows. There are ideas in them for the smallest as well as the largest stores. Sift them out and you have information that will mean money to you. They are making money for your fellow-members every day.

THE POWER OF SUGGESTION.

A WELL-KNOWN Canadian retail grocer made the statement the other day that people nowadays must be sold goods; the grocer could not afford to wait for the demand.

As an instance of this he cited one of his own experiences bearing on the selling of brooms. He has been keeping his stock of brooms towards the rear of the store and occasionally sold one. Occasionally only, because brooms are not considered a rapid selling line since the lives of most brooms are fairly lengthy. Even when a broom has long since seen its best days, many a housewife will overlook replacing it.

But he decided to make a slight change in the position of his brooms. He placed a rack containing a dozen in the doorway one Monday morning, and on Tuesday noon there were only five remaining—and none, remember, were stolen.

Now this was a very simple act, but has it not its important feature? Seven brooms at 40 cents each amounts to $2.80. Here was a turnover of almost three dollars extra in a day and a half, due to a simple little idea—the change in location of the broom rack.

It emphasizes the fact that goods can be sold other than those thought of before the customer or passerby left home. If such is the case—and the proof has been given—is there not a great future for every dealer who takes the fullest advantage of this "power of suggestion?"

Brooms are not a luxury, but a necessity in every home. Extra staple goods can therefore be sold by suggestion.

THE GROCER'S LEGITIMATE TRADE.

IN a city of some 20,000 population there will probably be eighty or more grocers to ten or a dozen druggists. Yet in many of these cases there will be found as many drugstores carrying announcements in the daily papers as grocers.

At the same time, if one notices the stock carried in the drug store, he will find many lines that rightly belong to the grocer. Among these will be spices, confectionery, soda, cream of tartar and baking powder. These are not drugs, but are used in the home for cooking purposes, and naturally should come from the grocery store.

An advertisement in a small city paper the other day was headed:—

> PICKLING SEASON:
> PURE SPICES are essential in making the Best Pickles, etc. You are always sure of the purest and choicest, if obtained from us. Special attention to all the Pickling Necessities.

Following this talk was a list of spices, and other pickling requisites, such as rubber rings, sealing wax, corks, and pickle bottles, sold by that store. It was a druggist's advertisement, not a grocer's. With ten grocers to one druggist in many cities, there is no good reason why the former cannot get practically all such business, which is legitimately theirs.

If drug stores can secure business from announcements in the press, why cannot the grocers? It all depends on the announcement, and if the goods are first class, satisfaction and repeat orders will be forthcoming.

WORK WINDOWS TO FULL LIMIT.

THE majority of grocers in Canada do not give the attention to window display they should; nor do they give the same amount of attention to this department as do dealers in many other lines of business.

This is not because they do not realize or believe in the value of window display. Examples of direct business are too frequent for that. On the contrary, every grocer who has given any appreciable attention whatever to window display, is high in his praise of the good results. But even many of these men do not give the attention that they should.

It is not infrequent to hear a retailer say, "my windows are my best salesmen," or "take my windows away and you take my business away," and still these same dealers do not get the best possible results from them. There is no denying that they get considerable business, but that is absolutely no argument why they should not reap the full advantages possible by giving them more attention, changing them oftener and continually aiming to make them turn every cent possible into the cash drawer every day.

The grocery store is by nature a busy place, and there are many minor details to be attended to, but this is no reason why the window should be neglected. It would be a great deal more profitable for the grocer or whoever looks after the windows to devote more time to them and arrange in some way to have the minor details attended to by someone else, even if extra help is found necessary. The extra business which good windows will bring as a result will more than make up for the cost of the extra help.

TIME TO GO AFTER BUSINESS.

"THERE is a tide which taken at the flood leads on to fortune." These are words well worth the consideration of the merchant. They are of special import at the present time.

Canada is at a record point of prosperity this year, probably more so than ever before. Crops have in general been good, and in some lines in some districts have attained a record mark.

The harvests have been garnered and farmers are now reaping the fruits of their year's labors. In the West big yields of grain are being sent forward and turned into cash. In dairying sections by reason of the high prices of butter and cheese returns have been exceptionally favorable. Large yields in the fruit districts have made things equally profitable there. Altogether the finances of the farmer are in a particularly rosy condition. This means prosperity in the cities and towns where employment has been plentiful, and money is free. It is probably no exaggeration to say that there is more money in the country than ever before.

As a result people are in an excellent buying mood. The time to go after business is when business is the most easily secured. Now is undoubtedly that time. This is the psychological moment, and every dealer should put forth his best efforts to benefit while the opportunity exists.

REMEDY ERRORS IN DELIVERY.

IF a delivery system sends goods to the wrong house, it is not a system at all. There are cases every day where groceries are mis-directed, thus breeding complaints that frequently lead to loss of business. When the dealer has it brought to his attention that goods have not reached their destination or gone to the wrong address, he should immediately institute an enquiry to find the cause of the trouble and effect a remedy.

Mistakes are commonly made in the store by the salespeople who address parcels wrongly. These errors are, of course, mostly all blamed on the delivery man. Often names without addresses are placed on the counter-check, the onus being placed on the delivery man to distribute them properly. On a busy day something is bound to go astray.

The delivery question is one that should be given every attention. If the "system" permits the sending of parcels to the wrong address or neglecting to send them out at all, there should be an immediate overhauling of the "system." The losses of three or four customers in a year from such causes are not explainable.

CANADA'S GROWING TRADE.

CANADA has every reason to feel proud of the great increase in revenue during the past six months. The financial statement made public recently shows a total revenue of $81,378,650, an increase of $17,309,126, as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The increase averages nearly three millions per month and is the largest on record for any half-year in the history of the Dominion. The growth of imports, with consequent increase in Customs revenue, accounts for the greater part of the total gain. For the six months the Customs receipts totaled $56,455,146, a gain of $14,170,-611 over last year. Excise revenue totaled $10,152,014, a gain of about one-and-one-third millions. Post office revenue increased by $600,000.

With the growing revenue, there have also been, of course, growing expenditures. The expenditures on consolidated fund accounts for the six months totaled $43.-931,539, an increase of about eight millions, or about twenty-three per cent. over the first half of the last fiscal year. Capital expenditure, the figures of which are necessarily incomplete, shows a total of $11,761,983, which is practically the same as for the corresponding period of last year.

The net debt of the Dominion at the end of September was $313,508,376, a decrease of $3,016,796, during the month and a decrease of over ten millions as compared to the debt on September 30 last year.

DEVELOP SAVING HABIT.

HABITS formed in one's youth are likely to cling for all time. The clerk who is reckless with his money in his younger days is going to find it mighty difficult to settle down as he grows older.

So the habit of saving is one that should be cultivated early. No matter what the first weekly salary amounts to, there should be a determined resolution to place a definite portion of it on deposit in the bank.

Elsewhere in this issue is told the story of advancement of a young clerk, who formed such a resolution and followed it. First as delivery boy, and afterwards as clerk, he spent a number of years as an employe, each year putting in the bank a definite sum. In a few years he had $650 with which to begin a business for himself, and to-day he is a highly successful dealer.

The saving habit is one that should be cultivated by clerks, and employers should assist in its development. Our clerks of to-day are our merchants of to-morrow, and the more successful they are, the better will it be for the trade in general.

Get the habit of saving without being miserly, and one is on the fair road to fortune.

SELLING COOL WEATHER GOODS.

WITH the approach of the cooler autumn weather, there are certain lines of goods which the dealer should immediately swing into prominence. Among the most important of these are such lines as cocoa, meat extracts, concentrated and canned soups, syrups, molasses and cereals.

These are lines for which there is a certain set demand during autumn and winter, but unless the grocer gets behind them himself, only a meagre quantity will be sold compared to what can be sold through prominent displays and other aggressive methods.

From now on let every dealer make regular, good live displays in the window and on the counter of each of these lines, and watch results. Late suppers call especially for hot cocoa or meat extract. The breakfast demands cereal, as well as syrups or molasses, while the dinner requires soups. Emphasize these points in display cards, newspaper advertising and personal talks and there are bound to be many extra sales made.

If these goods are left under the counter or in the warehouse there will be little call for many of them. Let customers and other buyers see them. It will mean good sales and profits.

THE CHRISTMAS COMPETITIONS.

ON another page of this issue appears the formal announcement of The Grocer's annual Christmas window and ad.-writing competition. This competition has become one of the bright annual features of the paper, and with the increased interest from year to year in window dressing work especially, the displays are more and more scientifically produced with a view to creating sales.

Every clerk and dealer should see at once the terms of this year's contest and decide now to enter. The more contestants there are, the better for our readers, as the winning windows will be reproduced in the paper next year.

The contest closes at the end of the year and every photograph, as well as newspaper advertisement, should be mailed not later than December 31. This gives the far West and East plenty of time to have photographs taken after the Christmas rush is over.

When you have a real good Christmas window installed, why not have it photographed and forwarded? Whether it takes a prize or not, if it is a good one, it will be reproduced.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The "mental attitude" of the store can usually be determined from the store front.

Quality and service, if well advertised, will easily win out against the mail order houses.

* * *

Display is as important to the grocer in selling goods as the tricks of the street corner "fakir."

* * *

When the dealer reduces delivery complaints to a minimum, a great load has been lifted off his shoulders.

Thanksgiving falls on October 28. The fall thereof will be great if you can use it to bring in extra business.

Educating the people to want what you have to sell is one of the big efforts of every successful retail grocer.

Don't overlook Thanksgiving in planning for the fall campaign. An appropriate window will sell a lot of goods.

The sale of plum puddings is becoming larger every year. The resultant profits are "plums" every dealer should go after.

* * *

The fall house-cleaning season is by no means past. The resounding notes of the beaten rugs can still be heard in the land.

* * *

Sanitary stores are more and more in evidence in Canada. As a result sanitary inspectors are earning their money more easily.

Here is a sign for the grocery store when the new dried fruits and nuts arrive: "Good day, have you bought your Christmas baking material?"

If grocers generally adopt the gallery system for displaying and stocking goods, we may frequently hear the remark, "You'll find those peanuts up in the gods."

The Christmas buyer has usually a well bulged pocketbook. By showing how he can lighten his load and get full current value for the money, you do him a good turn. He might spend some of it foolishly.

A. Glover's store, Kingston, Ont., where goods are only sold from sample. In an endeavor to have it as sanitary as possible, the ceiling is of metal and floor of variety of marble. It is probably the only one of its kind in Canada.

Determined to Have a Sanitary Store

Kingston Grocer Sells From Sample—Goods For Delivery Parceled and Sent From Rear—Marble and Cement Floor Always Clean—Many Labor Saving Devices in Use—How Samples are Shown to Customers—Prices Attached to Each.

By A. Glover.

Among the reasons why we decided to sell goods from sample only in the front of this store and parcel them up for delivery in the rear, the chief are Cleanliness, Room and Labor-Saving.

In my old store I used to pile the goods round in the usual way to make a display. In about a week's time the labels would be destroyed by dust and the different displays would be disturbed; a can taken from here and a bottle or two from there and the design would soon lose its effectiveness. This was to the dissatisfaction of the decorator who had spent some time in planning out same. These might be replaced when business rush was over or might be allowed to remain for several days until time could be secured for redecorating.

I was not at all satisfied with the old wooden floors. These I found hard to keep clean, and had them replaced with new hardwood. These looked very nice for a time, but like the old ones looked allright only for the day or so after being cleaned, and were soon dirty again.

The floor in the new store is laid with Tarrazo which is sanitary, warm, water and fire proof. It is very easily kept clean by brushing it over with wet sawdust, and also looks well, being made with crushed Italian Marble and cement.

More or less confusion was found in orders taking up the floor space in the old store which should have been kept clear for the customers. This is all done away with, the orders are taken in front store and sent to shipping room in rear to be put up and sent out by side entrance, thus leaving the floor space clear as seen in photograph.

I make no outside display, but utilize

A. Glover, Kingston, Ont., the writer of this article, has been in business for twenty years, and it is with this experience in view that he decided some time ago to operate as sanitary a store as possible by selling from sample. He is undoubtedly quite right in stating that the public are more and more demanding clean, wholesome and quality foods, and a sanitary store in which to deal. The best dealers all over Canada will uphold his opinion in this respect. The article is an exceedingly interesting one, and should be read by everyone.

the large plate glass windows to good effect. All goods are brought in by side entrance, and empties never allowed to stand around. I will admit an outside display may catch some of the don't-care-class of trade. These are what I consider as cheap buyers and are in the same class with the bargain hunters, who are not particular as to how the goods are handled. These outside displays also attract flies and catch the dust, etc.

Labor Saving Equipment.

I have an electric coffee mill, rotary meat slicer, and green vegetable spray which are all labor saving contrivances.

The vegetable spray is in one of the windows, the vegetables being placed on trays, and spray going through the contents continually keeps them fresh and nice. I have customers tell me every day they never buy vegetables and fruit when displayed outside. In my opinion the grocery store should be the most sanitary of all stores, and people are paying more attention now as to the way the wares are handled in the stores and market places.

How Samples are Shown.

My present store is fitted out with the tilting bins. They display and accommodate all teas, coffee, peels, starch, etc., and also save a great deal of time as they are easily opened and closed. Above the bins is a glass sample case containing a sample tin or bottle of all lines carried in stock on which the price is marked in plain figures. This enables the customer to see the goods in stock and price of same. This does away with looking for the goods asked for if not in sight, also looking up the prices.

All samples are removed from the case from time to time, being replaced with fresh ones. In opening the cases I leave all wrappers on goods until they are being placed in the orders.

Above the sample case is a wall case upon which I make a display of the different kinds of breakfast foods and cereals carried. These are put up in pyramids, which contain 6, 8, or 10 packages as the case may be. These are changed often, not allowing them to become stale. Orders are filled from stock which is kept in the stock room off the shipping room.

Showing Meats and Provisions.

At the rear of store is a large refrigerator with glass front which enables me to make good display of butter, lard, meats, fruits, etc., in the different compartments.

On the opposite wall is a large biscuit display case containing sixty tins, showing different varieties to good advantage, thus increasing the sales, and making a splendid display. This enables the customer to see all the lines carried in stock, as all are in view. It is also a great time saver for customer and clerk.

The camera did not take in the vegetable stand which is in the window at the end of the biscuit case.

The silent salesman show cases and fixtures are all finished in the same color.

The office is situated at the rear of store to the left, near the entrance of which stands a large cash register, containing a number of tills, one for each clerk. To this register is attached an electric device which lights a sign "Get Your Receipt" when any of the different tills are opened.

Street Advertising Brought Xmas Trade

Brantford Business Men on Street off Main Thoroughfare Instigated a "Buy on Dalhousie Street" Campaign Last Christmas—Claim Expense Turned Out to be an Investment—Additional Lights Added and Windows Attractively Trimmed.

In recent years we have heard much of city and town advertising as a means of bringing industries and business to a town. The West has been particularly aggressive in this regard and in most cases it has proved extremely profitable. Get people interested and talking about anything no matter whether it be a town or a business and good results are bound to follow. Publicity is one of the biggest business getters of the age and is being applied in numerous ways.

It remained for Brantford, Ont., to bring forth last December something new in the line of publicity. In this case it was a street that was advertised and those who took part in the scheme were extremely pleased with results. Not only did it improve business on the street while the direct attempt was under way but it gave it so much prominence that business is reported to have continued on a better scale than previous.

To Make Street Better Known.

Brantford is a town of some 23,000 population in Western Ontario. The business men on Dalhousie street, headed by A. C. Clark, a shoe dealer, last Christmas decided to wage a campaign to bring this street into greater prominence as a business centre. Dalhousie street is in the main portion of the city but runs off Market street, the thoroughfare with the street car line. It seems natural that the street with the car line should be the main business street, but Dalhousie street merchants decided to try to change the order of things somewhat.

Added Many Lights.

The time selected for this campaign was from the week previous to Christmas last year until New Year's. During that time the street was brilliantly lighted by the temporary erection of additional lights. Poles were erected in barrels for the purpose and series of lights strung along on these. At intervals there was a string of lights running into the buildings. It was indeed a good representation of "the great white way." Signs were erected along the street with Christmas greetings and such slogans as "Shop on Dalhousie street." In keeping with the idea of attracting more people and business all the merchants gave special attention to their windows. The local papers caught the spirit of the affair. Mention of it was made in the news column. The citizens of Brantford awoke to the fact that Dalhousie was a prominent business street and that there were some wide-awake business men on it.

What the Cost Amounted to.

Of course all this cost money. Litte publicity is secured without cost but if returns are large enough it really is not an expense but an investment. Altogether the cost in this case amounted to over $300 but divided up among the different merchants it did not amount to an excessive charge and they are pretty well agreed that it was money well spent.

A Grocer's Opinion..

Fred Harp, a grocer on this street, was well pleased with results. "When I was first approached regarding the scheme," he says, "I was rather dubious but agreed to go in on it. I was exceedingly well pleased with results. There were a good many more visited the street. People began to talk about it and ask their neighbors if they had been down. We gave special attention to our windows and as a result had the best Christmas trade we have ever had. I consider it was an excellent investment for me. It has brought the street more before the people and more people frequent it now than formerly. Consequently business is better.

A LARGE "T" SIGN.

A Princess St. grocer in Kingston, Ont., makes a big specialty of tea in his business. In order to keep before customers this fact he has a "T" sign extending out from the front of his store. The sign is about two feet high and on it is some reading matter relative to the tea sold.

The Store Interior That Creates Sales

Illustration of an Alberta Store Demonstrating This—Modern Display Fixtures in Use—Attractive Shelf Arrangement—Plenty of Floor Room for Customers.

As a developer of sales of fall and Christmas goods, no dealer would dare to overlook the interior display. Go into any store whatever and watch the eye of a customer who has come to buy a loaf of bread or a can of vegetables. It will be found to roam over the various appealing displays, and in many cases will alight on something and remain there until the price is asked.

The Goods Must Be Seen.

The brightness of their store is another feature. They realize that no interior, no matter how well arranged, will do justice to itself unless the goods can be seen to advantage. Therefore plenty of light is needed.

If, too, the interior is to be made as strong a selling force as possible, there must be sufficient room for customers to move about. While it is considered good business to show as many goods as possible, yet there must be order in the arrangement if best results are to be secured.

Absence of Boxes on the Floor.

The West & Montgomery store appeals to one in this regard. There are no unsightly boxes and barrels on the floor to be tripped over. There are a great many stores in the country where it would be impossible to accommodate more than three or four customers at a time. There are boxes, soap cases, barrels, etc., piled without care in the centre of the floor. In others may be seen string, waste paper, orange peeling and other refuse from early morning until late at night, with no apparent effort being made to clean it up. Such a store cannot expect to attract good custom—custom that means extra purchases of high class goods bearing fair margins of profit.

At the same time every attention should be given the appearance of the shelves. Dirty, dusty, fly-specked shelving drives high class business away. No person is content to deal at a store where every can or bottle of goods received looks as if they had spent the past two or three years in someone's back yard.

Attracting the Inside Customer.

The grocers who are getting away from this sort of thing are experiencing better business. The bright, clean, well arranged interior is the one that induces the inside customer to buy goods which she had not thought of prior to entering the store. This is what helps the business; for it is a fact that the bare demands of one's customers would not provide enough to allow him a mere living.

The members of this firm are two former Prince Edward Island men.

Interior of a live store in a growing Alberta town. Montgomery & West, the proprietors, are former Eastern Canadian men.

The appealing inside display makes many an extra sale. That is why Montgomery & West of Wetaskiwin, Alta., have installed a system of bin fixtures that must be seen by everybody who enters the store. These give an added effect to the cleanliness of the store interior and arrangement and, therefore, in addition to making extra sales, make a reputation for the proprietors, giving them more prestige.

Montgomery & West run a large departmental store of which the grocery section shown herewith is but a part. The business was established some 17 years ago, having been acquired by the present owners in 1908.

This illustration shows the gallery around the two sides and rear end of E. F. Mason's store, Peterboro, Ont. The inset is that of Mr. Mason himself. Note also the prominence of store equipment and fixtures.

Grocery Store Fitted With a Gallery

Peterboro', Ont., Dealer Who Wanted More Display Space for Surplus Stock Has One Installed—Large Orders of Any Line Filled From Shelves in Gallery—An Advocate of Modern Fixtures—Business Increased by Demonstration—Ideas From Other Cities.

When one thinks of the word "gallery" he usually recalls to mind a church or a theatre or some arena. Not many would think of a grocery store; yet shown herewith is one with a gallery. It is that of E. F. Mason, a Peterborough, Ont., grocer, who recently had his store refitted and re-equipped. As the illustration indicates, the store is an exceedingly inviting one with its show-cases, handsome tables, and attractive shelving.

The gallery is, of course, a new feature so far as grocery stores are concerned, and one may wonder at the idea of Mr. Mason in the installation of this innovation. At the rear of the store on the left may be seen the stairway. The gallery is around the end and sides, being supported by steel rods leading up to the ceiling, while a steel railing gives protection to anyone walking along.

Display Room for Surplus Goods.

"I wanted more room," stated Mr. Mason to The Grocer in referring to the change. "The warehouse was getting crowded and the shelving was filled so the only solution was the gallery.

"When a large shipment of goods arrives, we place what we require for ordinary selling on the lower shelving and the remainder on the shelves above the gallery. Frequently an order for a dozen or two of jams or pickles will come in from a hotel or other large buyer, and these we take from the gallery shelves. This does not make holes in our shelf arrangement below and at the same time we are able to fill the order quickly. It saves opening boxes and cases and having the warehouse continually upset."

With this system, Mr. Mason has practically his entire stock in the store proper, always handy and ready to be brought down at a minute's notice. Customers are free to use the gallery at any time and it is considered a strong advertisement on account of the new and attractive appearance it gives the entire store.

What the Equipment Includes.

Mr. Mason is a great believer in the value of modern equipment as an aid in increasing business. In this illustration may be seen a vegetable display fountain, which he bought this spring; handsome demonstration and display tables; computing scale; meat slicer; refrigerator; dust proof bin fixtures, and silent salesmen. He also, of course, has a cash register, but it does not show here. The small display stands are made of best of wood and display bottled goods to good advantage.

When the picture of Mr. Mason's store was taken, there was a demonstration on of jelly powders and soups. This is a method which in his establishment is a splendid one for introducing new goods to his customers. During fall and Christmas seasons he pushes sales of high class quality lines by this method as well as through window displays and personal conversation.

Going Out After New Ideas.

Mr. Mason is one of those who believe in going out to other cities for information on methods for increasing sales. He makes frequent trips to Toronto and some time ago went down to New York where he studied first hand the things that appeal to the general public. With these and his own ideas to work on, he aims to attract new business as well as develop that which he already has. That is the goal all are striving for.

Great Value Placed On Quality Goods

British Columbia Grocer Maintains That This is the Chief Essential in Buying —Quality Goods Bring Repeats—Concentration as a Business Builder—Places Importance on Frequent Changes of Window Display.

By J. D. Jay, Manager for Dixi H. Ross & Co., Victoria, B.C.

In giving my views to readers of The Grocer on increasing the business of a retail store, I would first place particular emphasis on CONCENTRATION.

The most serious question in business is CONCENTRATION. You must concentrate your whole personality so that it is felt, not only amongst the clerks, but also amongst the customers. Make them all feel that they are actually part of the life of the business also convey to your clerks your own strong sense and feeling; mingle with them, so that they get the strong influence you wish to impart to them. also that they may study the same practical methods you may use yourself towards a customer. Be a guide. Do not use a whip. Make them feel that they are really part of a daily machine and that if they fail to do their duty the machine will become clogged and stop. "It is all concentration."

When your patrons enter the threshold of your store, meet them gladly. Do not allow them to stand and gaze idly about and seem lost to actual surroundings. Make them feel that you know that it is part of your business to convey to them any idea that may enable them to make purchasing easy.

Clerks Should Know the Goods.

Educate your clerks to know the true merits of the article they may be asked for, so that they can describe fully the ingredients therein. Pay your clerks their true value, not only in money but in attention. On new goods arriving, make a display in a prominent position upon the counter, and describe fully the virtues of the goods so that the clerks will not be at a loss to explain the contents.

Look to Quality in Buying.

Second: Buying is only taught by experience, but never lose for one moment the word "quality;" that is the true backbone of any sound business. Dwell upon that word so that you cannot deviate from that course and don't buy any but quality goods. No dictionary can impart to you any word that is more important to your business. It means volumes. When customers buy quality goods, they speak for themselves, therefore they repeat. Buying seconds means that you have to pay for extensive advertising to create a sale; also you cannot meet your customers with the same placid smile as when you are selling goods of true value.

Margin of Profit Desired.

Having had an extensive experience in some of the largest markets in the world and knowing the value of goods, I find it easy to discriminate in buying. I have made it a study. New goods do not impress me without there is a good margin, say at least 30 or 35 per cent. Do not figure on the cost of the article but on the selling price. Do not allow a plausible salesman to sell you goods that will not move rapidly. Make them create the demand and do the actual talking. Otherwise advertising them increases the cost. A salesman may have only one or two lines to look after while you have your whole business to study—and make it a deep study.

Watch Markets Closely.

Look your store over daily and see what improvement you can make in buying or otherwise. Follow diligently the market quotations in your Canadian Grocer. That I find the greatest essential point to success. It does not matter what varied experience you may have had, new goods are developing daily and advice from such a source should be duly appreciated.

Present Age Demands Live Window.

Third: WINDOW DRESSING. Now you may think what I am about to say does not meet the actual requirements of an up-to-date store. Of course you are fully aware that in many competitions our windows have carried the prize, also honorable mention. I believe the present age demands a live window. I mean by that, a window containing goods to sell from, and keep moving all the time. Do not put much stock in your window at any time, it only deteriorates and loses value and you do not sell any more.

Time is too valuable nowadays to spend one or two days to make a window display, the more often you change it the better results you will get. Spend that extra time on giving attention to customers—that is the vital point at the present time. While you may be standing, figuring out some design for your window, and a customer comes up to you to be waited on, you may feel greatly annoyed if your mind should be taken from your work, and probably the look on your countenace may not please the customer and she may go away with a false impression and deal elsewhere.

This I think you will admit is a common occurrence. Window dressing on a large scale is very expensive and I think should only be indulged in once a year, say Christmas time.

Employment of an Accountant.

OFFICE: If your business warrants. it get some good accountant to take charge and have full control over your financial affairs. Then you will be sure of promptness and exactness, which will undoubtedly save you a great deal of responsibility and worry. You need all your mental faculties to run your business successfully without the worry of office work.

Value of an Honorable Name.

ADVERTISING: You will think I am in another mood now when I start in this strain. In my opinion big daily advertisements for retail business only tend to make the public think your goods will not speak for themselves. Get a good honorable name for fair dealing, then you have obtained the proper mode of advertising. You may spend $100 per month or more for advertising. Save that, give that value to the public. For instance, on a Saturday I may make a genuine special of one or two lines and sell actually at cost after figuring expenses. I have got the public educated to that and they come to the store to see what the Saturday bargain is and probably buy something else; and I assure you that the present generation fully realize when they get a bargain. Saturday night during the fruit season I may alter and put the price of fruit down two or three times during the course of the evening, and I truly assure you that it makes you happy to see the smiling faces at the window waiting to see the prices reduced, and it is only human nature after all. These pointers are my essential modes of advertising. They may not be applicable everywhere, but they have doubled our Saturday's trade.

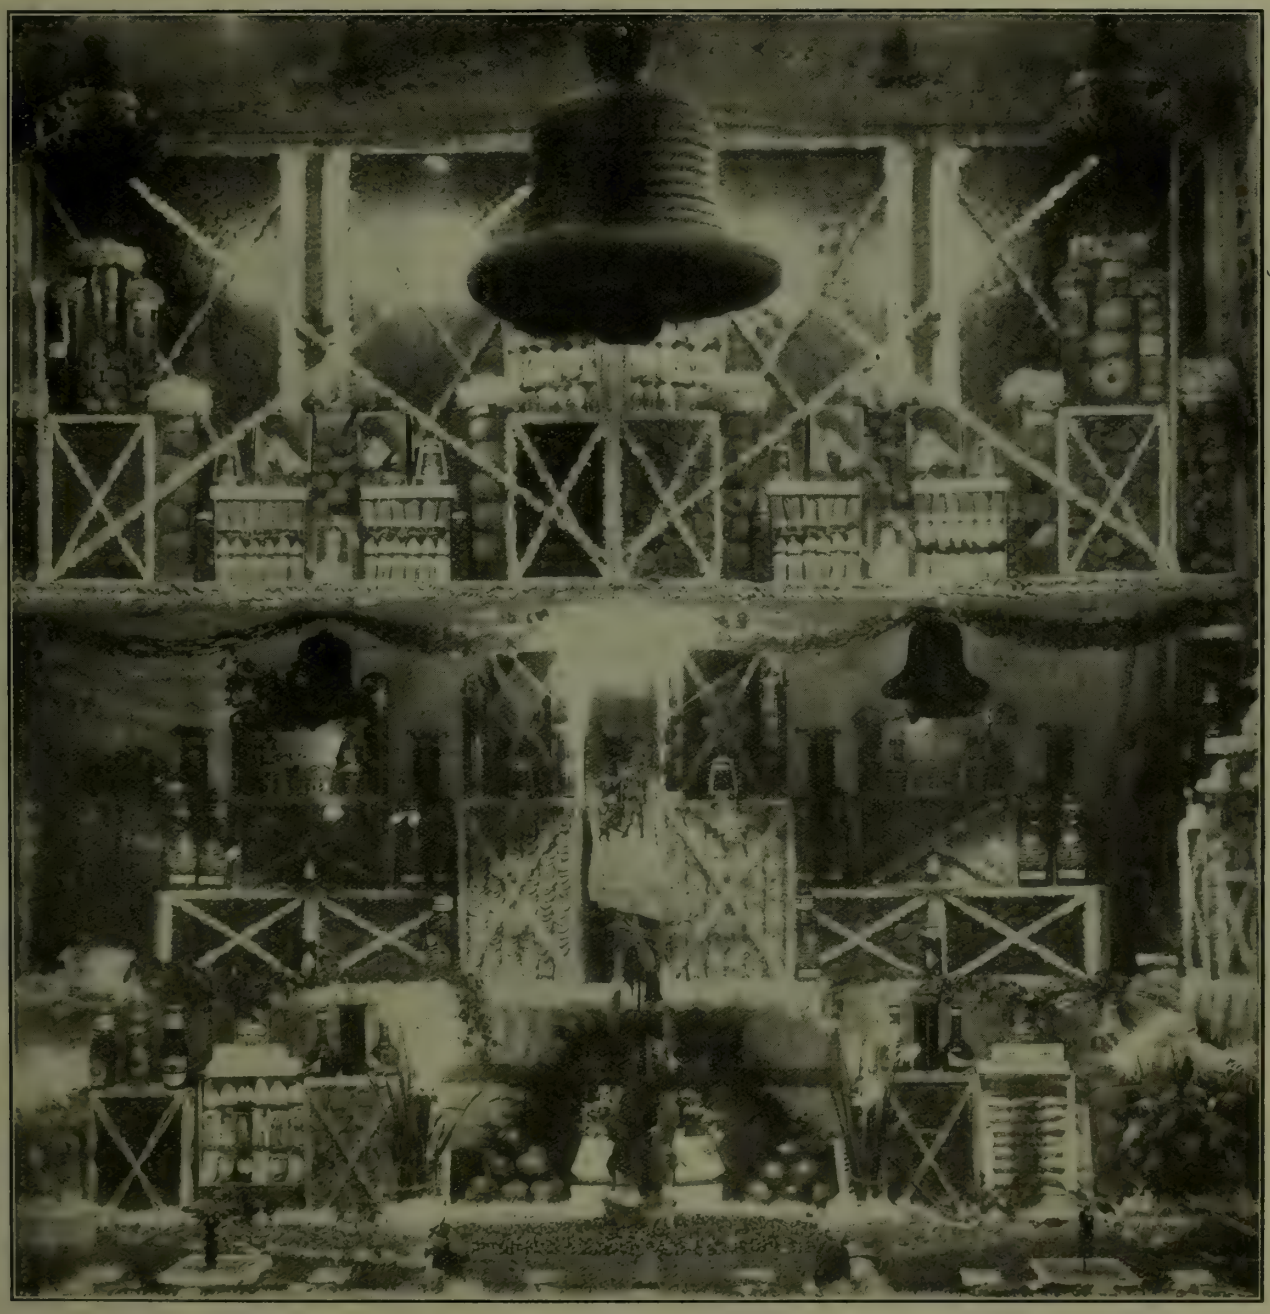
Prompt and Reliable Delivery.

DELIVERY: This is another mode of advertising. Our horses, the same as our business are blue ribbon winners. For years we have taken the highest honors in both double and single harness at the show at Vancouver as well as here. Promptness of delivery and reliability is another one of the points which has enabled us to build up our business to such proportions.



This illustration shows how attractively Dixi H. Ross & Co., Victoria, B.C., dress their Christmas windows.

FOR A SATURDAY WINDOW.

A suggestion for a Saturday window is one showing that a complete dinner for six may be prepared at a cost of only 95 cents.

A small table is placed in the window and on this is placed the articles that go to make up the meal. If you keep meats, three pounds of some line is put on. A couple of cans of canned meat will take its place. Then comes the required amount of potatoes, a can of soup, one of vegetables, coffee and some bananas or oranges.

One grocer has figured that the cost would run about 95 cents but whatever it amounts to, put a card up "Sunday dinner for six — cents." The idea is to catch the Saturday shopper but a window may be dressed in this manner to good advantage on any day of the week.

Using Motor Power in the Window Trim

This Can Be Made Powerful Sales Medium if it Tells the Proper Story—Example of a Good Motion Window From Ingersoll—Shows Canned Salmon and Connects it Up With the Source of Supply.

There is no stronger attraction in the window than a motion display. But all motion displays are not good sellers, and that should be the principal purpose of the window. Better have a good silent selling window than a motion display that disposes of little goods. In fact some windows operated by motive power never lead one to guess the reason. But when a motion window is connected up properly with the goods exhibited, the two form a strong selling combination.

In the window shown by the illustration we have the combination at its best. It was trimmed by Bruce McDougall, of Ingersoll, Ont., employed in his father's store there. He is a young man who takes a deep interest in display work, a sample of which recently appeared in The Grocer.

A Unique Salmon Window.

This is a Salmon window. It is not simply a few tins of salmon standing on end in the bottom but a display that fascinates as well as sells. It is one on which considerable thought and planning was necessary. It represented salmon fishing and canning and showed the finished product.

Observation of the illustration will show in the background a water-fall, the water coming down a chute and over the water-wheel. The wheel was kept in motion by a small electric motor placed out of sight. The water emptied into a miniature river below.

To the left of the water wheel was the canning factory and, to make the scene the more realistic, the banks of the river were built with sod and stone, vines and cat-tails.

Display Card Used.

The tins of salmon were arranged about the window in an artistic manner, and a show card which read: "Try our salmon, fresh supply always on hand," as well as a picture of a fish in the background added to the general effect.

Naturally such a window produced much favorable comment from Ingersoll people, and as it sold considerable salmon, performed a double function—sold the goods and advertised the store more widely.

Similar Treatment to Other Lines.

There are many other displays that could with good effect be based on this one. Make the window, for instance, tell the story of flour manufacturing, of soap making, the manufacture of maple syrup in the sugar bush, pickle manufacture, etc., etc. When the decision to display a certain line has been made the correct idea for a story or a story-motion window will present itself. Particular attention is necessary to see that the goods shown are connected up with the motion. A man shaving himself in a salmon window would draw a crow but wouldn't sell many goods.

Mr. McDougall has evidently hit upon the novel schemes that sell as well as attract. There is wide scope and a good future for the clerk who has the opportunity to develop this latent ability.

A salmon motion window trimmed by Bruce McDougall, of Ingersoll. A water chute, water-wheel, salmon cannery and river were among the features.

A PLEA FOR ORGANIZATION.

There are 22,000 peddlers in New York City, and they are well organized. They take a hand in the politics of the city, and they can sway an election if necessary. Hence they come very near getting the laws they want. This is another argument for merchants' organization.

Power of Store Cleanliness in Selling

A Bright Western Canadian Store Which Makes This a Feature—Neatness in Interior Display Invaluable if Good Class of Trade is Desired—Square Dealing With Everyone—The Purchasers of High Class Goods.

Everywhere in Western Canada one meets with bright grocery stores with many modern facilities for increasing sales and efficiency of the staff.

The City Grocery, Wetaskiwin, Alta., of which J. J. Christopher is proprietor, must be included as one of these. It was just two years ago that Mr. Christopher took over the business from C. E. Crompton. He is recognized and enjoys the distinction of being the youngest merchant in that thriving western town.

A glance at the illustration showing the interior of Mr. Christopher's store denotes the importance attached to interior display as a factor in getting business. The shelving is particularly attractive, the goods being placed so that labels do their duty as well as possible. The evergreens hanging along the top of the shelves impart the Christmas idea. While not elaborate, they are simple and effective.

The system of bin receptacles further emphasises the dependence placed upon display towards making sales. Samples of biscuits, confectionery, spices, etc., are shown up to good advantage. These fixtures are all of quarter cut oak, so the value of their appearance can easily be realized.

Confectionery in Silent Salesman.

The City Grocery carries a good sized stock of quality confectionery. This is found to be a splendid paying line in itself, and it also attracts custom for other goods the store might not otherwise receive. The confectionery is neatly displayed in silent salesmen, which attractive arrangement insures a good many sales.

Among the other equipment may be noted computing scales and cash carrier, the latter running into the elevated office at the rear.

The motto of the Christopher store is "a square deal to everyone, man, woman and child," and to this is ascribed a good deal of the proprietor's success.

Must Be Cleanliness.

Mr. Christopher realizes too that the days of dirty, ill-kept stores are a thing of the past if success is to be attained, and he works always with this point in view. His store is invariably neat and the goods in attractive order.

Cleanliness is a point on which every emphasis is laid by him. There is no question that in these advanced times, the general public is after quality goods from sanitary stores. There are, no doubt, a great many people who are not particular about quality or cleanliness. Price is everything to them. They purchase considerable goods, no doubt, but these are the cheaper varieties on which profit is frequently small. They also stick pretty much to the necessities of life not branching out among luxuries and semi-luxuries that actually bring in the good margins.

This is the business every dealer should get after, and now that the fall and Christmas trade is in view, possibilities are great to make substantial sales and profits.

Displays That Sell Christmas Goods

Prize Winning Windows in The Grocer's 1911 Contest Show Many Features of Importance—Windows are Judged From Standpoints of Attractiveness, Originality and Selling Power—Pointers for This Year's Displays.

When a small boy makes a basswood whistle that gives "tongue," he is naturally highly elated over the event. That same elation is manifest when he flies a kite of his own construction. He is proud of his work and of the admiration of others for it; and this same pride leads him on to further and more difficult achievements as he grows to manhood.

The same feeling of pride, too, is noticeable in the man who creates a window display that compels attention by force of its attractiveness, and rightly so. But when he constructs a window that not only attracts but induces the passerby to purchase, then he has reached a high stage of perfection as a display artist. He soon finds that a greater degree of effectiveness is developed the longer he keeps at it, and the more he studies the results produced by each successive display. His pride in the thing that he has made himself pleases him and he eventually does the work because he likes it.

The Window at Christmas.

Perhaps there is no better scope for the clerk or dealer than dressing a window with Christmas goods. At this time of year an appealing display is more likely to attract and sell more goods than one equally as good at any other season. That is probably the reason every window artist is anxious to make a good showing on the Christmas window. He knows everybody else is doing it, and if his share of the trade, or a little more, is to be secured he has got to show something beyond the ordinary.

Now, then, is the time to plan for a series of displays leading up to the climax of the week prior to the great event.

In this connection let us recall what some of the good Canadian window-dressers accomplished a year ago. It will be remembered The Canadian Grocer offered a number of cash prizes to the trimmers of the best 1911 Christmas windows. The results are shown herewith and in this and succeeding pages are the illustrations of the six prize winners.

Essentials of a Good Window.

A good window display has three chief essentials. It is attractive, original and has a high selling value. Let readers judge for themselves the displays from these three points of view and probably they will be benefited when the time comes to dress their Christmas windows. It will be further noted from the illustrations that every dealer has laid particular stress on showing seasonable lines.

Construction of a Stair Display.

A study of the winner in Class I.—that of Island & Bamford, Toronto—shows a particularly attractive and original display as well as one with strong selling power.

A circular stair is made of ten uprights placed in the centre of the window and covered with tinsel paper. The bottom row is covered with currants inlaid with he letters "Season's Greetings," made of loaf sugar.

The second row is covered with raisins, currants, sultanas and mixed peel.

The third row contains raisins and boxes of fancy biscuits.

The fourth shows different kinds of Christmas candies.

The fifth row is covered with package dates and essences.

On the sixth is shown table figs.

The seventh is covered with bottled candies and boxes of chocolates.

The eighth contains shelled nuts, and the ninth and top row is covered with bottled olives and bottles of wine.

The floor about the stairway shows a pyramid on each side, one of currants and one of Sultana raisins. Around these divided by slats covered with tinsel are shown the different varieties of Christmas nuts. The back is arranged with dates, figs, oranges, grapes and grape fruit. The back of the central fixture is draped from the centre to the sides and top with twisted colored paper forming a circle.

An Archway Window.

E. A. Reed, of Brandon, Man., won second prize in Class I. with an attractive arch display.

The top roof of the window is of green spruce, and branches of holly, from which are hung Christmas stockings and bunches of grapes. The top represents an arch, the upper part of which is covered with white cotton batting, trimmed with bunches of holly, and red bells. In the centre of the arch is hung a large bell made of evergreen, on which are the words "Christmas Greetings" in white. Under this bell and supported by four pillars of canned fruits, is a shelf extending right across the window, on which are bottles of olives, pickles, unfermented wine, plum puddings, etc. Between the pillars are three pyramids on which are fancy boxes of chocolates, completing the background. At the end of the window is a large mirror, and against this is built a pyramid of bottled fruit on glass shelves.

The Floor Arrangement.

The bottom is built on a slope, the part next the glass being six sections of nuts, each section being divided by figs; on top of the nuts are baskets of figs, fancy cluster raisins, shelled nuts in glass dishes, and a basket of grapes at each end. On the next part of the slope are five stars, the point of each star being filled with a different kind of candy; between the stars next the front are boxes and glass dishes of crystalized and glace fruits, bottles of bon bons, etc.; back of these are baskets of oranges, grape fruit and apples. All the shelves and the slope around the stars is covered with cotton batting on which is sprinkled diamond dust and sprigs of holly.

As to its selling power, Dowling & Reed claim they did an exceptionally large Christmas business, and no small part of it they attribute to their Christmas window.

Attractive and a Good Seller.

The window of Bruce and Sanderson is equally as attractive as the other two, but it lacks possibly a little in originality of design. There is no question about it only show their true value at night when the window is lit up. Pyramids of oranges appear in the background separated by pineapple and flanked by bottles of wine. Over them on each side hangs a fancy basket of grapes.

On the floor in front of the oranges are various kinds of nuts, fancy dates, stockings, bon bons and all the dried Christmas fruits. The table in the centre is adorned with grapes, pineapple being a splendid seller and might hold its own in this respect with the two above referred to. But in the judging of the displays, originality was a consideration.

The decorations emblematic of the Christmas season strike one as being particularly attractive, but of course

A feature of this display is the symmetrical arrangement, which could scarcely be improved upon. It was shown a couple of days prior to Christmas.

Regularity and attractiveness combine to make the window dressed by R. George for the Hudson Bay Co., Kamloops, B.C., a particularly good one.

The top portion of the window includes dried and canned fruits and Christmas crackers. Next come canned and bottled fruits; then is a row of evaporated fruits and below are raisins, currants and marmalade. Below that again are peels and jams and evaporated fruit. The bottom row consists of biscuits, plum puddings, figs and raisins.

Mr. George won first prize in Class II.

How Decorations Help.

C. H. Milton, with H. A. Ross, Oshawa, Ont., was the winner of second prize in this class. Attractiveness is added to the general appearance by evergreen border, the bells, bunches of grapes hanging from the upper shelf, holly in the front and occasional chrysanthemums throughout the display.

Among the Christmas lines shown are preserves, olives, dried and crystallized fruits, table raisins, shelled nuts, fancy biscuits in packets, etc. As it was the last before Christmas it contained a greater variety of the small and fancy articles than former windows.

The shelf at the top and rear is supported by two piles of canned tomatoes, the shelf below it being of glass on three pillars (decorated earthen pipes).

A Santa Slaus Introduced.

The display of Millar & Wigle, Essex, Ont., which captured third prize—Class II contest, certainly has the "Christmassy" appearance. The photograph scarcely does justice to some features of it. For instance, on the left is a Santa Claus in a chimney in which the detail does not show to best advantage. On the right is a Christmas tree laden with pop corn, stockings, and ornaments, while in the centre are a number of cases of oranges.

In the space to the front are nuts, candies, and grapes, all arranged with price tickets. The floor is covered with white batting, and decorated with sprigs of holly, while the back and front of Santa Claus is draped with white cotton and adorned with holly.

Some window artists might make the criticism that instead of devoting so much space to Santa Claus and the tree, more should be given to fairly high-priced lines, such as plum puddings, confectionery, fancy biscuits, etc. Nevertheless, this is an attractive display, and it sold goods.

With these six displays to assist, as well as others in this issue, dealers have something valuable to work on for their fall and Christmas windows.

Editorial Note.—Announcement is made in this number of our 1912 Christmas window contest. Those intending to enter should see the particulars and begin their plans now.

THE AGGRESSIVE SELLING PLAN.

It is quite evident to one who calls on the retail trade that the idea of putting the selling force behind particular articles has proven its worth. Grocers, great and small, speak favorably of this special selling effort and in many stores it is given much attention. To obtain the best results it is apparent that the clerks must become interested. A list of new articles and those the dealer desires to push should be given each clerk every time there is a change, or it should be placed near the order telephones and finally the list should be changed regularly, every day if need be but at least two or three times a week. Let not the list be too long and often it might include staples in conditions are peculiar. The fact that some of the best retail grocers in the country have adopted the aggressive selling plan and are continuing it, is guarantee sufficient of its practicability.

This window was dressed by A. M. Wigle, Millar & Wigle, Essex, Ont. It was the winner of third prize. Note the Santa Claus on the left and Xmas tree on the right.

The Power of Personal Contact in Selling

Trenton Dealer Demonstrates Importance of His Recommendation in Selling Goods—Can Sell Any Line He Stocks and Gets Behind Regardless of What Customer Asks For, He Claims—Specializes in Tobaccos, Cigars, Etc., Brushes, House Cleaning Articles and Salt.

The Hooey business in Trenton, Ont., has been established for over a quarter of a century. B. S. Hooey, the present proprietor has guided the business for 15 years, but his father had charge before him. A substantial business increasing from year to year has been built up because the value of salesmanship in selling goods over and above actual demand is recognized.

Unfortunately there are still merchants who believe that as long as they have the goods it makes no difference in what manner they are presented to customers or whether any extra effort is put forward to interest customers in them. Live dealers believe conditions are otherwise. Mr. Hooey is one of these.

Cleanliness First Essential.

The first stage in selling more goods than customers would ordinarily ask for that is recognized by Mr. Hooey, is to have goods shown up to the best advantage. An important factor in this behalf is to have a neat, clean store. In order to secure this condition, some lines carried by many grocers that tend to give the place a dirty and untidy appearance are not handled in this store. The floor is not littered with boxes or cases as in many stores, the aim being to have a neat appearance, yet goods displayed to good advantage. The store is a high one and to avoid the bare appearance which the walls might give, pictorial advertising material of goods handled is hung up. Only those of attractive appearance have been selected and these are all framed so as to add to, rather than detract from the appearance of the store.

How Shelves Are Arranged.

While the aim is to have a neat store, this is not carried out to extent of being detrimental to display. There is a counter down one side. On the other is a shelf only. On the top are shown cereals of various kinds. Then come three shelves of canned goods. The bottom shelf, commonly known as the ledge, is fitted with a glass front in a sloping position. There are several reasons for this. In the first place it keeps goods free from dust and flies. In most stores many odd lines are left on the bottom ledge, and it is rather inattractive. This idea prevents that. "Then again," says Mr. Hooey, "this is where we show a lot of smaller goods, and if there was not this glass covering there would be many articles picked up by customers who have such a habit. We want to get these goods out where customers can see them, but we don't want all the profit taken off with stolen goods."

Each section is used to display a certain class of goods. In the first one is tea, then comes extract of beef, toilet soaps, jellies and gelatine, cocoa and chocolate, etc. Thus the customer's attention is concentrated on one line at a time while clerks know exactly where to get any article required.

"You have to get the goods out where people will see and inquire about them," says Mr. Hooey. "That is one of the things that the grocer has to see to."

Customer's Mind in Receptive Mood.

He believes that when a customer enters the store, her mind is not made up as to exactly what she is going to buy. She knows she wants certain goods, but she will frequently buy other articles.

This store always keeps a few lines on the main counter which may be introduced to customers. For instance on one day recently samples of orangeade, concentrated coffee, canned soup, and olives were on the counter and many sales were made. These are, however, frequently changed so as to have something different to show customers each time they come in.

"Even when no effort is put forth to talk these lines to customers," says Mr. Hooey, "this method sells them. People pick them up, enquire about them and very soon are buying."

Increases Jam and Pickle Sales.

A big trade has been built up in a certain brand of jams, and one of pickles. The method which Mr. Hooey used was by prominent display, putting them out on the counter where people would ask about them and by introducing them to customers. The pushing of these brands demonstrates that the grocer can sell the goods he wants to. In fact Mr. Hooey believes firmly that the grocer can sell the brand of goods he desires. He demonstrates this in his own case. Even when customers inquire for other brands, he finds he can sell them the one he handles. He believes in the quality and his recommendation does the rest.

Must Get Behind Many Lines.

Mr. Hooey struck the nail on the head when he declared that "money in business is not made by devoting attention to one line, but by pushing several lines strongly. One line will not make money for you. It is the combining of several that does it."

Specializes on Tobacco, Etc.

For instance, this store has built up a big trade in cigars, cigarettes, pipes and tobaccos. They believe it is a good line to handle in the grocery store. They believe these goods sell themselves when properly displayed. This part has certainly been looked after well. The department is right at the front. A show case at front contains pipes. Another one shows cigars, while a glass front case behind the counter shows all lines of taboccos.

Brushes and Clothes Lines Well Displayed.

Then again such lines as clothes lines, whisks, furniture brushes, stove brushes, etc., are shown at front, being hung in clusters on front of counter.

Brooms, long-handled brooms for ceiling work and wash boards are also given a prominent position.

Sign on Store Sells Salt.

Salt is another line in which an appreciable trade has been worked up. Perhaps one of the things that has helped trade in this line is a simple little sign "salt," tacked on the side of the store. The Hooey store is next to the post office, and the farmer in getting his mail is always reminded of his salt needs. Special efforts are now being put behind salt. Farmers will soon be killing hogs and salting them down for the winter, while most of them put in enough in the fall to last during the winter.

"Show the goods and talk them," is the motto of the Hooey store.

The Value of Show and Price Cards

How Results Can be Obtained From Their Use—A Show Card is a "Living Voice"—Some Hints as to Methods of Card Writing and Suggestions for Seasonable Grocery Cards.

Show and price cards have become important factors in the modern store. Walk through any large establishment and neat cards greet the eye on every side. Window displays fairly bristle with attention-compelling signs. People have acquired the habit of looking at the cards when information is desired.

The system has found its way into the grocery trade and good results are being obtained by dealers who use price and show cards. It has not yet become general, however. In a large percentage of stores no cards of any description are used. It is only too apparent that many dealers have not realized the value of the card as a business getter. They believe their stock can "speak for itself," and do not recognize that an attractive card can speak more loudly than the goods alone.

The work of the show card was most aptly summed up by R. R. Shuman, advertising manager of the Liquid Carbonic Co., Chicago, in the course of an illustrated talk on the subject. "Your work is vital," said Mr. Shuman, to an assembly of window trimmers and card writers, "creative, resultful. Your crisp sayings in windows or on the counters talk to the public at close range and talk to a purpose because they answer questions in advance. Your signs are not mere signs; they are salesmen; they hear without ears and they are voices—living voices—your voices—your persuasive personality wrought in a hundred garbs and stationed in windows or throughout the store."

The show card is so certain to bring results that the grocer should be prepared to lay out a certain amount of money to that end. An appropriation should be made for show cards as well as for advertising and window displays. The amount will, of course, be small. The clerk who is preparing the cards needs proper equipment and material to enable him to turn out good work, and this should be provided for just as surely as a certain amount is set aside to cover newspaper advertising.

Got Splendid Results.

It is hardly necessary to go into the question of results. Those who make the policy of suppressing prices a general one to apply to all phases of their business are becoming fewer all the time. It will be interesting, however, to quote the experience of one dealer, who is a recent convert to the card system:

"I have a clerk who has a natural genius for lettering and drawing and that sort of thing," he explained. "He was always after me to give him a chance at card writing, but I was afraid of it. My opposition cuts prices recklessly and also uses price cards . What chance would I have if the cards in my window tagged goods at a higher price than the same articles were offered around the corner?

"That was the way I used to look at it. Finally I decided to try it out. Fred—the clerk—went at the task with great eagerness and turned out a number of cards that would have been a credit to a professional sign writer. He wasn't content with mere lettering but gave each card a design or drawing suitable to the goods it was to accompany. Some of his drawings were of the cartoon variety. One card which was intended for carvers, showed a chef busily engaged in carving up a plump turkey. We put this in a window display of cutlery and the sale of carving sets which resulted served to convince me that show cards were business getters. We sold eight sets in a few days. The funny part of it was that my opposition was also showing carvers. His stock was of cheaper quality and the price he placed was lower than what we asked, but this did not hurt our sales one bit. After that I told Fred to go as far as he liked and we have been using show and price cards ever since—and getting results."

Some Hints on Style.

A card should as far as possible be inkeeping with the variety of goods it is intended to advertise. Thus a card intended for a display of canned goods should vary widely in style of lettering and ornamentation from the kind that the milliner, for instance, would use. The prevailing style in groceries should be simple with bold lettering. In certain lines, such as confectionery, tea, coffee, etc., a more ornate style will be in order.

For window display purposes there is a call for two distinct kinds of cards. There are two basic classes of windows, —the bargain window that appeals to cupidity and the tone or style window that appeals to vanity in some, to common sense in others. Thus a display which is made up of a variety of articles, which are being cleared out at special prices, will appeal to bargain hunters and to people who need a certain article but do not feel inclined to pay a high price. Windows of this kind should bristle with price cards. Nothing elaborate is required. State the price in unmistakable figures and the cupidity, or the necessity, of the buying public will do the rest. In the tone window, only goods of the very best quality are shown. Thus a display of olives, meats and preserves in glass, etc., will appeal to the people who want the best. Cards for such a display should be prepared with more care. Stating the price is not always advisable where only the highest priced goods are shown.

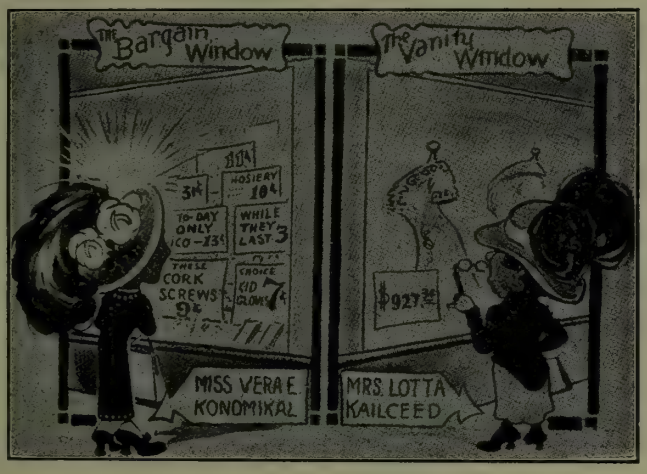
Use Lithographs.

Some card writers are inclined to attempt nothing but the most stereotyped variety of work because they feel that they lack artistic skill. The experience of one clerk is worth quoting in this connection. Recognizing that illustrations help to tone up show cards he frequently made up artistic backgrounds by clipping out lithographs, and magazine and catalogue illustrations. If a card for coffee were desired, he would select an illustration or two of suitable size, close clip them and paste them on his card. By carrying his lettering over the illustrations wherever necessary, he took away the detached appearance from the illustrations. His cards when not viewed at too close a range appeared to have been the work of a very clever artist.



A cartoon illustrating the two basic types of windows—the bargain and the tone window.

Wording of Cards.

Considerable attention should be paid to the wording of cards. Pick out the strongest argument you have for the goods in question and play it up.

For instance, at the present time fresh meats are high. What more potent argument could be advanced, therefore, than the saving qualities of say pork and beans.

A card to that effect would help to create interest in a display of pork and beans.

A strong argument, which applies to a large variety of groceries is the saving of labor. It appeals to the housewife for the day is long past when women accepted drudgery as inevitable. Cards for cooked meats, pork and beans, quick puddings, jelly powders, etc., should assist sales if this feature is brought out prominently. For instance:

ELIMINATE LABOR.

"Why cook over a hot stove when you can get such meats as these."

With the necessary changes this card would do for any of the labor-saving articles which are offered in the grocery store.

Cards should be seasonable. They should treat each article in manner suggested by the exigencies of the present moment.

Must Be Fresh.

A man who has given considerable thought to the subject of card writing, gives the following advice:

Keep the cards fresh. An old card attracts no attention.

Do not say too much. A few words are more effective than too many. Get to the point.

Adopt a simple and dignified type of lettering for most cards. A little variety will not hurt, however.

After finishing a piece of work, do not neglect the brushes. The frequent necessity for new brushes will run up expenses too high. Keep them clean and in good shape.

Remember that Windows Serve Double Purpose

Perhaps originally the mission of the window in the store was merely to admit light to the interior. That is not its mission to-day, at least not by real business men. However, the manner in which a good many windows are trimmed would have a tendency to lead us to believe that the old purpose still holds good, were it not for the manner in which some of the worst are bedecked with a coating of dirt, which removes them from the rank of light dispensers or at least reduces them to mighty poor ones.

"Oh! I have only a small display window. There is no use in trying to trim it."

This was the excuse offered by a grocer on a fairly prominent street in a city when asked why he did not give more attention to his window. It certainly was rather small, but that was by no means the worst feature of it. Much worse was its neglected and far from attractive appearance. Instead of attracting customers as should be its purpose, it could not help but repel them.

How different was the view of another merchant who resides in a small town. His window was small too, in fact smaller than the one referred to. Naturally comparisons would be drawn. This one was neatly and nicely trimmed, and while it was not large enough to carry out any big, definite display idea, nevertheless it impressed one with the idea that an attractive interior and goods could be looked for.

"I realize that the window is small," said the dealer, "and I would like very much if it were larger. However, just because I am handicapped somewhat in this way is no reason why I should give up in despair. I find that even that sized window properly dressed will sell goods. At any rate, it gives the passer-by an idea of what is sold inside. He knows I am a grocer. If my window is neat and clean, it will lead him to believe that the interior is the same and that goods are handled in a sanitary manner. I consider even my small window as valuable."

Thus it is shown how much better results may be obtained by a progressive grocer, even under handicapped conditions.

Trade Winning Christmas Advertisements

Examples of Some Splendid Copy From Three Good Canadian Retail Grocery Ad. Writers—A Prize Winner In Competition—Essential Points To Watch In Writing A Business-Getting Advertisement.

A large part of the success of any Fall and Christmas selling campaign lies in letting the public know the goods in stock, the chief features about them and their price. This can be accomplished by few better and cheaper methods than advertising through the local paper. The cheaper does this method become, the more effectively the advertisements are written, and that is the point with which we have to deal in this article.

No one will dispute the power of a strong advertisement to make sales unless it be someone who has never given it a trial. A good advertisement, like a good window or a good personal talk, will create more business with old customers as well as new business from somebody else's customers.

Must Be Written and Set Well.

To make the advertisement effective and to have it set up attractively in the office of the newspaper, should be the aim of every retail advertiser. An effective advertisement is one that by its attractiveness gets attention; by its interesting character, it induces one to read it and lastly, and of greatest importance, by its convincing nature it compels action on the part of the reader to purchase.

A Prize Winning Ad.

Let us take a careful look at these illustrations. The advertisement of the W. H. Stone Co., of Winnipeg, Man., was the winner of The Canadian Grocer's Christmas Ad-writing contest of 1911. The original was 9 x 8½ inches in dimensions. It is attractive because of its simplicity and therefore stands every chance of being looked at. Whether or not the introduction is as strong as it might be, is possibly a debateable question, but nevertheless it is out of the ordinary and would appeal to a great many people. Some critics may say it is getting away from business, but be that as it may, the second paragraph is certainly a trade winner. See how it reads:—

"We have in stock to-day the brightest, cleanest, most dainty assortment of good things to eat that any one could desire, displayed in the most sanitary and attractive fashion. No old stock, no untidy corners. Everything just as you like it in your own home. As a climax, we will show you, too, that our prices are most reasonable."

This is a most convincing talk and is bound to lead those who read it on to the lists and prices.

Divisions Neatly Made.

Care should usually be taken in introducing illustrations into retail grocers' advertisements. Here, however, is an appropriate one—the turkey. The advertisement is nicely divided into four sections, the talks being practically confined to seasonable Christmas lines, such as fowl, dessert dainties, plum pudding, he refers to the sanitary condition of the store.

A Full-Page Grocery Ad.

Forsyth, Jr., Dartmouth, N. S., always writes strong newspaper advertisements. His advertisement as shown here originally covered a full page in the Dartmouth newspaper and probably stands alone in point of size as an exclusive grocery advertisement. The layout could scarcely be improved upon. The introduction is about the proper length and the five specials are shown to oranges and other fruits, and confectionery. In each case something of interest is told. That is what creates a desire on the part of the reader to purchase, and therefore such an advertisement is effective. The more effective it is, the less expensive it becomes. In fact, the so-called "expense" is turned into an investment if the advertisement is a good one. It will also be noted that the writer of the W. H. Stone copy features a good point when advantage in panels in the four corners and centre.

Positve Statements Desirable.

Some advertising men might claim that the first line of the introduction is weak by being somewhat obscure. It may also be argued that the last sentence of the introduction, "Try doing your shopping in Dartmouth this year as an experiment," is admitting that in the past some people have not shopped in Dartmouth. Therefore, it indirectly or negatively suggests to those who have been buying at home that others have bought elsewhere for some reason or other.

Well written advertisement from a Sudbury, Ont., paper. Introduction is perhaps a little too long.

Probably a statement reading: "Christmas shoppers at this store are not experimenting, they get best value for their money," would dispel such ideas as above expressed, assuming that the ideas existed.

Talks on Particular Goods.

Apart from this, the advertisement is a strong one, a striking feature being the talks about the various lines advertised. For instance, note what is said about sugar: "PURE CANE SUGAR—As well try to have Christmas without Santa Claus as without Pure Refined Cane Sugar, per pound, .07, etc." Again notice the bright information about currants: "CURRANTS — Perfectly Cleaned Currants, right ready for the cake, pudding or Mince Meat, packed where grown in one pound packages, per pound, 10c."

That is the sort of advertising that pays handsomely. It is an investment and not an expense. Forsyth, Jr., winds up all his copy by the strong assertion —"The man who makes good his ads."

Use Care With Introduction.

Another good Christmas advertisement submitted for The Grocer's 1911 competition was that of The Taylor store, Sudbury, Ont. The original of this was the full length of the newspaper page and two columns in width. " 'TIS CHRISTMAS TIME" is a fairly good heading for a seasonable advertisement. Probably one appealing more to business would have been stronger, such as: "The Choicest Christmas Goods" or "The Choicest Goods From Many Lands." This would possibly insure it being read by more people.

Beware of Too Long an Introduction.

It might also be contended by some ad. critics that the writer does not get down to his goods soon enough. Would the average person read the long introduction? Some will, of course, but after a dealer has convinced a woman that he has some fine, quality Christmas lines and that the goods will give her entire satisfaction, he should not delay talking up special articles, such as the Taylor store has done.

The introduction should invariably be a strong, brief, convincing statement that immediately gets the confidence of the reader. Once that has been secured efforts should be confined to talks on particular goods.

The Taylor advertisement is well laid out, and the printer has set it carefully. A feature is the bold type used for naming the goods and prices. The same favorable criticism is due this advertisement as the others in connection with giving interesting talks about individual lines.

On the whole, three splendid Christmas advertisements have been reproduced, and every dealer at all interested in advertising should give them his best attention.

Editorial Note. — Announcement of The Grocer's 1912 Christmas ad.-writing contest will be seen on another page of this issue.

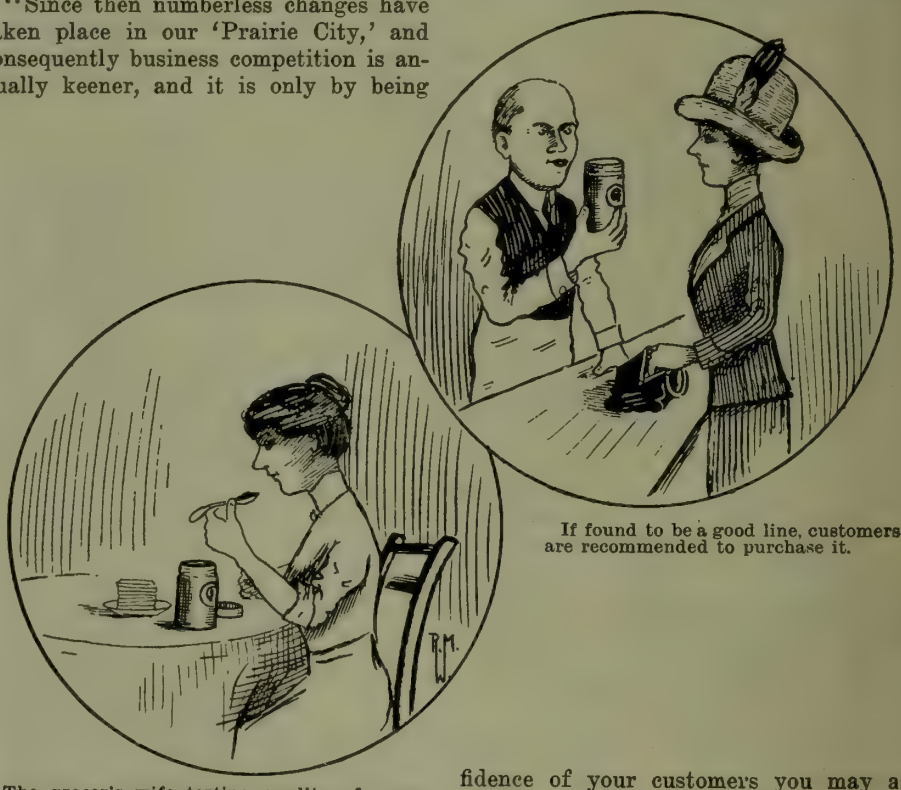
Any merchant twenty years in business in Winnipeg has seen considerable development in the Canadian West, and the passing through of a great many people.

"It was twenty years ago," stated S. Elliot & Co., Main Street, of that city, "that this business was founded.

"Since then numberless changes have taken place in our 'Prairie City,' and consequently business competition is annually keener, and it is only by being up-to-date in all your methods, fixtures, etc., that you can possibly cope with extra demand.



If found to be a good line, customers are recommended to purchase it.

The grocer's wife testing quality of a new line of goods.

"Fruit is the line to which we give special attention at this period of the year. A good window display, prominent price cards to invite the would-be purchaser indoors, silent salesmen attractively displaying seasonable goods, and a small, reasonable profit, combined with a quick turnover and fruit is then a really good line."

Mr. Elliott never recommends any article to a customer unless he is personally certain it is strictly O.K.

"Beginners should take note of this and avoid any lines which bid fair to allow them 'to get-rich-quick,' as once you introduce any inferior articles, and by a little push sell them at top price, on arriving home your customer is dissatisfied with her purchase and consequently doubts your next endeavor to sell her possibly a really good line. Once you lose the good will and confidence of your customers you may as well close the store.

"Should any new line of goods," states Mr. Elliott, "appear on the market, and be widely advertised and boomed, we buy a small supply. The 'Old Lady' gives it a fair trial. Should it prove in every way satisfactory, then I can introduce that line to any customer, confident of it being all she desires. On the other hand, should the article fall short of its advertised qualifications, I don't handle it."

Mr. Elliott added that "The Canadian Grocer is greatly appreciated in the store, its numerous 'dos and don'ts' being the cause of many little interesting debates, and we are all eagerly looking forward to the arrival of your Fall Campaign Number."

Co-operative Delivery System in Galt

Merchants Find it Operates More Cheaply Than Individual Deliveries—One Grocer Estimes That it Costs Him $8 to Deliver $200 Worth of Goods or Four Per Cent. on Half His Turnover—Is Conducted by a Separate Company.

Co-operative delivery has been adopted by merchants in several Canadian towns in recent years. The object has of course been the reduction of delivery expenses, for it is natural that under one system the cost of total operation should be lowered. The only other question is satisfaction to customers.

There has been the objection offered in some towns, but by no means in all, that the management entails considerable trouble or that it is not likely to be properly managed. In Galt, Ont., is a co-operative delivery and there seems to be no objection on this score. The delivery there is not co-operative in the sense that all merchants have combined, for the system is managed by one firm and that one separate altogether from the merchants. It is called the Merchants Delivery and is in reality what might be called a cartage business arranged to serve the interests of the merchants so that they may dispense with their own delivery. There are separate dry goods and grocery sections to the business.

The grocery section is patronized by six grocers. There are set hours for delivery, namely, 9.00 a.m., 10.30 a.m., 3.00 p.m., and 5.00 p.m. On Saturday there are two extra deliveries at 7.00 and 9.00 o'clock in the evening so as to care for the week-end business.

That co-operative delivery means a reduction in cost from that where each merchant conducts his own, is indicated by the figures submitted by one grocer in Galt. The contracts are made yearly with each of the merchants and the amount is of course based on the amount of delivery which each firm requires. This can only be arrived at approximately as the amount may vary considerably during the year.

Costs One Dealer $8.00 Weekly.

This particular merchant pays $8.00 per week for delivery| Two years ago when he had a much smaller business and maintained his own delivery outfit, he figured that it cost him $10.00 per week for delivering expenses. This would mean that in spite of the fact that he is selling more goods, the co-operative delivery costs less. This dealer does a business of about $400 a week, and over half of the goods, he estimates, are delivered. This would mean that it costs him $8.00 to deliver somewhere over $200 worth of goods.

"We have no complaint," he said recently, "from people wanting goods at other than the set hours for delivering. We have cards about the store showing the hours and people know when they order goods when they may expect to receive them. When we had our own delivery, customers expected us to accommodate them at all hours, but now they don't look for it."

Which is Better Plan?

Whether it is advisable that merchants or the separate company operate the system is a question. The company no doubt makes a profit which the merchants might save, but on the other hand they do not have to worry over complaints due to the delivery company's errors. They can put the complaints up to the company and see that they live up to their contract.

Grocer Who Seeks "Far From Home Trade"

Montreal Dealer Only Two Years in Business—No Previous Grocery Experience —Establishes Special Deliveries—Can Deliver to all Parts at a Profit—Yet Has Only One Rig to do the Whole Lot—No Cutter of Prices.

It has often been argued by many successful retailers, that once a customer moves to any distance from a locality, or a dealer himself seeks a stand decidedly remote from the homes of his most scattered patrons, it is scarcely worth while trying to retain former accounts. As cost of delivery would more than eat up profits. But there are exceptions to every rule and here is one.

Taylor & Peacock, doing business in a remote part of Point St. Charles, a south-western suburb of Montreal, have their own views on the subject, Mr. Peacock, in particular, being decidedly strong in his adherence to the policy —"Systematize and go after trade, no matter how distant."

Customer Makes Long Move.

It happened that one of his customers moved from his immediate seat of operation to take up residence in the very north of the city, the distance need not be mentioned, but suffice it to say that the majority of dealers would consider it fool-hardy to ever deliver a fairly large order there, as the absence of the rig would naturally tend to delay other orders for nearer customers. In short, the less enterprising man would think "a bird in the hand better than two in the bush," and thus not cater to chance.

Not so Mr. Peacock. He soon conceived a plan for not only having the bird in hand, but also securing the two in the bush (perhaps he is more acquainted with the feathered tribe as his name would indicate), and that plan boiled down simply meant this—"the old customer will introduce me to other residents nearby and by catering to them satisfactorily will very soon build up an exceptionally strong 'special delivery' business."

Success in Spite of Competition.

And he did it. His keenness in supplying only the best quality goods at the right price, neatly packed, absolutely free from dust, dampness, etc., resulted in the opening of a number of valuable accounts, and remember there was no cut rate offered as an inducement. Not at all. "No, I do not cut prices. If any customer tells me that she is getting any commodity at Mr. Blank's at such a price, well, I do not dispute the statement, but deliver at the same amount. Of course, if I find the other fellow cutting in order to confine my operations to my own locality, then I show him that two can play the same game, and he soon decides to follow a 'laissez faire' policy."

Good Chances for Salesmanship.

After meeting a number of families in the north and west ends, Peacock and Taylor were able to set separate days for delivery in each district and educated their outside clientele to have their requirements registered at store for shipment at a given hour, and very few hitches have been experienced. But, of course, this firm does not get the exclusive patronage of the large number of housewives, because there is always a need for something else prior to delivery of goods ordered. The nearest dealer usually gets the rush order, that is to say he gets transient trade, instead of regular, which one might think was properly his.

Do Not Neglect Others.

"No, the mere fact that we have only one horse and that I deliver three days a week outside of Point St. Charles does not interfere at all with the attention others deserve. We are just as anxious to serve them well, too. And we do it." All orders for special outside deliveries are filled with the utmost despatch the day before shipment, and regular visitors, though always impressed with busy nature of store, are attended to eagerly.

"When any order calls for immediate attention, a special messenger is sent along and at the same time given another parcel which, though not so urgent, will create a feeling of satisfaction by its early arrival at the home. So again, to return to the bird matter, 'two birds are killed with the one stone.'"

Little Previous Experience.

It might be mentioned here that Mr. Peacock up to two years ago, had no grocery experience ,having been connected with one of Canada's largest shirt and collar manufacturers as shipper, but as soon as he was invited to take a share in the business by a relative who was retiring and was unwilling to have anyone outside of the family in control, he soon decided to forsake the goods for "exterior use only," and devote his entire attention to those for the "inner man." His investment has turned out right, too.

Efficiency in the Automobile Deliverer

Dealer Who Has Tested the Auto Recommends it on Condition That System be Used in Its Care—The Style Suggested Where Winters Are Cold and Snow Deep—Considerable Labor Eliminated.

By Henry Johnson Jr.

Ontario, Sept., 19 1912

Mr. Henry Johnson Jr.,

Care Canadian Grocer,

Sir:—I have been a constant reader of the Canadian Grocer for the last 25 years. I see in the last issue you give an article on auto delivery. Would you please give me the name of the firm you bought from and if you think they make as good a car for the work as there is.

Yours truly ————

This man sent a stamped envelope and reply was promptly forwarded giving name of concern from whom I bought first two machines and, after a years' trial, another one.

Work Under Definite System.

I cannot, however, be too emphatic in stating that you will derive no profit or satisfaction from any auto you may buy unless you operate under some definite system of daily care of the machine. I have told you what I have discovered in this connection and what I do now to avoid trouble in the operation of the cars. Such system must be mapped out and then the boys must be kept to it not one day, nor one week, nor one month; but each and every day. The daily work must be gone through with, just as laid out in the schedule—no more and no less.

Also, it does not do to imagine that anything can be done haphazard nor by fits and starts. Often the boys "feel just right" and are inclined to do a great deal—especially on some fine, bright morning. That must not be allowed to happen. Nor must any neglect be permitted to creep in. Each day must have its allotted tasks—the machines must have their daily care just as a horse must have his daily feed and currying; and this must be done just as carefully and completely on a dull, depressing day as on any other day.

System, system, system; let that be your watchword. Then autos will work out with you. Otherwise neither an $850 car nor a $6,000 car will do you any good. Both can be reduced to junk about as readily and completely, though not quite irremediably, in a day as a horse can be foundered.

Help Must Have Brains.

A completely "fool-proof" machine has not yet been evolved, nor do we want one. No help that has no head is any use to any of us. But we want to have as few dangers hanging over us as possible; hence some of the points of my cars may be dwelt upon. These points appealed to me very strongly—nor have I been disappointed in them.

1. I do business in a cold climate. I did not want cars with liquid cooled engines, because I knew that my boys would allow the radiators to freeze no matter what I might do. The engines are air-cooled and experience proves that they keep cool enough in summer and that the radiation is as complete in winter that it is well, on severe days, not to allow the engine to stop very frequently. Some days last winter the engines were started at 8 a.m. and not stopped until 6 p. m. That I felt was a severe test and yet the cars stood up under it.

2. I chose a high-wheeled type of car to get through snow and here again I got what I had looked for. The cars were not stalled because of snow drifts, though they were some high, if you recall.

How Trouble Arose.

Going back for a moment to the question of system. I want to say that, in putting on my latest car, I got a very good boy to run it; that is, he is conscientious, earnest, industrious and wants to make good. No work and no devotion to his tasks has proven too much to ask of him. But he had some trouble with the best car we had after he had run it only a little over a week. This was not for want of work nor desire to do right, but it was for want of observance of the schedule. Being new he did not appreciate the need for system invariably followed out; but after he had experienced a stalled car two or three times, he got next to the idea and since that time we have had no trouble.

Eliminated a Lot of Labor.

Again, going back in review of the work with the one who helped me plan the schedule, he enthusiastically endorsed me when I pointed out to him that there was now no Sunday work, nor night work, nor, in fact, half the hard care and labor that there had been when there was no system at all.

A big part of it must be head work; and the boss cannot dodge his share. But if that head work be given, autos, of the right type, are all right.

FOOD VALUE OF CHOCOLATE.

Chocolate is a good sustaining food, sweetmeat and stimulant, containing as it does from 27 to 60 per cent. of sugar, 20 to 45 per cent. of fat, 2 to 3 per cent. of mineral matter and about 0.75 per cent. of theobromine. A fair meal for an invalid may be made of a pint of milk and 4 ozs. of chocolate, which yield about 800 calories. Notwithstanding the disparaging things which have been said recently about chocolate, practical experience has decided the value of the well-made article. It contains all the elements necessary for a food; fat, carbohydrates, proteins and mineral salts, including a notable proportion of potassium phosphate. On account of its staying powers and nutritive properties it has been largely used in army manoeuvres and other cases where exceptional demands are made upon the muscular, nervous and mental energies, such as expedition to the Polar regions.

Halifax Grocery Business 52 Years Old

Founded in 1860 and Advanced With the Times—Quality of Goods Sold and Cleanliness of Store Given First Attention—Orders are Filled From Stock Room—Many Modern Improvements.

The accompanying illustration is that of the interior of Dillon Bros. grocery store in Halifax, N. S. The name of Dillon has been before the public of Halifax for over half a century.

Patrick Dillon began the business on Sackville Street about 1860, in a large brick building, No. 75. About 1876 the business increased so that he purchased the building, No. 80, across the street, and the grocery business was removed there. In 1894 the property at No. 76 Sackville Street was purchased and used as a warehouse. These old buildings were not large enough to accommodate the constantly increasing business, and in 1896 the modern brick store and warehouses were built.

Quality has always been paramount in this establishment and continues to be so. D. C. Woods, the present owner, had been employed by Dillon Bros. since 1875 until about seven years ago, when he bought the business. The name being so well established, Mr. Woods still holds to the old firm of Dillon Bros. Mr. Woods, according to different traveling salesmen, has one of the most up-to-date grocery stores in Eastern Canada.

In the photo can be seen a large bacon slicer, a modern addition for facility in handling the provision department. Also the latest improved computing scale and computing cheese cutting machine.

The Shelf Arrangement.

Mr. Woods has a novel plan in regard to shelf arrangement in his store. The shelves can be seen(as they appear in this photo) any day in the week in any week of the year. The clerks are not allowed to take any goods off these shelves except to replace them with fresh goods. There is a stock room just back of the store, and all orders are filled with goods from the stock room.

The store is heated with hot water radiators and is electric lighted. It has metal ceilings and marble top counters. All biscuits, crystalized fruits, prunes, apricots, etc., are under glass.

Cleanliness and quality are two mottoes strictly adhered to in this store. The firm maintain that customers appreciate a store which is clean and sanitary, and at the same time bright and attractive. Mr. Woods works to this end, and a glance at the illustration indicates that his energies are well expended.

Now that the Christmas trade will soon be looked forward to, special consideration will be given to the quality of the goods bought and offered for sale.

Far Northern Store With Modern Methods

Dealer Who Runs Store a Hundred and Fifty Miles North of Ottawa Has Window Displays That Excel Many in Large Cities—Some of His Ideas on Increasing Sales—Makes His Store and Surroundings so Attractive That Lumbermen Going Into the North Leave off Purchasing Till His Place of Business is Reached.

If there is any story which arouses one's admiration, it is that of the pioneer who enters the uncut forest, and in spite of trials and tribulations which beset his way, clears for himself a goodly acreage of land and establishes a home.

Of equal interest is the merchant who forges his way into an unsettled district in advance of the railway and other landmarks of civilization and there establishes a substantial business. This interest and admiration is even much greater when a merchant is found who not only has a good business but a particularly fine store and who maintains attractive window displays rivalling some of the best in the large towns.

Bright Store in the North.

Such a case is rather infrequent and for this reason, the store and business of Thos. Marion & Co., of Rapids Des Joachings, Ont., is particularly interesting. Situated 150 miles north of Ottawa and 50 miles north of Pembroke, seven miles from the nearest railway station and being the store farthest north in the Demoine District, one would hardly look for an establishment of attractive appearance or window displays which are regularly looked after and which are exceedingly attractive.

This, however, Mr. Marion can pride himself on. He was truly a pioneer for he established himself at Rapids Des Joachings 14 years ago. Although that village can only boast of a population of about 300 people, the large district surrounding which this store has to draw from, makes a big business possible.

Turnover Almost Doubled.

To the south, it is seven miles to the nearest village, Moore Lake. On the east and west he has ten and twelve miles respectively to draw customers, while extending northward into a vast timber district, he has a stretch of 65 miles for which he is the nereast supply house. His, is a general store business and with this extensive territory, he has been able to increase a turnover which at first hardly reached the $20,000mark into one exceeding $34,000 annually. He carries a stock averaging around $15,000 and particular attention is given to the grocery end of the business.

It is a big lumbering district and the lumberman has generally a pretty healthy appetite so that the amount of food consumed in that district reaches large proportions.

One Sale Amounts to $800.

Quite often there are large purchases at one time for the man betaking himself into the woods does not figure on many excursions to town. For instance just a few days before Mr. Marion was interviewed by The Canadian Grocer, a sale of $800 worth of goods was made to one customer.

A new store has been erected by the firm in the past year and it is certainly a creditable establishment for a village so far removed from the larger centres. It is a one-storey structure of cement 60 x 30 feet with two excellent show windows, an extensive cement cellar for storing of goods as well as a front cement platform. In its construction, the aim was to have a store with the departments most conveniently arranged, with a layout that would allow of the most advantageous display of goods, and bright and light enough to prove attractive to customers and show goods up to the best advantage. This has been accomplished by having the store 18 feet high, and the installation of two large plate glass windows surmounted by a series of Dutch panes as well as two windows along each side of the store. These light the store well during the day while at night through a gasoline system of lighting as much as 4,000 candle-power of illumination, if required, is available.

Careful Attention to Windows.

As stated before the store has two excellent show windows fitted with a closed-in back. However, the important feature in connection with these windows is the careful manner in which they are cared for and the good displays put in which attracted no little attention. Among the lines shown were tubs, brushes, soaps, clothes pins, etc. The feature which attracted attention was a clothes line on which was hung miniature baby underwear.

Mr. Marion states that his windows create a good deal of business. Up in this remote district with really little competition, one might think that good displays were not required, as the merchant would get the business anyway. This is not the way Mr. Marion looks at it.

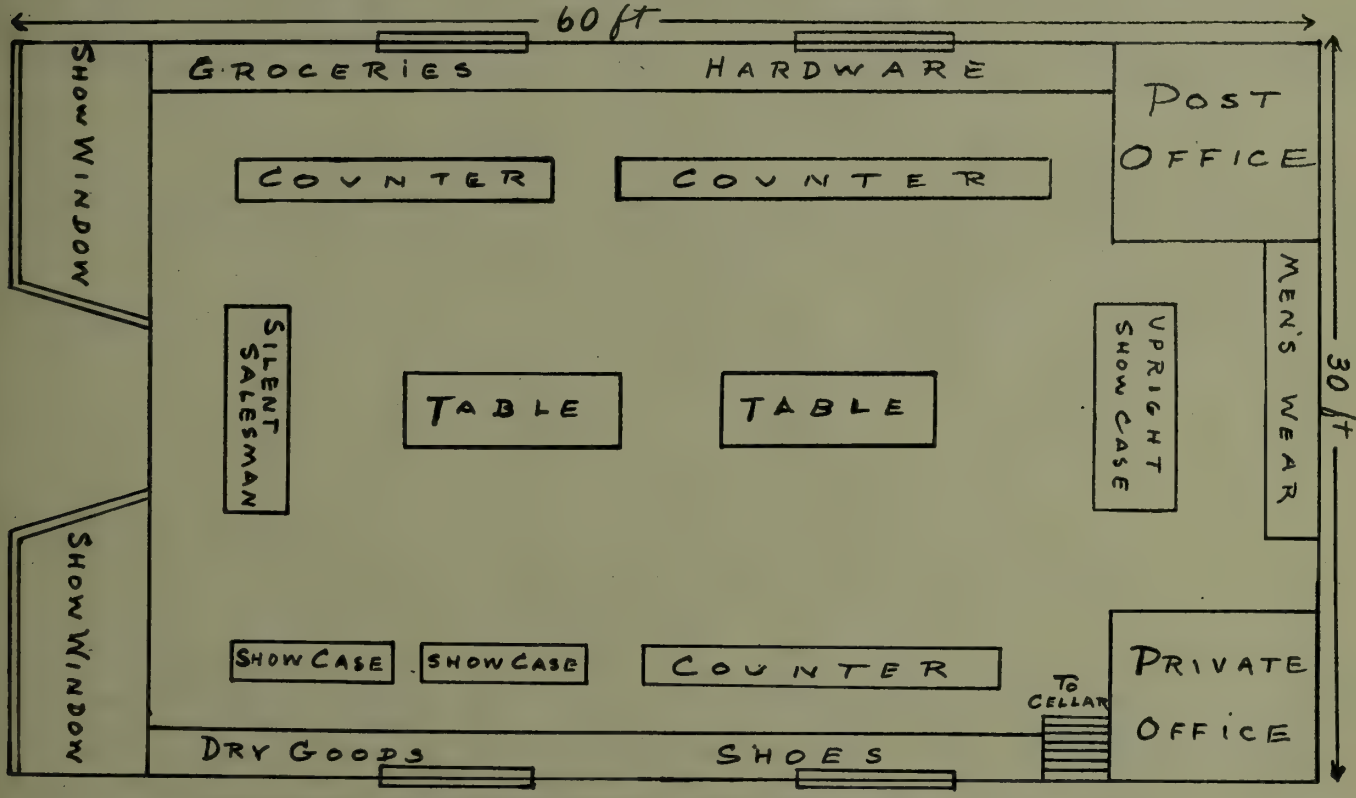
"There is always a chance to increase the sale of goods," he says. "If goods are properly displayed, people will buy more than they otherwise would."

Makes Plans Ahead.

Mr. Marion takes pride in keeping crockery which is at present stored in the cellar.

Two Thousand Pass in a Year.

There is a special reason for having a store of nice appearance. Mr. Marion figures that about 2,000 transients pass the store annually on their way northward to the lumbering district. Now, a bright store with good displays is most likely to impress people and induce purchases. Knowing of this attractive store where they can get anything they want, people going into the north country delay their purchases until they reach this, the purchasing point farthest north. If it were a dilapidated store of ill-kept appearance people would be inclined to think that they could not get what they wanted and would accordingly purchase their supplies farther south.



Plan of general store of Mr. Marion, showing how he has divided off the various departments.

which are arranged. One is devoted to groceries and a sample of the display is shown in the accompanying photographs. These are two views of the same display taken from different angles.

The floor of the window is covered with green. On the plates at the front are shown different varieties of cereals backed by a row of canned goods. Arranged on steps behind are pickles, jams, salmon, canned vegetables and catsup. The step display is flanked on each side by a case of oranges, nicely trimmed with greens while farther out are dried fruits. The window is arranged neatly and symmetrically and presents an attractive appearance.

A House Cleaning Display.

Not long ago, a "wash" window was his windows looking attractive. In fact, he makes them a hobby and devotes much of his spare time to their arrangement. He arranges many of his grocery display fixtures himself. He figures out in his mind what he wants for a certain display. He then gets the saw and hammer and sets to work to construct it. He also gives a good deal of attention to interior display which combined with plenty of light in the store helps the sale of goods considerably.

A glance at the accompanying photograph indicates a double display window. This is not so yet, but soon. In the photograph one really looks into the cellar but Mr. Marion intends that this shall be arranged for the display of Look's After the King's Mail.

Mr. Marion is postmaster and this naturally attracts a good many people to the store and good displays induce them to buy. The post office is situated at the rear of the store so that people have to pass through a line of tempting displays to get their mail. Another way of attracting customers is by cashing the time checks which the lumber companies issue to their employes.

Goods Hauled Seven Miles.

The nearest railway station to Rapids Des Joachings is Moore Lake, seven miles away and goods have to be hauled this distance. Mr. Marion goes to Pembroke once a month to do his banking and look after purchases of goods.

Important Uses of Cost Book in Buying

The Loose Leaf System Evolved by a Hamilton Grocer to Supply Him With Buying Knowledge When Travelers Call—Knows Time, Quantity, Invoice Price, Freight, From Whom Bought, Etc.—Keeps Him Closely in Touch With Goods and Prices—Has Also a Sales Book to Keep Track of Each Day's Sales.

No small part of the work of the proprietor or manager of the store is determining the selling price of every article placed on sale. The selling price must be one that will allow a fair profit clear of all costs in laying it down in the store. Otherwise the business will be one of short duration.

Before deciding on the sales price a natural piece of labor is the determination of that total cost, and just here is where a great many show neglect. There are too many, and particularly among new men in the trade, who consider the "cost" of an article the same as the invoice cost." This is far from correct and leads many a merchant on to failure.

It must be distinctly understood that if an article is bought for $1 and sold at $1.20 the profit is not 20 cents nor 20 per cent. Onto that dollar must be added freight, its share of the general overhead operating expenses and interest on capital invested; and then sometimes before the money is received for it the dealer has to wait for weeks and months. In certain cases he doesn't receive his money at all.

Don't Neglect the Net Profit.

These facts indicate that every dealer should add considerable on to the invoice cost before reaching the selling price. Sufficient should be added to insure a fair profit after total cost is deducted from the sum received.

With these facts in view, the dealer should naturally know his cost. He stocks a great many different lines, too many to keep track of in his mind, so that some system should be evolved which will show at a glance the total cost of any article placed on sale. Unless this is known as nearly as possible, losses are bound to occur.

Value of a Cost Book.

Herewith is submitted for consideration a system evolved by A. G. Bain, of A. G. Bain & Co., Hamilton, Ont., for determining cost. Mr. Bain has a Cost Book in which he places from day to day receipts of all goods. As the cut shows, he enters the date, number of cases (or quantity), name of article, from whom received, gross cost, duty (if any), freight, net cost, cost each, and selling price of each.

It is evident from a glance at this that there is a great deal of valuable information available at a moment's notice. For instance, supposing a coffee salesman comes along to sell A. G. Bain & Co. some coffee. A price is quoted and there is some talk as to profit derived if sold at a certain price. Mr. Bain or Mr. Price, his partner, picks up the Cost Book, sees when coffee was last purchased and from whom, knows the quantity, gross and net cost and therefore is in a much better position to talk intelligently.

The same applies to every other article in the store. There is no old invoice to look up and no time lost in dickering over former price or quantity. The company know exactly what was purchased and when, and by determining what is now on hand have valuable information as to how the article is selling.

Uses Loose Leaf System.

The Cost Book is on the loose-leaf plan and was arranged by Mr. Bain himself on arriving at the conclusion that such information would be a great help. Being loose-leafed the book can be add- to when occasion arises. The articles purchased are arranged in alphabetical order to further supplement its handiness. The clerical work in keeping the Cost Book up to date is attended to by the office staff.

Comparisons From Sales Book.

To further keep him in touch with the daily work of the store, Mr. Bain has also a Sales Book which shows the amount of business done each day. At any time of the year, therefore, he knows exactly the sales up to date and can compare them with the corresponding period of any year in the past as well as daily, weekly and monthly. The value of having such knowledge at one's figger ends is evident. It keeps the firm closely in touch with the progress of the business, and plans can therefore be the better worked out towards increasing sales.

Business Blindness Disastrous.

Such books as these would be the makings of many a retail dealer who now is going blindly into buying and selling—and selling plenty of goods, too.

A merchant may have the idea that because sales are splendid, the business is going ahead rapidly, whereas the truth may be he is buying recklessly, paying too much for the goods, or not obtaining sufficient profit above total cost.

The only safe course to pursue is to KNOW where you are at. If such is the case, a dealer is not likely to buy carefully and to sell goods at a profit—two exceedingly important features in the growth of any business.

Preventing Complaints in Delivering Forms That a Retail Dealer Has Devised to Advise Customers of Absence of Any Goods—Useful For Instance When Some Line Asked For Doesn't Happen to be in Stock—Delivery Complaints a Big Leak to the Business—Causes Loss of Confidence.

There is plenty of scope in the grocery store for a person with a little initiative. He can put many schemes and plans into use which assist materially in increasing trade or allowing the carrying on of business with the least labor and trouble. J. Milton Cork, a grocer who has just moved into a new store on College St., Toronto, has adopted several wrinkles of value that will prove of interest and value to other merchants.

Reducing Complaints in Delivery.

His efforts have been along the lines of delivery with the idea of reducing the number of mistakes to a minimum and also to allow it to be conducted on a systematic basis. Delivery has proved the source of a great deal of trouble to many merchants. There are few who do not have some trouble, with frequent mistakes and accordingly complaints.

Mr. Cork realized that it is extremely detrimental to have any trouble with customers which may give them cause for complaint. To prevent mistakes in delivery he has adopted several ideas which assist considerably.

When Goods Are Not in Store.

In Figure I shown on this page is a copy of a "To follow" form which he has had printed in form similar in size to ordinary counter check book. Supposing an order has been left by a customer and is being sent out, but without a certain article which will not be in until next day. Now, the driver cannot remember to tell each such customer that certain articles will follow; and the customer, too, may be out. Mr. Cork figures that some system was necessary to alleviate trouble in such a case and he evolved the form as shown in Fig. I. This form is filled out and sent along with the regular sales-slip. The time when the additional lines are to follow are noted after the word "when." If these additional goods are not charged on the sales-slip, the word "Not" is written before line "charged on other slip."

This memorandum acquaints the customers with what goods are to follow and when. She is therefore apprised of the omission, if there is any, and will not think of going to another store to purchase the goods. A carbon copy of this slip is kept on file in the store and when the goods arrive they are sent out. If the word "not" is before the line "charged on other slip," it is of course necessary to send a bill out.

A Handy Reminder.

Figure No. 2 is the "wanted to complete order" form. There are frequently goods ordered which the store does not carry in stock. Even with an extensive stock, customers will occasionally order goods which have to be secured elsewhere. This form specifying the goods required is filled out and given to the driver who is expected to secure and deliver them. In case they are not delivered, the driver is requested to return the slip to order file with reason. Steps are then taken to secure the goods or if impossible, the customer is notified.

A "Bring Back" Slip.

Still another form used by the store in delivery is a "Bring Back" one. On this is listed any goods which are to be brought back from a customer's home. For instance, if a customer has received black tea in mistake for green, the green is sent up and a slip given to the driver to "Bring back from Mrs. Lee, ½ lb. black tea in exchange." A note on the slip reads: "Driver will leave slip with goods returned on order counter." This is so they may be checked up.

During the summer a considerable business is done by every grocer in fruits. Now when a customer picks out a certain basket of fruit, she wants to get that basket. It cannot be left to the memory or discretion of the driver to pick out the right baskets of fruit while delivering. If written on the basket, it is most times indistinct, or if readable, it frequently takes a good deal of time to decipher. This store in order to avoid any trouble, puts a tag on each basket as it is selected by customer. This is just an ordinary shipping tag on which is written customers name and address. Mr. Cork's name is on each tag, so that it is somewhat of a publicity advertisement.

Mistakes are prevented by this method, and it is the aim of every grocer to avoid mistakes. They cause complaints which are generally voiced to friends as well as to the merchant and this is extremely bad advertising for the store.

Fig. II. Slip showing the goods necessary to complete the order.

A somewhat new idea in the installation of store fronts. Display show case is placed in centre of doorway. This represents front of Kent & Brown Co.'s store, Moose Jaw, Sask.

Bright Store Front a Good Investment

Moose Jaw, Sask., Firm Have Something Out-of-the-Ordinary—A Show Case in Centre of Door-Way—Receding Windows Compel a Lengthy Attention to the Goods Shown—Light Windows Above the Awning.

"From the business viewpoint there does not appear to be anything but optimism in the local conditions if store front improvements count as evidence. Some other years may have seen a larger number of residences erected and more of a building boom but few years have seen such extensive overhauling and improvement of business premises. The list is a long one and reference has already been made to some of these improvements, but in general it may be said that local merchants are reaching the conclusion that the latest and most attractive is none too good for the town's rapid development."

The above extract from a Canadian newspaper contains an established truth. What follows tells of specific instances where certain merchants have improved the appearance of their store fronts; and where one finds many merchants in a town or city paying particular attention to that phase of the business, it is only natural to suppose those merchants are progressive. Not only that, but they are greatly assisting in the building up of a live town, because without live, progressive merchants the town is not going to be as progressive as it otherwise would.

Attracts Visitors Attention.

A visitor on going along the main street of a town is first struck by either the presence or absence of bright looking store-fronts, and on this condition he forms his first opinions of the place. In the same way does a passer-by form an impression of a particular store from the appearance of the front, and very often the front means the gain of a new customer.

In many a Canadian town and city merchants vie with one another in store-front arrangement. This is a good sign and it is bound to reflect to the credit of the place.

Western Store With Modern Front.

Note the store-front shown herewith. It is that of The Kent & Brown Co.'s store, (grocery department) Moose Jaw, Sask. This is a front which is unique in so far as grocery stores are concerned and immediately attracts attention. Why? Because it is out-of-the-ordinary and at the same time inviting.

If the store front is an index to the interior and the goods carried, then anyone would say that here we have a grocery store that SELLS quality goods. The show case in the centre of the entrance is frequently used by dry goods and fur stores in the larger centres, but it has seldom been seen in the grocery store connection. From the fact that it shows the goods to the passer-by more prominently than the window proper probably would, it is something that could well be emulated by others. An attractive display of goods with a neatly written show cards would undoubtedly create much new business. The Kent & Brown Co. certainly realize its value.

Windows Show Many Goods.

The long receding display windows are another feature of this front. Every time a buyer of groceries passes the store, her eye sees scarcely anything but groceries and therefore the dealer has a much better opportunity of making extra sales. If she enters she sees goods to right and left. Working on the well-founded principle that the more goods seen, the more there will be sold, such a store front is a valuable asset.

Light Enters Above Awning.

The lighting of the Kent & Brown store is given attention by the placing of the awning below the windows through which the store light passes. Here, again, is a feature that should be attended to in the installation of the front. These windows diffuse the light properly so that it is carried to all parts of the store.

Retail dealers are continually re-arranging their stores and refitting them to keep pace with the advancing times. While doing this the store-front must not be overlooked. Its value is what the dealer makes it and it might as well be a gilt-edged investment as not.

Selling More Biscuits and Confectionery

Quebec City Dealers Make Special Efforts to Increase Turn-Over and Find Profits Quite Satisfactory — Large Show Case From Floor to Wall Divided Into Diamond Shaped Sections Makes a Paying Silent Salesman.

"If we didn't believe in biscuits and confectionery as a fine profit producing line, we would not handle them," recently remarked one of the head salesmen in the grocery store of Myriand & Pouliot, Quebec City, P. Q.

The accompanying illustration will give an idea of the importance attached to these two lines by the firm in question, and the showcase for biscuits is somewhat unique. The top of the case slants up from the floor to the wall and is divided into diamond shapes by cross-running pieces of highly polished wood. The diamond shapes made by the intersection are inlaid with glass, through which can be seen all grades of biscuits. The idea is somewhat novel, and allows the customer to run her eye over a big range quickly, obviating the necessity of opening boxes and thus wasting valuable time.

Why This Method is Profitable.

That Myriand & Pouliot find this a trade puller goes without saying, the salesmen above mentioned best explaining the firm's views by the few words, "You must display biscuits as well as any other line if you are to sell the maximum amount, and by having samples in a showcase of this nature the customer can immediately choose, allowing the order to be filled from the box stock near the counter and scales."

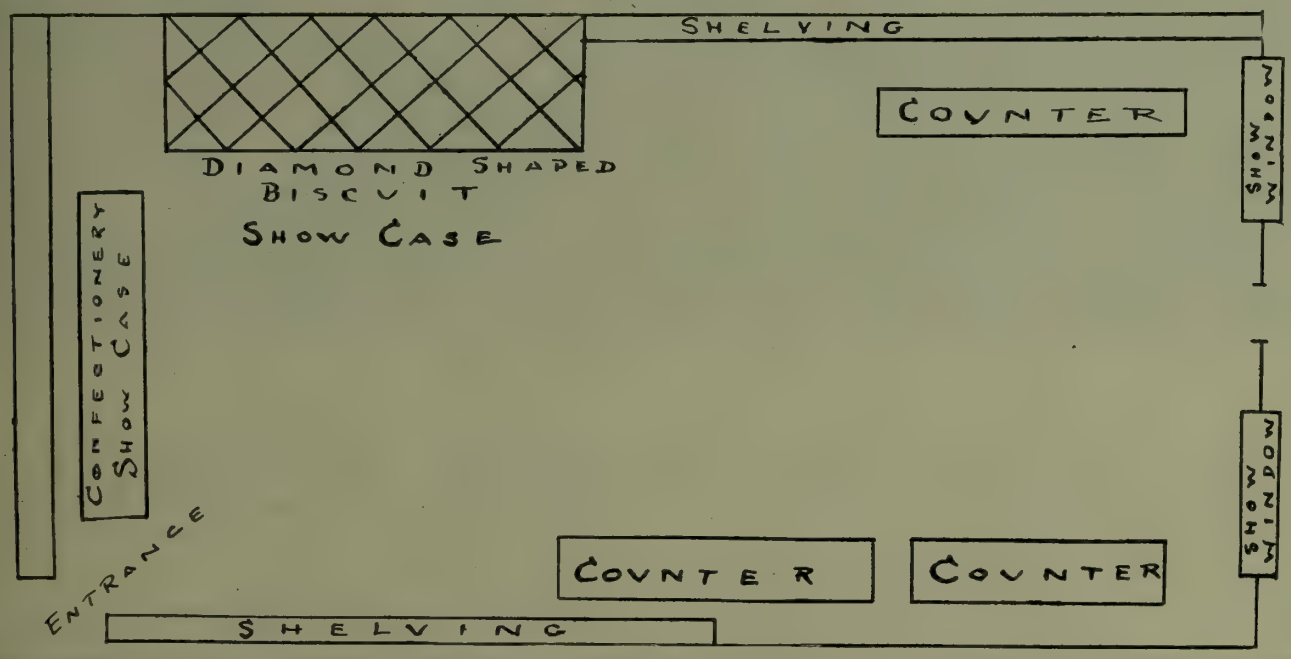
This scheme, therefore, eliminates a lot of unnecessary movements, finally saving time and eventually money. By having to carry one box to the counter and then another, and so on, to weigh on the assortment, and then having to replace the boxes on the shelves, the clerk must keep the customer waiting and deprive others of attention.

Biscuits and Confectionery Well Mated.

"Yes, when a customer calls for biscuits and you have her choosing from samples, you can always direct her attention to candies and in almost every instance get an order. You will see," he further remarked, "that we have the confectionery showcase and shelf close by. The association of these lines, as I have said, itself almost causes a double purchase."

Sells Goods Above Demand.

That this salesman sells goods over and above the actual demand, goes without saying, as he has ideas, and knows how to handle a customer without being over-aggressive.



Plan of separate biscuit and confectionery department of a Quebec city store, that of Myriand & Pouliot. The entrance at the lower left-hand corner is from another part of the store. The biscuit show-case is a feature of the fixtures.

A small number of well-paid, well-trained efficient clerks can do more work at less cost than a great number of poorly paid, untrained, inefficient workers. The value of the article sold is increased by being sold by an efficient clerk. A wholesome, bright, smilling, courteous, contented clerk adds worth to even the poorest article.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A Dealer With High Reputation for Selling Quality Goods Gets Better Prices.

Is it possible that one grocer can receive a higher price than another for goods that are identical?

This does not suppose the case of a proprietary article, the price of which is widely known. But consider fruits or vegetables or any of the other groceries for which there is no fixed price well known to all.

To this question one grocer replied in the affirmative and the writer feels that what is true of the one grocer is true of others throughout the Dominion who have a similar class of trade. The grocer referred to has what is known as a high class trade. His name stands for the best in groceries in his town. He knows it and he also knows that the guarantee that he gives his goods and the increment they receive from merely coming from his store, is worth something to that class of customer who looks for distinction in everything he or she buys. One grocer may have spent a whole lifetime in acquiring this standing, but it may have come to another in but a short time. It is nothing more than a "reputation." You cannot buy it, but you can acquire it by your manner of dealing with the public. And it is an invaluable asset. Customers will then refuse to believe reports of trade wrongs about you, until your failings become actual realities.

The very name is a seal and stamp of excellence. It is an actuality, there IS something in a name.

Selling Xmas Goods Well in Advance

How Hamilton Dealer Aims to do Bulk of the Big Holiday Trade on Arrival of First Christmas Goods—Points Out Their Superior Quality and Advertises Them Strongly—Methods for Increasing Sales—A Well Appointed New Store —Ideas on Advertising in the Newspaper.

"Only those who can't afford to buy ahead leave off purchasing their Christmas baking materials until just before the holiday."

This statement by G. R. Carroll, a Hamilton, Ont. grocer, is one that should get the attention of dealers who have not been making it a point to go after the Christmas trade early. 'A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush,' and Christmas trade secured in November or around first of December is worth quite a bit more during Christmas week.

It is with this end in view that Mr. Carroll goes after the Christmas trade in raisins, currants, peels, spices, dates, nuts, etc., just as soon as first shipments arrive. To get this he advertises and displays. Attention is called to the superior qualities of the first goods. That they are 'always the best' is strongly emphasized by advertising and demonstration.

Early Buyers are Big Buyers.

These methods, claims Mr. Carroll, get a good deal of the cream of the holiday trade. "I educate the people principally through newspaper advertising, up to the fact Christmas goods they buy at our stores are of best quality procurable, that the first of the season are always best and I have the bulk of the goods for the Christmas baking sold before many begin to push them. Towards the end of the season only small lots go out as all the best trade has been worked."

This suggests to dealers the advisability of going out after their Christmas trade as early as possible. Frequently there is so much work to do the last week and last day that many customers cannot be properly served, and inadequate service means loss of a certain amount of trade. Then, as Mr. Carroll states, if the wealthier class purchase early, the best part of the holiday sales are over long before Christmas. It must not be supposed, however, that people, whether wealthy or not, are going to purchase early always. It is only when they are induced to see the advantages that they do so.

Business Established in 1893.

A little bit of history about the Carroll business will prove interesting and beneficial. It will be just 20 years ago next fourth of July that the business was begun in Hamilton in a small store 18 ft. by 14 ft. To-day he has eight stores in that city.

A short time ago the eighth store was opened and in the first two days the business done was as large as that of the first three months when the business was begun originally.

Reasons for Branching Out.

How did he come to branch out, you may ask? It was this way. The first advertising was done with dodgers in the neighborhood of the store. Some of these found their way to different parts of the city, and friends told one another of the goods and prices at Carroll's. Orders then began to arrive from various directions, and the business could not be properly handled.

"Some planning had to be done," states Mr. Carroll, "and the only solution was the establishment of branches. The business was there for someone to get and every time the erection or opening of a new store was planned the question was frequently asked, "when are you going to have your new store opened' which indicated that we should be closer to our customers.

A Recent Addition.

One of the latest additions to the Carrol string of stores is a bright one on York St., a cut of which is shown herewith. This was opened last May. Like several others, it is fitted with up-to-date oak bin fixtures which show up samples to splendid advantage. The refrigerator at the rear of the store is also of oak and is an exceedingly attractive piece of the store furniture. Other equipment includes an electrically driven coffee mill, two computing scales, and a cash register. This store is managed by Miss Griffen—in fact the majority of Mr. Carroll's branch managers are young women who have originally received their tuition in the main store. It is probably because a woman looks after it that the store as shown is kept so neat and clean.

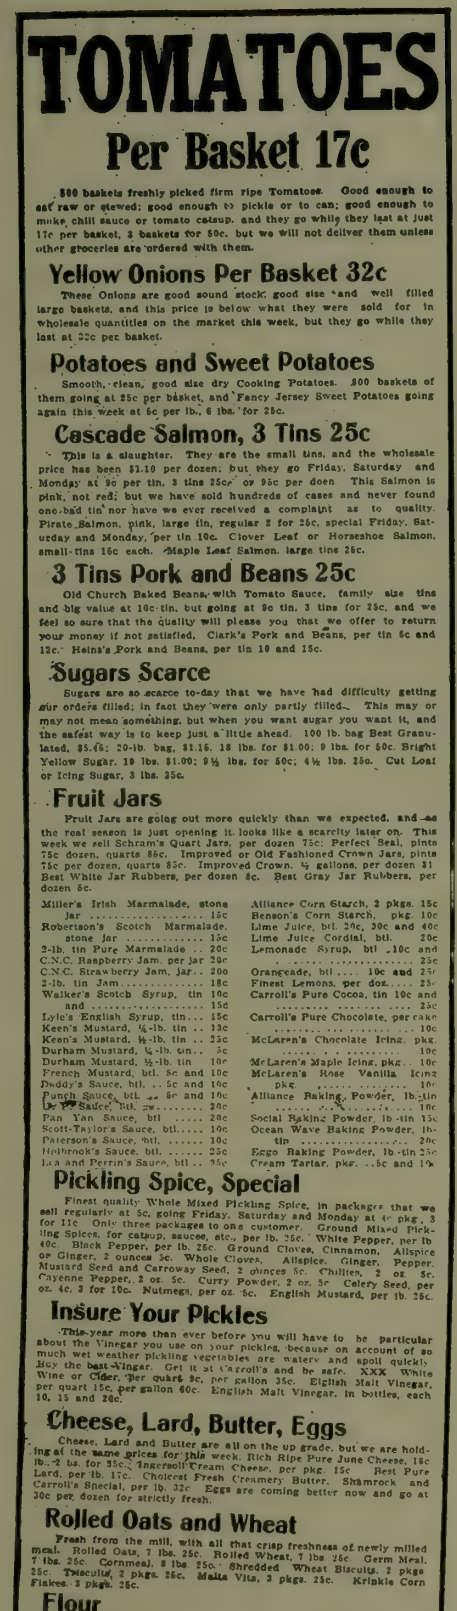
Puts Responsibility on Others.

"When these young people have been in the store here," remarked Mr. Carroll, "they get my viewpoint. They have learned my method of treating customers, handling complaints and so on, and are therefore well fitted to manage a branch store when an opportunity occurs. I try to get around the stores once a day to see that everything is running smoothly. But my aim is to have the different managers look after their own stores as much as possible and attend to their own problems, and complaints, if there are any.

"One thing I always urge is that customers be given the benefit of a doubt—the customer, you know, is always right. By acknowledging that the customer is right you can often afterward show him where he is wrong."

A Cash Business Done.

In the Carroll stores no accounts are allowed to run over a day or two and then not without a satisfactory reason.



TOMATOES

Lard, per lb. 17c. Choicest Fresh Creamery Butter, Shamrock and Carroll's Special, per lb. 32c. Eggs are coming better now and go at 30c per dozen for strictly fresh.
Rolled Oats and Wheat
Fresh from the mill, with all that crisp freshness of newly milled meal. Rolled Oats, 7 lbs. 25c. Rolled Wheat, 7 lbs. 25c. Germ Meal, 7 lbs. 25c. Cornmeal, 8 lbs. 25c. Shredded Wheat Biscuits, 2 pkgs 25c. Triscuits, 2 pkgs. 25c. Malta Vita, 3 pkgs. 25c. Krinkle Corn Flakes, 3 pkgs. 25c.
Flour
If any other Blended Flour were milled in the same way and the same wheat used it would be as good flour as Old Homestead. It could not possibly be better, but no other blended flour is as good, because it has not the same proportion of Manitoba wheat, and it is not milled in that same careful, conscientious way. Therefore, buy Old Homestead and get the best. ¼ bag, 70c; bag $2.75. Silver Star Flour, for pastry purposes, ¼ bag, 85c.

Sample of the Carroll newspaper advertising. These ads. are run once a week in three Hamilton papers.

The business is, to all intents and purposes, strictly cash. On Saturday, for instance, if a parcel of goods is going out C.O.D. to a good customer and for some reason or other the money isn't just at hand, the driver leaves them with the understanding that on Monday morning he will call again.

"The only change that is ever made," remarked the proprietor, "is on the counter sales book. Stores doing as much as a $600 a week business never have more than $40 or $50 to collect on Saturday night.

Everybody Treated Alike.

"Sometimes good trade will object to this cash system but we simply tell them as nicely as we can, that it is our system and we must treat everybody alike; of course some get sore, but they usually get over it and return again. Some time ago the chauffeur of a Hamilton man was going away on a trip and asked me to let his wife have the groceries she wanted and they would be paid for every two weeks when he received his cheque. I told him I couldn't do it; that not even his employer who was a wealthy man, could get such a privilege. The result was he didn't come back which goes to show that he wasn't very reliable.

"There is no reason in the world why a time limit cannot be placed on customers. When a limit is made all that is necessary is to stick to the system."

Records are kept of the sales made every day, week and month in all the branch stores. This permits of comparisons, which develop a friendly rivalry among the various managers, all of which helps along sales. It creates much new business for the various stores.

Does the Advertising Pay.

Mr. Carroll's advertising is done on a systematic basis. Every Thursday he inserts a two column ad., full newspaper length, in the three Hamilton papers. This is how he introduces new goods and sells more staple every-day lines.

Does this advertising pay? Here is what he says about it:

"The people are looking for the ads. all the time. For instance they appeared in last night's papers and the phone bells were ringing this morning before the store was opened. They are of the greatest possible assistance to us."

And ad. that will bring in early telephone calls must have something interesting in it. A glance at the accompanying reproduction demonstrates what that SOMETHING is. Mr. Carroll inserts selling talks that SELL. Note the talk on tomatoes, on pickling spice, vinegar, sugar, etc. This sort of advertising is bound to sell.

Put yourself in the place of a customer. Wouldn't such talks appeal to you?

A Believer in Continuous Advertising

A Limestone City Grocery Firm in Business Since 1871 That Have Always Advertised—Personal and Telephone Calls For Goods Advertised Demonstrate That Copy is Read—A Honey Announcement That Brought Good Returns—How New Christmas Goods Are Announced.

Grocers are frequently encountered in both the large and smaller cities who wonder if advertising in the local daily paper is really a profitable investment. In the absence of direct results which would prove beyond doubt that it pays, they sometimes remain rather unconvinced. It is true that the results of an advertisement are not always visible. The grocer has no means of telling just how much business results from the insertion of an advertisement or a series of them. The big question to decide is as to whether the advertisements are read, for if they are read and the copy used is of the proper kind, it stands to reason that it is a profitable investment. Of course there is the question of rates, which are by no means low in the cities, but as these should be based on the number of prospective customers who read the paper, the rates should make no great difference if the advertisements are read.

A Consistent Advertising Firm.

James Redden & Co., grocers, of Kingston, Ont., advertise in the local paper daily and believe it pays them. They have been established in the Limestone City since 1871, and have been persistent advertisers. As W. Hobart Dyde, who looks after this end of the business says: "We believe it pays or we wouldn't keep it up."

"We frequently have cases that prove to us that the advertisements are really read. Quite often we will have a customer telephone or come to the store for some article that she has seen advertised.

Honey Advertisement Brought Results.

That advertisements are read and that it pays is shown by an instance last spring. Honey at the time was not very plentiful with most grocers, and we had still a considerable quantity on hand, we felt it would be a good time to let the people know we had it. We advertised it in our regular space, quoting prices on the different sizes tins and the run we had on it was simply surprising. It brought home the value of advertising quite forcibly."

Displays Back up Announcements.

Mr. Dyde believes in combining the efforts of the different sales departments on the one line at the one time. In keeping with this idea, he tries as far as possible to have their advertisement and display featuring the same line at once and has them always seasonable.

For instance with the advent of the pickling season, a window was devoted to spices and at the same time they were featured in the local paper. Even if they can't devote a window to the line advertised, they have a display in some prominent part of the store. People get interested through the advertisement and have it again brought to their attention when they enter the store.

Give Public the Prices.

"We believe in quoting prices in most cases," says Mr. Dyde. "I think that sales result when prices are known when they otherwise would not. There are exceptions, however, as when we have some special article where quality of the goods themselves, and not price, is the chief consideration. Then again, as in case of spices, there are so many different lines at different prices that space is not available for the quoting of prices. However, wherever practical, I believe in letting the people know the price. Eventually they must be told.

How New Goods are Sold.

Redden & Co. take advantage of new goods coming in to get people interested through their advertisement. As the public are interested in the first robin of spring or the first strawberry of the season, so are they in new season's goods of any kind. Now that the fall is coming on, as each new line of dried fruit or nuts arrive, space will be devoted to them in the paper. The fact that the new crop goods are in is always a valuable selling argument. In the same way when a shipment of some important line is received, newspaper space is used to announce it to the public.

Advises Regular Advertising.

"The space we use in the local paper is not large," says Mr. Dyde, "but we keep at it constantly. We believe that the steady advertiser, even in a limited space brings better results than the same amount of money used for larger space at intervals. It is the advertisement kept constantly before the public and changed frequently so as to be interesting that is the best. Of course on special occasions such as Christmas our space is increased.

"We look after the preparation of our own copy. We study local conditions and select the goods and the language which we consider best suited to our customers, and to arouse their interest in the goods. My idea in writing an advertisement is to open with a description that will work up interest in the goods and then to quote a price."

REAL PHILOSOPHY.

Count that day lost whose slow decending sun, finds prices shot to pieces and business done for fun.

* * *

Trade is sensitive. It goes only where it is invited and stays only where it is well treated.

* * *

Selling standard merchandise below cost—and cost includes the full expense of doing business—is almost as idiotic as selling gold dollars for ninety cents.

ler to Sell Goods He Decides to Push

Window Sells Twenty Cases of a Cereal

Good Example of How Jas. Redden & Co., Kingston, Create New Business for Goods They Get Behind — Emphasizes Power of the Dealer to Make Sales of His Own Accord—Housecleaning Display That Sold Well—Description of Last Year's Christmas Window.

There has been much said in recent years relative to the value of window display as a means of increasing the sale of goods in the grocery store. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The way to gauge the value of a window is to put in an attractive display and carefully watch results. Many merchants who have done so declare themselves strongly as to the value of a well dressed window. At times one comes across an outstanding case that proves their selling value beyond a doubt.

Such a case is that which Jas. Redden & Co., grocers, Kingston, Ont., had recently. They believe strongly in the value of the window as a selling agent. They have had the fact plainly demonstrated on many occasions. It is not an unusual thing at all to have direct sales from a window display. They are situated on one of the principal business streets of Kingston, the number of people who pass their store daily is quite large and for this reason a good deal of attention is given to window trimming.

Many sales made by the window probably are not traceable directly to it. About the only evidence of its value is in the increased sale of articles shown in it. A case showing the big value of the window and particularly of a window well trimmed is reported from the Redden store.

The display was of a certain brand of package cereal, which the firm had not handled for some time. The arrangement of the window was something out of the ordinary and attracted a good deal of attention from the passing public. A good deal of time and care was taken in its arrangement but that it paid is shown in the sale of the article. Twenty cases were sold in about three weeks.

This is an example of the selling power of a well trimmed window which proves beyond any doubt that it pays to give attention to the window. The sale of the twenty cases was the direct result of the window display as this brand had not been handled by this store for some time.

Another display which brought good business was one of housecleaning necessities which was arranged in the spring. A platform was erected making a double display window for the occasion. On the top floor soap was shown while on the lower one different varieties of cleansers, brooms, brushes, etc., were symmetrically arranged. The display was such as to create interest and incidentally a good sale for the goods shown.

Attended To by Salesman.

Jas. Cornelius, one of the salesmen in the Redden store, looks after the windows. He is strong in the praise of the window as a means of selling goods. "It takes time," he said to The Grocer, "to arrange a display that will arouse extra interest, but even a display on which little time is taken but which will sell considerable goods may be arranged. The main thing is to always make them seasonable. In the arrangement it is important to get the display evenly balanced and symmetrical."

Mr. Cornelius realizes that the grocery store is a busy place and sufficient time is not always available to dress a window as often or as well as the trimmer would like. He tries to change each window at least once a week. It is necessary to do some planning ahead and in the case of a special window, it is sometimes found necessary to return at night to do the work.

Window For Christmas Goods.

Some night work was put in on the Christmas windows last year, but the good displays resulting made up for the extra time given. The windows were very favorably commented on by those who saw them. In one window was shown fancy box chocolates, Christmas stockings and a goodly variety of cossacks in their varied colors. The floor was built up in the form of steps and covered with white, red and green paper. The background was constructed of crepe paper of the same colors strung from the ceiling.

Santa Claus as an Aviator.

The other was an outstanding one that caught the eye of the passerby. It represented Santa Claus delivering groceries from house to house. At the rear was a doll's house. A path ran down from the entrance and on both sides were green paper cuttings to represent a lawn. Up above was Santa Claus in an aeroplane loaded with goods This was suspended in the window by a wire. The sides were built in shelves covered with green paper and fancy groceries were displayed here. Among the lines shown were bottled and glass dainties, olives, tea and biscuits in fancy packages, figs, table raisins, etc. The background was built up similar to the other window. The display was certainly an attractive one. It created unusual interest and demonstrates conclusively the bearing the window has on the selling of Christmas goods.

A LESSON NOT FORGOTTEN.

The first day a naive young man clerked in a general store, he was asked by a customer for something the store did not have. The clerk politely informed the customer and expressed his sorrow at not having the article.

When the customer was gone, the proprietor, who had been watching the new clerk, demanded of him, "Why did you not offer the customer something else?"

"I did not think of that," replied the clerk.

"You must always do that," insisted the boss. "If you have not what a customer wants, offer him something we have—something as near like what he asked for as you can."

At this moment another customer entered, and the clerk stepped forward and greeted him with, "What can I do for you?"

"I want a cheese," said the man.

The clerk looked perplexed, and then his face brightened and he said, "We have no cheese to-day, but we have some grindstones."

"Let me see them," requested the customer, and looking them over with care, he added, "I am glad you called my attention to these stones. I will take that one, the one over there, the largest one of the bunch."

Appearances are deceptive. Many a weak-looking woman has all the bill collectors and grocers scared to death.

View of A. Hagmeier's store, Hespeler, Ont., which is just as bright at rear and centre as in the front. Metal ceiling and modern dust-proof bin fixtures aid materially in making it attractive.

Getting Full Value From the Sun's Rays

How Hespeler, Ont., Dealer Brings in Plenty of Light—Helps Sell the Goods, He Claims—Methods Used to Increase Business—Has Installed Display Fixtures and Several Other Equipments—A Counter for Provisions.

The value of plenty of light and of bright, wholesome and attractive surroundings is becoming universally recognized. In school and in office this is found to be a necessity. In the grocery store, the same conditions are just as much a necessity and there is no denying that such conditions are of value in many ways. Not only from the standpoint of the health of the employes, but also from the fact that a bright store attracts customers and begets business.

A. Hagmeier, of Hespler, Ont., had this in view when he erected his present store. He wanted a store that was roomy, bright and with plenty of light that would allow of display of goods to the best advantage. This he has achieved for the result is a store that would do credit to a much larger town.

Both Groceries and Chinaware.

The store which is 35x100 feet is commodious and allows of excellent display without crowding. One side is taken up exclusively with groceries while the other is devoted to chinaware. The ideal has been achieved in the matter of light and brightness. As said before it was constructed with this in view. The ceiling is particularly high. There are two large show windows in front. The top of the awning does not extend up to the top of the windows so that even when it is down plenty of light comes in through the glazed glass above.

Along the side there are a number of windows while nearly as much light is admitted at the back as the front, through three large capacious windows. The photograph shows how well lighted the store is.

So much for light. Now in order that it may show up to the best advantage, the walls are white while there is also a metallic ceiling which adds to the brightness and general appearance of the store.

Mr. Hagmeier believes that it pays to have an attractive and bright store. "A grocer in a dingy musty store," he says, "doesn't realize its condition or how unattractive it must be to customers until he goes into a bright and airy one. It is then that the truth dawns upon him. Besides, the added appearance which plenty of light gives, it also shows goods up to better advantage. Goods well displayed induce sales."

Places Much Value in Equipment.

It is for this reason that Mr. Hagmeier strongly believes in the value of bin fixtures, silent salesmen and a well trimmed window. In fact, he says he seldom puts in a window display that he does not see purchases resulting from it.

That Mr. Hagmeier believes that it pays to have display fixtures that will show goods up in such a manner as to induce purchases is shown by the photograph. On the grocery side at the front is a silent salesman and a show case for the display of confectionery. Then comes a counter fitted with glass bins for showing goods and flanked by larger display bin fixtures.. At the front in the centre is a stand which in summer is used for summer drinks.

Special Counter for Provisions.

The provision department is also in the centre, there being a slicing counter, a display case for meats, and a table for cheese. There are also display cases for bread and biscuits as well as for bulk pickles. In the farthest corner will be seen a hoist for bringing goods up from the basement.

Many Handy Helpers.

Among the other equipment in the store is a cash carrier, account register, meat slicer, two cheese cutters, computing scales and coffee mill. The office is on the landing of the stairway leading to the flat above, thus commanding a view of the whole store.

The chinaware and crockery department is an extensive one and is arranged so that goods are shown up to good advantage. Mr. Hagmeier is rather doubtful as to whether it really pays a large enough profit as too large a stock has to be carried for the sales that are made in that size of a town. Still it attracts other business and for this reason is maintained.

Where Salesmen and Order Takers Differ

Instances Where Salesmanship Brought in Extra Business and Where Indifference Lost Business—Selling Goods Beyond Actual Demand—Adding on Associated Lines.

"I pay my clerks well so that they work for me, have an interest in things and do not convince themselves that after they have done a certain amount they are entitled to loaf, having in their opinion earned the day's pay."

Such were the recent remarks of Nap. Chartrand, St. Antoine St., Montreal, who has ideas of salesmanship worth repeating.

There is quite a lot of sense in having the clerks kept busy. Real good clerks know that it is to their own interest if they reach a certain standard of efficiency. No good clerk will, of course, think for one moment that his energies should be determined by the amount of money he draws weekly, because right here is the very root of the "let-profits-slip-past" evil, and here is a pretty good example showing the ways of different types of clerks.

This Man Didn't Care.

"Good morning," said a woman entering a fairly well-to-do store in Montreal recently, no doubt expecting a similar greeting from the clerk; but he evidently places a high value on his breath and did not respond. "I want some pickles, medium price you know. What have you got?" continues the woman. Instead of taking down a few bottles from the pickle-shelf which was by no means within easy reach, the clerk, lazy to a degree, pointed to the shelf and rhymed off the names of the manufacturers. "What price for those large bottles?" further inquired the customer. "Oh, the prices differ," was the reply. That was too much for the customer, so she left.

A Salesman This Time.

Entering the next store where she had not been often before, she received quite a warm welcome, and on mentioning pickles, in a moment the clerk had three or four different brands beside her. She had not to strain her eyes looking at them on a high shelf. "Yes, madam,this is a rather cheap line, but I can recommend it as to quality. The manufacturers have a good name. Mrs. Blank up the street near you buys nothing else. But for a few more cents I can give you something better. Just look at the variety of these." "Well, I'll take your word, I'll have that bottle," consented the customer.

Introducing Other Lines.

"Pardon me asking madam, but is your husband fond of pickles?" He was.

"At that rate," continued the clerk, "you will please him by having a nice sauce in the house too. Let me show you a few lines." Before she could say "no" he was getting two or three different brands for her and to cut a long story short she brought home a bottle of imported sauce also. This clerk now is getting most of her trade.

See That They Get More.

"When a woman is purchasing some tea, I always endeavor to sell her a quantity of coffee also," says another Montrealer, "and it is just surprising how much extra business I secure by suggesting other lines in keeping with those she asks for."

Not long ago a customer asked the dealer for a pound of crackers to be sent up immediately, and before he could get speaking to her she was gone. He soon concluded that she was expecting a visitor or visitors, and calling up the house later he got her on the phone. The conversation ran something like this: "Mrs. —, it has just struck me that you would find some nice cheese worth while with those biscuits. My driver is just leaving. You know how nice cheese is with crackers. "All right, send me half a pound, and if I like it I'll order more," was the response. The dealer was confident and went on: "All right madam, when you taste it you'll want more." Moral: When a customer is purchasing any particular commodity, try to sell her something which can be eaten with it.

The Never Say Die "Idea."

"The customer likes to have you know of anything of importance which happens in the household, and very often this keeping in touch, so to speak, has resulted wonders for me," remarked a dealer who one would imagine had as much trade as he wants. He has a good stand, on one of the leading Montreal thoroughfares. He happened to hear that one of his customers had become a happy mother and often spoke to the husband about certain preparations he was handling for infants use. The wife happens, after regaining her health, to telephone the store, and the proprietor started off the selling talk again about this particular preparation and he got an order which will mean repeats. This persistency on the part of an old dealer who has made some money out of his business, simply goes to show that the seeds have been sown in him during his apprenticeship and cultivated through the following years.

When one invests money he does not intend it to remain idle and earn nothing; so when he enters into any line of to secure a big dividend on the money. business he has made up his mind, at least should have, that he is simply going to secure a big dividend on the money. By following the proper line of salesmanship that dividend should be a good one, but on the other hand if he simply takes orders over the counter, never suggests, or never tries to swell the daily receipts, then he might as well hold on to the money. The dividend cannot be much bigger than he will receive annually in interest from the bank.

HAVE YOU A VACANT LOT?

Have you a vacant lot? B. S. Hooey, a grocer of Trenton, Ont., has one. It is on the main street. You pass it on the way from the station to the centre of the town. Now a vacant lot lying idle is not a very profitable holding. Mr. Hooey decided to make his pay the taxes at any rate.

The lot now is not altogether vacant. Across it stretches a long signboard. In the centre you will read "Don't forget, if it's from Hooey, it's good—next door to post-office." On either side of this is the advertisement of a grocery line handled in the Hooey store.

Mr. Hooey erected the signboard. He has his own ad. in the centre. He rents the space on either side to manufacturers who may wish to advertise their goods to Trenton citizens.

Fixtures and Plan of a Fine New Store

Equipment of a Greater Variety Than is Usually Found—To Permit of Better Facilities in Warehouse a Gallery Was Erected—Side Passage for Bringing in Heavy Goods and Delivering Parcels.

Carefully note this list of fixtures, store equipment and accessories:—

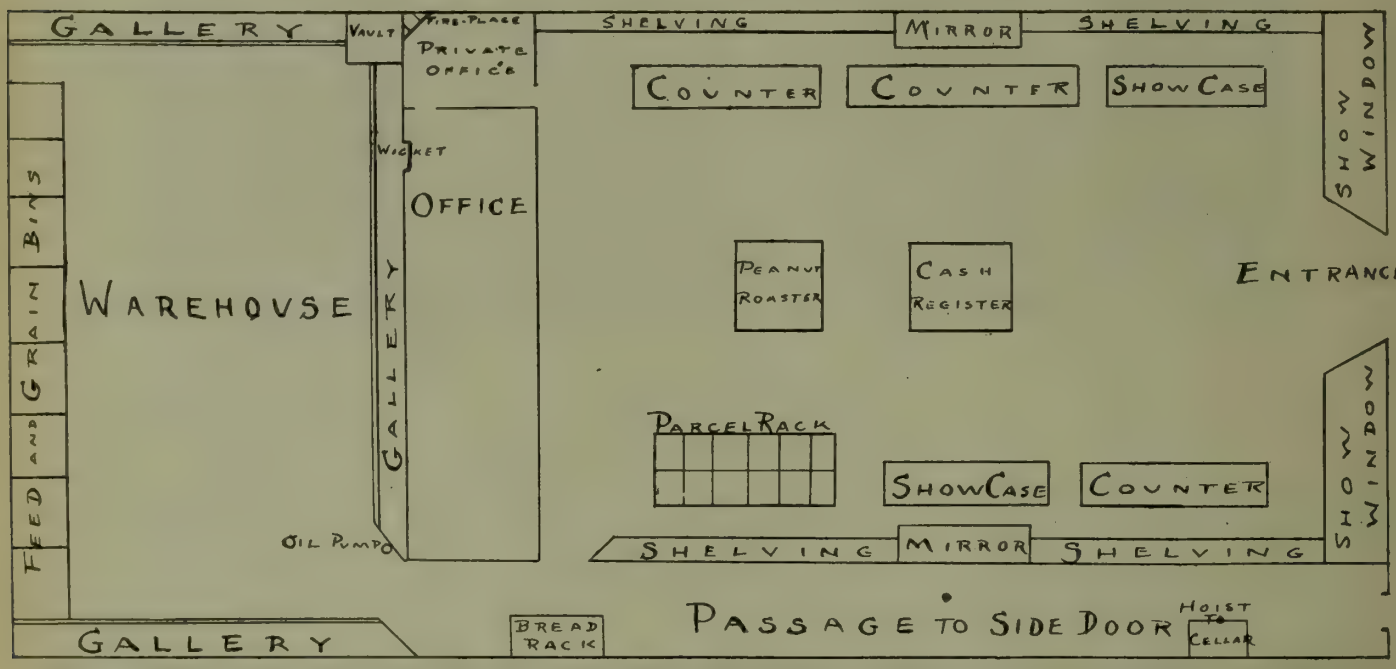
Dust-proof bin fixtures,
Show Windows with Tile Floor,
Cash Register,
Coffee Grinder,
Cheese Cutter,
Silent Salesmen,
Peanut Roaster,
Parcel Rack,
Wall Mirrors,
Phone Cabinet,
Refrigerator,
Self Measuring Oil Tank,
Private Gas Lighting System,
Bread Rack,
Hoist to Cellar,
Metal Ceiling,
Fire Place,
Vault,
Hot Water Heating.

One might imagine from reading the list that it included the stock of some large wholesale firm who had equipment to sell the retail trade. But that is not the case. It is the equipment of a retail grocery firm in Orillia, Ont.—That of Geo. Vick & Sons.

Plans Were Well Laid.

There are probably few retailers in Canada who can boast of such an array of selling aids and accessories in any one store. It is not very long ago since Geo. Vick & Sons refitted their new store and the result certainly is most attractive. Not only have they many modern improvements in the store proper, but the warehouse is a model of order, neatness and arrangement. The same careful attention was given to the cellar where canned goods, etc., are stored, in the planning of the new store.

The first thing that strikes one on entering the Vick store is the appearance presented by the bin fixtures and shelf arrangement. These create sales because of the manner in which they show so many varieties of goods. The large cash register stands in the centre of the floor and in addition to its usefulness is an attractive piece of furniture.



Plan of a recently fitted grocery store with many modern fixtures and equipment. Goods come in and are delivered from a side door. A gallery in the warehouse is a feature.

Money in Peanut Roaster.

Few Canadian grocers can boast of a peanut roaster, yet Geo. Vick & Sons have had one for some time. During the day it stands in the centre of the floor to the rear of the cash register and at night is placed in the doorway.

"It certainly sells a lot of peanuts," remarked Herbert Vick in referring to it. Particularly is this the case on a Saturday night and as there is good margin in peanuts, profits are appreciable, and at the same time it attracts buyers for other goods.

Use of the Parcel Rack.

The Parcel Rack is another rare fixture seen in a grocery store. This rack is only a couple of feet off the ground with open apartments on top for out-going parcels. These are placed in their respective apartments, the delivery man coming in the side door and along the passage for them, as shown in the accompanying plan.

Geo. Vick & Sons bake their own bread in a bakeshop at the rear of the store and have a large sale for it, shipping it out of town in their own crates. A large Bread Rack stands in the passage-way and this is kept filled by the bakers. In the illustration will be noticed a wicket from the warehouse into the office. This is where the bread men look after their tickets, as the ticket method is used to keep everything straight between bakery and main office.

Gallery in Warehouse.

Coming to the warehouse one's attention immediately is attracted by the gallery. This is constructed several feet from the floor and is used for storing stock such as flour, rolled oats, etc., which are always off the floor and therefore kept entirely clean. There is a system of movable bins along the rear wall for grains, feed, etc., with tickets above each showing what each contains. These bins are movable so that rats and mice cannot carry on their depredations without being reached.

A self-measuring oil pump is another feature of the equipment. The oil is stored in a tank, holding 5 barrels, in the rear corner of the cellar so that there is no dirt whatever in the warehouse arising from it. This, Mr. Vick claims, is a valuable equipment in view of its correctness in measuring and the time it saves.

Private Lighting Plant.

Vick & Sons have their own gas lighting system. This they claim, supplies plenty of light for the store at a small cost. The store has electric lights also but these are only used when the gas happens to run out.

The office is at the end of the main store with a comfortable private office to the right. When the air is a little chilly the fireplace in the corner is utilized to good advantage and adds an extra cheerful appearance.

A wash basin in the store is another handy piece of equipment. It is accessible to all the employes, and creates the impression of cleanliness among customers.

On the whole, here is a well equipped store that presents a number of ideas worth while considering.

DISPLAY IDEAS FOR FRUITS.

There are many little display ideas which can be fixed up around the store by the merchant without a great deal of time or trouble, but which will assist materially in the sale of goods.

W. M. Bosworth, a Newmarket Ont., grocer, has fitted out display boxes for lemons and oranges. An ordinary box about a foot square is used for the purpose. The front is fitted with glass and in such a manner that it will slide up and down, acting as a door. Oranges and lemons are placed inside and besides showing the goods up to good advantage, protects them from the air so that they are not dried up so quickly, the appearance being thus maintained.

The same kind of boxes are used for dried fruits such as prunes showing them up well, keeping them from drying out and thus losing weight as well as protecting them from dust and dirt.

NAILING UP CAULIFLOWER

It is the method of display that often sells the goods. It is an old saying that "goods well displayed are half sold."

A Kingston, Ont., grocer has quite a unique method of displaying cauliflower, an article which in view of pickling season is selling freely just now. An ordinary wide board or better still two or three boards connected is the first essential to follow his plan. Nails are driven through at spaces of about 9 or 10 inches, the points being allowed to protrude up. On these points, the cauliflowers are stuck, face upward. A complete surface of cauliflowers is thus presented to view. The display arrangement can be placed in the most convenient spot.

Troubles Experienced in Debt Collecting

Instances to Show That a Customer's Financial Standing Cannot Always Be Measured by the House He Lives in—Dealer Goes After a $131 Debt at an Inopportune Time — Limiting Credits the Cure for Big Debts.

Those grocers who give credit have some interesting experiences in their efforts to collect that which is rightly theirs. They fail to fully appreciate these experiences from the fact that they are generally rather hard on their financial ledger. However, the bystander—the man on the fence— who is connected with neither the debtor nor the creditor can pick points of interest and at times even choice morsels of humor out of many cases. With him there is no feeling of anguish or regret such as comes to the grocer when he finds a man has been eating the best obtainable, perhaps maintaining an automobile and dressing in the finest clothes, and partly at his expense.

The fact of the matter is you can tell very little from appearances as to the reliability of many a customer, or even how much he is worth. Some of those living in nicely furnished homes or even owning automobiles are poor subjects from whom to collect a debt. Often their handsome homes and furnishings belong to somebody else and the only part of the automobile they own is the gasoline.

A $131 Over-Due Account.

A Toronto grocer was owed $131 by a certain individual, only he didn't call him an individual or anything like that. The bill was due—in fact, it was long past due—so he made a friendly (?) call on the debtor one afternoon. The debtor was shaving when the caller was announced. Evidently he doesn't like to be disturbed when shaving. Just as evident is the fact that he doesn't like to pay his just debts. These two facts combined came next to having an unhappy result for the grocer. The debtor struck a Rastus attitude, flourishing his razor in a manner that spelt danger to the grocer. Although full of trials and tribulations for him, this grocer still considers life as sweet. He began to realize that he wasn't really welcome in this home and made his exit.

Consultation With the Courts.

He then attempted to storm the citadel in another way. It requires some expert manoeuvring to get your own in this world or to get even half of it if you happen to be a grocer. He sued the man for $100. He got judgment and the bailiff was sent forth to realize on the man's chattels. This all cost the grocer $8. However, he did not rue the expense as he felt confident of collecting a goodly portion of the amount. But a grocer with a credit business does not want to have a weak heart. Search on the part of the bailiff showed the man owned nothing—except the razor and an overplus of gall. How can a grocer smile with things like this happening?

Got a Note But Little Else.

Nor are such cases few. Another man owed his grocer $46 for food that had been purchased and eaten long since. About the only thing the grocer could get in payment was a lot of fancy promissory notes. These, however, the wholesale houses absolutely refused to accept in lieu of cash. Nor could he find a bank in town that would cash them even at a substantial discount. One thing the grocer could discount, however, was his debtor's promises. If he were short on cash, he was long on promises and still longer on payments.

The grocer decided it was time for him to act. The man had a finely furnished house and he decided to get judgment and put the bailiff in charge. This was done and $22 was spent in the work. The bailiff descended upon the debtor's chattels and after being four days in charge handed out the laconic report: "Nothing doing." Everything in the finely furnished home was on the instalment plan and nothing could be collected. And think of the $22 spent in the attempt.

Preventing the Trouble.

The grocer is often in a difficult position in extending credit and collecting accounts. As these instances show, appearances are a poor gauge of man's honesty or wealth. The collector is often between the devil and the deep sea. It is often difficult to judge whether it is best to coax a man along and maintain his good-will or make certain his enmity by going in to collect at least a portion of the amount in the best way possible. Sometimes as in the cases cited it is only adding greater expense without gaining anything.

Well, what is to be done? Wouldn't it be well to guard against such situations by being more careful in extending credit and making more sure of a customer's reliability?

Store Kinks and Money Makers

PRIZE CABBAGE IN THE WINDOW.

Anything of unusually large proportions always creates interest and attracts attention. The large massive buildings always hold much of interest to the sight seeer. The same principle holds true when applied to other things. It is the large size of the "big oranges" that has given many a grocer a chance to talk the quality of grapefruit to many customers.

Many grocers have made use of this natural curiosity to turn attention to their store or window. J. S. Kyle, an Oshawa, Ont., grocer, secured a prize head of cabbage at the local fall fair and displayed it in his window with other vegetables. It's size caused people to stop.

The same idea could be well used by many other grocers with different lines. It makes no difference whether it is a large fish or turnips or potato, as long as it arouses interest.

WASHING SILENT SALESMEN INTERIORS.

The washing of show cases, particularly silent salesmen requires a lot of time, especially the inside glass. A Winnipeg grocer says this work can be done easily by using the common rubber window mop. "Do not be afraid to use plenty of good water with a little ammonia," he says, "and then proceed as though washing a large window. In a little while one will, with a little care be able to save a lot of hard work and what is often more valuable, time. I have used this method for several years and find that it works to perfection. I would not think of going back to the old way."

DISPLAY WINDOW BISECTED.

It is generally agreed that the window display that sells the most goods is one devoted to only one line or at least to a couple of associated lines at a time. In this way the attention of the person looking at the window is concentrated on the one article. The complaint is frequently made by grocers, however, that their stock of a single line is not large enough to make a proper display. Henderson & Co., of Kingston, Ont., who have a large display window found this a drawback also. The window was too large for a good display of many individual lines which they wished to show.

They solved the problem by dividing the window into two sections by an oak-finished dividing fence. In this way two separate displays of different lines are possible in the one window. While it is not necessary, they try to have the lines shown associated with one another, as, for instance, pickles on one side and olives on the other. The dividing fence is of course, removable so that the whole window may be used for one display if desired.

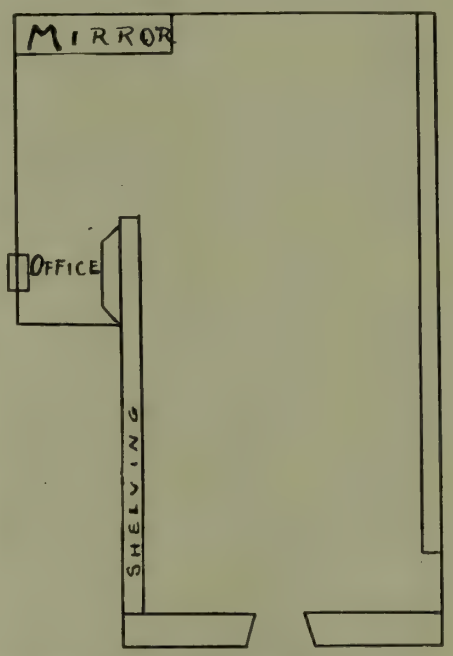
VIEW OF STORE BY MIRROR.

The merchant must spend no little time in his office and it is desirable that while at his desk he have a view of his store. The work in the store must be overseen; it is well to keep an eye on what the clerks are doing and besides there are many small articles displayed about the store which unscrupulous customers will sometimes pick up and these must be watched. At any rate the merchant should know what is going on in the store.



By Means of Mirror at Rear, the Entire Store Can be Seen From the Office.

Some offices are not situated so the merchant has a view of the store. That of J. Milton Cork, a grocer on College St., Toronto, as shown in the accompanying cut is behind the shelving in the store. In this way he had absolutely no view of the store. He however remedied it by placing a mirror at the rear of his store. From his desk he can now see what is going on in the main part of the store.

FREE FROM DUST WALL-CASES.

The Crawford grocery store, Princess St., Kingston, Ont., believes in showing goods up to the best advantage and in showing them in a cleanly manner. One side of the store in particular demonstrates how strongly the firm believe in this.

Three closed-in wall-cases with glass fronts extend along this side. In them is shown an extensive variety of bottled goods. Along the same side are three silent salesmen showing up other lines, considerable space being given to confectionery.

Customers visiting the store can scarcely escape looking at many of the lines shown and being impressed with the free-from-dust cases in which they are displayed.

BELIEVE IN THE PRICE CARD.

Jno. Scott & Co., an old established grocery firm of Woodstock, Ont., believe in letting the public know the price of goods. They have a goodly showing of price cards about the store.

"We believe in using price cards even if there are no special prices quoted," says Andrew Scott. "It is not to announce a bargain that we put the price on but to let people know what an article is worth. If people know the price they will frequently buy when they otherwise would not."

It is maintained that people are not always looking for bargains but rather for high quality goods, but they like to know the price and the price card does the work.

POINTING OUT BUTTER QUALITY.

A retail grocer in a country town has recently adopted a very appropriately constructed show card for selling butter and eggs connecting them up with their source of supply, the farm.

On the show-card is pasted a picture of a farm scene, showing cows and hens. The show card reads: "Best of butter and eggs fresh from the farm."

There seems to be something magic in the words, "Fresh from the farm" that appeals to the public and in this way the two are connected up in such a manner as to impress customers with the dependable quality of the goods.

ARTICLES FASTENED TO SHOW CARDS.

New ideas in show cards are frequently being brought to notice. A new one has just come to light which the grocer should be able to use to advantage. In fact it is not only a show card and a price card combined, but also is the means of displaying goods.

It is being used by a Toronto dealer and is very easy to construct. A heavy cardboard about two feet square is used but the size may be varied to suit the grocer's fancy. Around the outer rim small articles handled in the grocery store are fastened by passing a cord around them, then through the cardboard and tied. Under each article the price is printed while any suitable reading matter may be placed in the centre of the card. There are many articles in the grocery store which may be shown is this way.

A one-price card may also be constructed in this way, the price only being placed in the centre and a number of lines which sell at that price fastened all around the card.

It is recognized that the showing of goods helps in their sale and this is one way grocers may increase sales.

SHOPPING BY TELEPHONE.

Telephone orders are being especially catered to by the Chatham branch of Bradley & Son, grocers, who have also stores at St. Catharines and Niagara Falls.

The store here is equipped with two separate telephones, each with direct connection. This fact was made the basis recently of an interesting advertising talk, in which the wisdom of shopping by telephone was urged, as well as the especial facilities along that line offered by the Bradley store.

In addition to providing two telephones for the purpose of encouraging telephone business, the store gives very careful attention to all telephone orders. Competent clerks are delegated to promptly answer all telephone calls, orders are carefully taken down, and the store makes a special effort to see that every order is accurately filled, and deliveries made exactly as promised. It is recognized that the proper way to hold telephone trade is to treat the telephone buyer just the same as though he came in person to the store.

PREPARE EARLY FOR WEEK-END.

Every Tuesday morning the clerks in the eight Carroll stores, Hamilton, Ont., begin preparations for the week-end trade. Such goods as sugar, bulk rolled oats, beans, rice, etc., are put up in various sized packages for Friday's and Saturday's trade. This enables the various stores to handle the trade on those two days with greater facility, particularly as they are the two busiest days of the week.

ELIMINATING THE BARE WALL.

The entrance to the store of Hugh Walker, grocer, Galt, Ont., is at the side. This naturally left a bare wall to the view of customers entering and leaving the store. A bare wall is not particularly attractive. It was deceided to improve its appearance and at the same time provide extra display space for the showing of goods. To do this a wall-case with a number of shelves was built here in which grocery lines are displayed. Now people entering and leaving the store have their attention attracted by the lines shown.

Being in such a prominent position, this is a valuable supplement to the display window.

GOODS SHOULD BE WELL KNOWN.

The salesman finds the necessity quite often of deciding for a customer. When a certain article is asked for and three or four almost identical articles are placed before the customer, she does not know which one to choose. It is here that the dealer or clerk must do his part by suggesting which one he considers the best and giving some arguments in favor of one particular brand. The clerk will frequently find this necessary.

A GENTLE HINT FOR BUSINESS.

Here is a new method of advertising which a grocer recently used.

The ordinary statements with his business head on them were sent out to customers who did not deal at the store. On the statement was printed:—

"You don't owe us."

"We wish you did."

Thus his name was brought before people and their patronage solicited in a unique manner. The fact of it being a letter with what appeared on first sight to be a bill made sure of it being read.

THE MANUFACTURER'S CO-OPERATION.

It is agreed that the advertising of goods which the grocer handles helps materially in their sale. A Vancouver grocer has found an additional use for this advertising which manufacturers do in the daily paper.

When he is making a display of any line, he cuts the ad. of that line out of the paper, pastes it on cardboard and it makes an excellent show card. If some extra white space is left on the card, after it is removed from the display, "We keep it," or some other appropriate wording can be added and the card still serves a useful purpose.

Pictures of the goods may also be clipped from the paper and add much to the appearance of a show card.

HELPING OUT THE WINDOW.

Every merchant realizes that the front of the store is valuable space and it is to his advantage to have as large a showing of goods as possible in a position where people passing will see them.

T. J. Leahy, a Kingston, Ont. grocer, with a store on King street, has attempted to increase the display space at the front of the store. At each side of the entrance he has shelves arranged on which groceries are placed, thus supplementing the window display. This shelving which is detachable is in front of the window pillar and does not interfere with the view of the window display nor does it block the entrance.

DETERMINING DAILY PROFITS.

W. C. Newman, a merchant on Yonge St., Toronto, has a system of profit accounting which if practical in the grocery store would no doubt simplify the problem greatly. It is the aim to know at the end of each day approximately what the profits for that day have been.

Of course the expenses are pretty accurately known. The difficult part is to find the gross profits so as to arrive at the net profit. This is done by putting after each article entered on the sales slip the cost price in the firm's secret cost mark. A sales slip is made out for every sale. One copy goes out with the goods while the other copy goes to the office. At the end of the day, the total cost of goods sold is added up and the selling price being known, the gross profit is simply arrived at.

Clerks must be in intimate touch with the cost of goods so that the cost mark may be placed on the bill without any loss of time. It requires the marking of cost on every article except those which are every day sellers, the cost of which the clerks are familiar with.

A sales slip being made out for every purchase, these can be added up at the end of the day and compared with cash receipts, to make certain there have been no mistakes.

Chinaware and Crockery Department of Beaton's Grocery Store in Oshawa, Ont. It is connected with the grocery store by an archway.

Good Christmas Trade in Chinaware etc.

Oshawa Grocer Has Separate Department Which Proves Profitable—Buys High Class Goods for Autumn and Christmas—Trade Bringer for Other Goods—How Displays Are Made.

How about chinaware and crockery as a side line in the grocery store? Is it a line that comes within the scope of the grocer? Is it a profitable department? How should it be conducted to secure the best results? These are important questions for many grocers.

There seems absolutely no reason why chinaware is not a line which comes within the scope of the grocer and which he can quite properly handle. Apart from the straight chinaware stores—and outside of the cities they are few in number—there is no class of merchant so well suited to handle this line as the grocer. In fact the grocers appear to be the greatest handlers of it, especially in the towns and villages. A traveler for a chinaware house in Eastern Canada states that the greatest number of his customers are grocers. Apparently a goodly number have after careful consideration concluded that chinaware is a line which they can well and profitably handle.

One grocer who believes that chinaware is a good line to handle and one which is a profit-payer when properly conducted is J. E. Beaton, of Oshawa, Ont. In fact, he has worked it into quite an extensive department, selling chinaware, glassware and crockery. A separate department with an entrance to the street and with quite a large show window is devoted to this line. It is connected with the grocery department by an archway.

Certain rules and methods have to be followed, however, if enough goods are to be sold in this department to make it pay a profit, as quite an extensive stock has to be carried. One of the important factors is efficient display. A show window is regularly devoted to this line. Inside the stock is arranged to show up to the best advantage. Down the left side is shelving with a particularly wide ledge to allow a greater display. Along the other side is shelving as well and in front a counter also with shelving arranged in step shape. Half way down the centre of the department are a number of upright display stands with several shelves. These are arranged so as to show the goods as will be seen from the photograph. Farther to the rear in the centre is a long table with a series of steps.

The Display Sells Goods.

Not only is this department arranged to allow of the greatest amount of display but the goods themselves are displayed so as to create the most favorable impression on the customer. If a dish is going to show up better in a tilted position, that is the position it is given. Wire fixtures are used for showing plates, saucers and kindred lines. Pitchers are suspended from nails along the top ledge of the shelving. Hanging lamps are suspended from the ceiling.

With both gas and electricity available in Oshawa, one would hardly expect many lamps to be sold. However, their sale is quite large, not only to town people but to farmers in the surrounding country who still have to cling to the coal oil.

High Class Goods for Christmas.

While a good many ordinary and staple lines are carried, there is also a good trade done in the special and high-priced goods. If a sufficient quantity of these can be sold, they pay a good profit. Especially are the better class of goods in demand around Christmas time, and for some time before this event extra attention is given to this line in both interior and window display as well as in advertising. Chinaware is a popular line as Christmas gifts and by bringing it prominently before customers a good volume of business is done. The campaign is commenced well in advance for people begin early to at least look around for Xmas presents.

The stock is, of course, enlarged for the Christmas season and the number of fancy lines increased.

The Store's Buying System.

Mr. Beaton keeps stock sets of dishes. that is, he can buy any quantity of cups and saucers, plates, etc., of any one design. He does not have to purchase them in complete sets. He believes this is the best plan as he can also sell a customer any part of a certain design desired. He finds this an excellent argument in their sale. One of the big faults found with the straight sets by the housewife is that if one piece becomes broken the set is spoiled. With the stock set she may replace any piece at any time. Then, again. many of the poorer class of people and some who are just starting up in housekeeping feel that they cannot afford a full set. At this store they may purchase the more essential pieces of any design and later buy the additional pieces to complete it. The store finds this method to work well.

Must Know the Goods Well.

It is well that the salesman selling chinaware be well acquainted with the stock, where each article is placed, something about the goods and their uses. To attain this end a young woman is in charge of this department in the Beaton store, and she devotes the greater part of her time to it. This department requires no little attention if the stock is to be kept looking trim and bright. Considerable time must be given to dusting and arrangement of goods.

Every article in the chinaware department has the price marked plainly on it, except it be a few very staple lines the prices of which are well known. The marking of every article allows customers to find the price of any articles in which they may be interested without asking. Many sales are found to result from this. A woman picks up an article which has attracted her attention. She notes the price, thinks she can afford it, and purchases.

Marking of price on goods has another advantage to Mr. Beaton. It allows any member of the staff to wait on a customer in this department. The value of this is particularly shown around Christmas time when additions have to be made to the staff.

Cost Book Maintained.

The cost price is not marked on each article but a cost book is maintained which all lines of goods are listed and if the cost is required at any time, it can easily be ascertained. Not only is the cost essential frequently in the sale of an article, but is absolutely necessary when stock is being taken.

Mr. Beaton's experience goes to prove that chinaware and crockery is a good line for the grocer. He maintains that it should be given some extra attention or, in fact, that it should be specialized on to some extent. This all indirectly assists the grocery department also, for the woman who comes to buy chinaware, crockery or glassware, will probably leave her order for groceries or see some article of groceries which she requires.

Early Saving Habit Made Clerk Successful

Spent One Year as Delivery Boy and Four as Clerk and Had $650 in Bank—How This Money Was Put Away—When Opportunity Came He Was Ready to Begin Business for Himself —An Example Worth While Emulating.

It is the ambition of every clerk to some day be owner or manager of a business. It is a commendable ambition, and one which will appeal to every merchant. It will make the clerk more valuable to him while the benefit to the clerk by having such an object in view, and working to attain that object, is also large.

Matter of Capital Important.

Experience in itself is only part of the essentials for a clerk who contemplates entering business for himself. Some capital is necessary before the initial step can be taken and the accumulation of this necessary fund is, or seems to be, a difficult problem for many.

But it can be done by the clerk who is ambitious enough to put forth the necessary effort. Most of the big grocers of this country when they started in behind the grocery counter were without funds or wealthy parents. They found it necessary to save the required sum themselves before they could make a start.

Saving of $650 in Five Years.

One example of earnest endeavor by a clerk came to the writer's attention. A young fellow in one year as delivery boy and four years behind the counter was able to save $650, with which to start in a small manner himself. In his attempt to accumulate this amount he had given such attention to all phases of the business that when he started up for himself he made a success from the start.

When he first began as deliverer he received only $4.50 per week, and out of this small salary he was able to save very little, although he had that object in view. He decided that his only way was to make himself so valuable to the firm that he would be given a higher salary. After a year at delivery the proprietor recognizing his faithful efforts, promoted him to a position behind the counter and his salary was raised to $7 per week. He then commenced a systematic method of saving and decided that each week he would place $2 of his salary in the bank. It required careful management to make ends meet but this probably fitted him better for the management of his own business later on. At the end of the first year he had saved $100, and the first hundred is usually the hardest to get together.

Deposits Grew Each Year.

Next year his salary went up $1 per week and accordingly he raised the amount of his weekly savings $1, so that during the year he banked a total of $150, bringing his resources up to $250. Another raise of $1 per week during the next year found him putting $4 a week in the bank, so that at the end of this year his bank account was $450.

He seriously considered the matter then of going into business on the amount he had saved, but decided it was not quite enough so he stayed on for another year. Although he received $1 a week more, his expenses had increased somewhat and he was only able to save the same as the previous year, namely $200, but this placed his bank account at $650.

Decided to Go in for Himself.

He was well-known in his home town, and he decided to locate there. He gave particular attention to the selection of the location of his store, so that it would be in a position where many people passed. He began in a rather modest establishment, but fixed it up so that it would appear attractive and show up his goods to best advantage. He invested $500 in stock, paying cash for it and keeping $150 as a reserve. He adopted proper methods which had been ground into him during his experience as clerk, and from the first made a success of his enterprise.

The story of this young man who determined to win, and who eventually did, should be an incentive to other clerks behind the counter, whose cases are similar. There is nothing like starting to save early in life.

Making Sales Above the Actual Demand

Concrete Example of What Dealers and Their Salesmen May Sell of Goods Brought to Attention of Customers—How Extra Butter, Bacon, Berry, Biscuit and Sausage Sales Were Made in a Village Store in One Day—Selling Power of the Dealer Demonstrated.

A woman with an armful of goods which she had purchased at a nearby dry goods store entered a grocery store in an Eastern Ontario town the other day. She did not have to drop half her parcels in an attempt to open the door for the obliging clerk in this establishment, quick to take in the situation, was there to open the door and bid her a cheery "good morning."

She ordered a couple of staple lines, to be exact, a half pound of tea and three bars of soap. She turned to go. She had apparently completed her order. This clerk did not, however, take that for granted and busy himself with some other work.

Early Morning Evidence of Salesmanship.

"Now, what else this morning, Mrs. Beatty?" was his enquiry and before

"Yes, those are nice ones," replied the clerk, "and they are solid right to the bottom of the box. Just look here," and tearing a sheet of paper off the roll and laying it on the counter he turned the box of berries out for the customer's inspection. "Those are only 20 cents a box. Would you like some of them." Mrs. Beatty ordered two boxes.

Should be Aim of Every Clerk.

This clerk was a salesman and sold goods where many another would have failed, or rather not tried at all. He made an attempt to sell goods over and above actual demand; not only that but he studied the best methods to use to create demand for these extra goods. There is no denying that the sale of goods in the grocery store can be materially increased by the use of proper methods. The appetite of the public can to sell them by the dozen. He found he could make a good profit at ten cents per dozen. He decided also that he would give them some special attention that day. He placed them on the counter with a price card attached. Several times during the morning when he had finished serving a customer, he would draw her attention to the cakes. A sale generally followed. By noon, the clerks encouraged by the sales the proprietor was making, also began to bring the cakes to customers' notice. As a result this line moved briskly and by night the whole box had been sold.

Sausages Went During Afternoon.

At noon on the same day, a shipment of small fresh sausages came in by express and as it was Saturday, it was necessary that they be cleared out that

Customer's attention called to berries and an extra sale made.

Salesmanship sold entire box of fancy biscuits in one day.

Sausage was easily sold to man whose wife was away.

the words, "that's all," could be repeated he continued: "Have you plenty of butter? Just wait until I show you some fresh prints we got in this morning."

In a few seconds he was back from the refrigerator with a nice firm print, which he opened up and gave a sample to the customer to taste. It apparently was as good as he had claimed for she purchased two pounds.

The customer just then evinced some interest in some blueberries which were on the counter. "They look very nice for so late in the season," was her comment.

easily be appealed to and the clerk who learns the knack of so appealing as well as to the good sense of customers has gained much. Examples of the possibilities in increasing the sale of goods by proper methods are now quite frequent.

Decides to Sell Fancy Biscuits.

For instance the writer spent a day in a grocery store in a country town recently and had driven home to him more strongly than ever the value of salesmanship. A shipment of freight was received in the morning and among other lines was a twenty-pound box of fancy biscuits. They were of an unusually large size, so the proprietor decided day. They were placed on the counter with a price card, and suggested to customers during the afternoon by the clerks so that early in the evening the last string was rolled up. Thus, is shown what is possible by a little extra attention and selling effort.

These were not the only examples of salesmanship that came under the writer's notice that day, however. Just, before six o'clock a man came in. His wife was away and as he had to cook his own supper, he wanted some cooked ham. Unfortunately, the store was out of cooked ham. The customer was about to go on to another store.

"We have some nice fresh sausage, Frank. They are easy to cook. We just got them in by express at noon," said the proprietor. The customer after looking at them decided to take a pound. He also purchased a loaf of bread before leaving the store.

Bacon Sale Made.

One of the clerks had the next salesmanship act to his credit. He was waiting on a woman customer who had just purchased a dozen eggs.

"I always have to have eggs for my husband's breakfast," was her com- to the clerk.

"You should have some of our breakfast bacon to go along with them," suggested the clerk. "We began to cut on a fine piece just now."

The side of bacon was produced and shown to the customer with the remark: "Isn't that pretty tempting?"

"It does look nice," she admitted. "What is that worth a pound?" The price proved suitable and a purchase of two pounds was made.

Immigrants Bought Bologna.

This particular town is on a railway line and the passenger trains stop there. This evening an immigrant train pulled in and several of the passengers ran across to the store. They purchased bread and wanted some cooked meat but the store had nothing but canned and they said that was no use as they had no can openers. It was too bad to miss the sale but it apparently could not be helped. Just then an idea struck the proprietor. He had bologna sausage in the refrigerator. So the bologna was rushed to the front and altogether 11 pounds of it sold.

Thus is shown the value of knowing the stock so as to be able to make suggestions to customers.

After witnessing the number of extra sales which it was possible to make in one store in a day, a person could not do otherwise than proclaim the possibilities in salesmanship. There are already many stores and many clerks using their efforts to good effect in this way but there are many more who need to get out of the ranks of order takers and into the line of salesmen. The order taker merely hands out to the customers the goods asked for while the salesman attempts by intelligent methods to sell other goods than those asked for. A great deal is possible if the effort is put forth.

A VALUABLE ELECTRIC BELL.

A Trenton, Ont. merchant has a double store. The larger section is the grocery department while in the smaller he keeps liquors. It is not really necessary that there should be a clerk in the liquor section all the time as business is spasmodic. In order that the clerks may spend all the time possible in the grocery side and still know when their presence is required in the liquor department, an electric bell has been installed, which rings when a customer enters the liquor store.

This means a saving of considerable time that would otherwise be wasted. The same idea could be applied in a good many ways as for instance in a small store where at times there is only one clerk and his presence in the store house is occasionally demanded.

MORE DAYLIGHT IN MOOSE JAW.

Moose Jaw, Sask., was one of the few Canadian towns to enjoy the distinction of having a daylight saving scheme in operation this summer.

The S. D. McMicken Co. of that place, writes The Grocer as follows with their opinion of its operation:—

"We would say that the 'more daylight' plan was a success with the exception that the country folks and the C.P. R. would not adopt it. This made it very inconvenient, but if every one would adopt it for the summer months it would be a very great improvement on the 'slow time.' We would not advise it for the winter months as we would have to do business by lamplight in mornings, and we would not recommend it unless it were universal."

How, When and to Whom to Extend Credit

Grocer of Long Standing Claims There is no Cut and Dried Rule—Capital and Character of Customers Must be Taken Into Consideration—If a Customer is Paid Weekly, Get Your Money on Saturday Night—No Sense in Paying Out Good Money For Bad, He Says.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Some funny questions reach me from time to time. So odd are some of them that I almost think the askers thereof must be joking, until I reflect on how little logic and how much fear of shadows enters into the extension of credit by the average retail grocer. I do not know whether the questioners will profit by my answers, but I can assure them that they will find my answers right.

Question of Capital and Conditions.

1.—How long should a merchant extend credit to his patrons?

According to conditions; also according to your capital.

If your people are laboring folks who are paid on Saturday, the bills should be collected promptly and IN FULL each Saturday. Any delinquency must not be tolerated. Just what does this mean? Simply that any attempt to leave an unpaid balance must be followed by the closing of the account. Take your loss quickly and stop the leak. Do not throw good money after bad through any fear of losing trade. Business held at a loss were better allowed to go elsewhere.

Insist on Promptness.

If your people are of the most substantial class, the bills may properly go for 30 days. Then payment must be prompt and full or you may be sorry. Bear in mind, too, that the time to make people keep good habits is at the first sign that they incline to fall behind and become careless. Make them pay promptly at the end of each month.

Lastly, in the case of very substantial people, the accounts can be allowed to run for varying periods. Many of the "best" folks want it that way and they are prepared, usually, to pay for the privilege of such extension.

Every word of which may be modified to conform to the circumstances of the merchant. If you have ample capital, you can study the different circumstances of your customers and handle the credit affairs of each class as best suits that class. If you have limited capital, you must do what you can do.

No Virtue in Leniency.

So it all simmers down to being a case wherein a merchant must exercise judgment and take all things into consideration. There is no cut-and-dried rule and all who seek such are weak in the knees morally to such an extent that all the advice in the world will not help them. Merchants must fix in their minds the idea that they must get theirs and that the only way to get it is to GET IT. And there is no virtue in leniency, such being only the subterfuge of the weak.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Personal Chat With You About Ourselves

"The Last Trip of the Season." That is the subject of our front cover design, which was selected particularly because of its seasonableness, and its appropriateness, so far as the central feature of this number is concerned. The design is the work of one of Canada's celebrated artists, C. W. Jefferys. It portrays an ice-bound Great Lake freight vessel landing at a Lake Superior dock, in the shadow of a large grain elevator, with its last cargo of the season for the West. A careful study of the painting will readily reveal the work of a master painter. It is printed in four colors, the work being, of course, executed on the presses of our own plant.

As you looked through this Fall Campaign number did the amount of work entailed in issuing it, strike you in any way? Just reflect for a moment on the fact that here are 200 pages of advertisements and reading matter between covers, on which there are four different colors. Each color means a separate press impression, and with 6,000 impressions for each, the cover itself means a total of 24,000.

A number of the advertisements contain two, three and four colors, making twelve, eighteen and twenty-four thousand further impressions. The paper is put together in forms of 16 pages each. Six thousand impressions were made of each form. Regardless of expense, some of Canada's best store interiors and window displays are reproduced and to make the reproduction show up to best advantage the press work on them had to be carefully watched. In addition there is the setting of advertisements and type and the making up of same into pages and forms to be considered. Getting out the fall number of The Grocer is, in fact, something like the retailer's work the last few days before Christmas.

A few weeks ago an Eastern Canadian manufacturer inserted in his regular space in The Grocer an offer to send a display card to any enquirer. All the way from Chilliwack, B. C., came a request from a Grocer reader. It so happens that the firm in question has no office or plant in the Pacific Coast province, but nevertheless the retailer in question is evidently handling their goods, as well as reading The Canadian Grocer.

* * *

The Grocer would like to call the particular attention of those grocers and clerks who take pride in their Christmas windows, to our Christmas competition. Last year dealers and clerks in all parts of Canada entered enthusiastically into the race and at the end of the year a large number of very fine photographs were received. A year has passed by, and there are many more interested in window display now, so that we expect even a better representation of displays for our 1912-13 contest. Our sole object in offering prizes for best Christmas windows is because we thoroughly believe in the power of the window as a sales creater, and we are desirous of developing the art of dressing them to as high a degree as possible.

* * *

At all times The Grocer is a clearing house for new ideas and methods used by Canadian grocers. This is more so the case with this Fall Number, in which are included the opinions and methods of grocers in all parts of Canada on increasing trade, and more particularly, fall and Christmas trade. We would ask our readers to write us and let us know their opinions of this number. No doubt every dealer in Canada has methods of his own that would be beneficial to others on increasing trade. These we would like to hear of. The more we get, the more advantageous will the paper become to each and all.

* * *

This number seems to be an appropriate one in which to become a little reminiscent. Occasionally all of us like to recall memories of by-gone days, and just now it is with a feeling somewhat of pride we point to the fact that The Canadian Grocer with this month completes its twenty-fifth year. Those who remember The Grocer in its early days, and who know it now, will realize that it has always performed and is now performing an indispensable service to the trade. From its inception the aims of the publisher have been to bring more closely together buyer and seller, to give them a better understanding of one another and to aid them in the development of their respective businesses. Readers in all parts of Canada know the success of our efforts.

It is a pleasure—and this pleasure is of frequent occurrence—to receive congratulatory messages from members of the trade stating that they have taken The Grocer ever since the first issue appeared. Other letters often read: "I have been in business here for fifteen, twenty or twenty-two years," as the case may be, "and I have always read The Grocer." These are appreciated very highly, and we can confidently state that The Grocer will in future more than live up to its records of the past, and that when another quarter of a century has rolled around readers of to-day will still be with us and even a few who took the paper from its inception.

McLaren business (Cook's Friend Baking Powder), and was, therefore, well known to the Canadian grocery trade. Mr. McLaren was born in Stirling, Scotland, in 1827 and came to Montreal in 1832.

Once again the subject of early closing among St. John, N. B. grocers is proving of keen interest, more particularly in view of the fact that the members of the Early Closing Association are working diligently to have the by-law in favor of the movement passed in an election which it has been deemed of sufficient importance to hold upon the question. Some of the local grocers are opposed to the move for the early closing of their stores, but the majority favor the scheme and are lending assistance to the E. C. A. members in their efforts. The election is scheduled for this week and should prove interesting as feeling is begining to wax strong concerning the matter and there are many arguments to be offered pro and con.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

The City of Hamilton has sent out a very attractive booklet descriptive of its industrial advantage. Both pictorially and artistically it is a handsome piece of work, and useful to anyone interested in the Ambitious City. There is a great deal of information given including facts regarding population, education, civic legislation, transportation, water power, etc., and a guide map showing the street and industry location accompanies the booklet.

The Dried Fruit Price Prospects

California Stock Lower This Year Than Last But Eastern Prices are Generally Higher on Account of Short Crops—Valencia Raisins Cent and a Half Above 1911—California Raisins, Prunes, Apricots and Peaches Lower—Price Comparisons With Last Year.

Greater interest is beginning to develop in this year's crop of dried fruits and the prices at which they will possibly sell during the ensuing year. Some lines are now arriving on Canadian markets, the season of big demand is once more fast approaching and dealers are more than ever beginning to figure on their requirements. Some have already done so. Others are following suit.

The outstanding feature and the one of greatest importance to the dealer, is that prices in general are on a more reasonable scale than was the case last year. There are of course exceptions to the rule, for there is rarely a year in which some lines do not mount skyward, but on the whole values are more favorable. To sum up the situation, all varieties of California fruits under the influence of a heavy yield are lower, some of them by a considerable amount; currants are about the same, while valencia raisins, peels and figs are on a higher basis.

Demand Will be Greater.

These generally lower prices are going to mean a good deal for the grocer. As is always the case under such conditions, the demand will be much larger while in addition, the exceptionally prosperous conditions in Canada this year will assist materially. The Christmas trade should reach a record mark. In arriving at his requirements for the festive season as well as the balance of the year, these facts need to be taken into consideration by the retailer. He should sell a much larger quantity of dried fruits this year.

Prices in Raisins.

Raisins are always of considerable interest to the retailer because they are a big seller, especially for the Christmas trade. This year we have a peculiar situation in raisins for while California are at a very low point, Valencias are very high. Prices on Valencias owing to an exceedingly short crop are about 1½ cents per pound over those ruling at the same time last year. There will only be available for export about 35,000,000 pounds as compared with an average for the past five years of about 56,000,000 pounds. The first shipments of new crop Valencias are now in and the quality is uniformly good.

As stated before the situation in California raisins is exactly the contrary, and prices this year opened at the lowest figure in eight years. As a result a big business will be done in California stock this year. The crop is exceedingly large and the market at the coast continues easy. Some well-posted authorities in this line find the prospects for the tonnage this year as tending to a larger pack, than had been recently estimated. Packers on the coast expect more than customary difficulty in getting shipments off on time owing to the slight lateness of the season and rather heavy selling for early shipment.

Comparison With Last Year.

Prices on new crop raisins on Toronto market compared with prices last year when market got settled in November, are as follows:—

Raisins.	1912.	1911.
Valencias	9	8— 8½
Seeded choice	7¾	9¼— 9½
Seeded, fancy	8	—10

Fluctuations in Currants.

Currants are about the same as last year. The market during past month has fluctuated rapidly but not widely from day to day and this without reference to actual position of article or quantity available but owing to government regulations with regard to export and retention. This has finally been settled and the amount available for export will be about the same as last year. New currants are now arriving.

Date Figures Go Up.

Dates are a short crop this year and prices have advanced about ½ cent per pound from opening figures. There will also be a shortage of shipment by first tide steamer which is expected to arrive in New York about the middle of the month. This is on account of loss of cargo of boxes en route to Persia and is unfortunate as supplies on most markets are at a low level. Last year was a bad one in dates on account of damage to quality by rains and most of the orders placed in London had to be cancelled. This year, however, the report on quality is favorable.

Situation in Symrna Figs.

Smyrna figs are worth more this year, prices being around 1½ cests per pound higher than last season. This is said to be partly the result of better control of market owing to consolidation. There will be practically no Smyrna naturals come to this market owing to price established for these being much higher than competing article of comadre figs. Arrivals of new crop Smyrna have so far been light. Comadre figs will be coming shortly.

Toronto prices on new crop curants, and figs compare as follows with last year's November prices:—

Currants.	1912.	1911.
Fine Filiatras	7½	7½— 8
Patras	8—8½	8 — 8½
Figs—
2 to 2½ inches .lb..	14	12½—13½
Tapnets-Comadre	4¼—4½	4½— 4¾

Peels Fairly High.

Peels on the whole are on a higher level than last year due tc higher cost of material used in their preparation. Citron is especially high. The big period of demand is from now until the end of the year. Shipments are now coming to hand. While there is a considerable difference in quality of peels and accordingly in prices, the following is a comparison of one firm of this and last year's prices:—

Peels—Candied—

	1912.	1911.
Lemon	11—13	9—11
Orange	11—13½	10—12
Citron	16—17	13—15

Market in Prunes Lower.

As noted before, crops of fruits in California are much more liberal in most lines than a year ago. Prunes which were exceptionally high last year, is one of the lines that has shared in the improvement with the result that prices are much more favorable than a year ago. Even at the moment there is a bearish feeling at the coast, with a wide range of opinion as to just what the future of the market is going to be. It is rather a well established opinion that considerably less than the usual proportion of the crop in this line has been bought from growers to date as compared with the same time in former years. This is the result of high holding values of growers in some of the main prune districts. With the lower prices there should be a good trade done in prunes this year.

An Interesting Comparison.

Here are prices for Santa Clara prunes to arrive about Nov. 15 quoted by a Toronto jobber as compared with last year's prices:—

	1912.	1911.
Prunes—30 to 40's	13¼	16
" —40 to 50's	11¼	15
" —50 to 60's	10¼	12
" —60 to 70's	9	10½
" —70 to 80's	8½	10
" —80 to 90's	8	9½
" —90 to 100's	7½	9

These are prices on 25-lb. boxes, 50's being ¼ cent. less.

Apricots and Peaches Normal Again.

Apricots and peaches were the lines which the trade know full well opened at such an outrageous price last year. There was no denying that the crops were small, but prices being prohibitive, concessions were necessary to make sales. This year prices are back to a normal level and the demand will accordingly show a big increase. This table shows the big reductions which have been made on the Toronto market:

	1912	1911
Apricots—Choice	14½	23—24

Gathering of Black Rice by the Indians

An Expensive Article Produced in Some Parts of Ontario but Little Known in Commerce—Indians Have Sole Rights in the Gathering of Black Rice—Methods of Drying, Parching, Threshing and Winnowing.

Black rice is an article handled by few Canadian grocers. Yet at this time of year in many Indian Reserves in Ontario there is a harvesting of black rice going on which amounts to fairly large proportions but yet does not have the effect of lowering the price of the white variety known so well to every grocer and household.

Along the shores of Rice Lake which separates the counties of Peterborough and Northumberland there is much life these days. The arrival of the black rice harvesting time is the signal for the braves and their wives and children to move out among the rice beds of the Hiawatha reserve.

The Alderville and Hiawatha Indians usually muster forces about the middle of September and repair to the mouth of the Keene River, Peterborough County, which has been the scene of rice harvesting operations for a number of years. It is practically the headquarters for the band during the harvest season, and is in close proximity to several of the largest beds on the adjacent waters.

Indians Have Sole Rights.

Prospects are that the season's harvest will be a bountiful one, and despite the adverse weather conditions a large proportion of the available crop will be harvested.

The sole right to gather the rice is vested in the tribes, whose Indian parentage is unquestioned, and the primitive custom is one of the few that have withstood the ravages of time. A visit to the scene of action on a soft September day is worth while, and is the means by which one can see the Indian as he existed in the more primeval age. The 20th century has robbed the old-time custom of much of its charm; this is especially noticeable in the present-day garb of the red-men, but devoid of these, the old-time picturesqueness is still much in evidence at the annual gathering of the rice harvest.

How Harvest Is Garnered.

Simplicity and primitiveness characterize the preparation of the rice for market. Although the greater portion of the crop is retained for home consumption, that which is exchanged for barter, or in some cases, money, at Keene, Harwood and other points, represents the surplus. There are five operations in connection with the harvesting of the rice, which are briefly subdivided as follows: 1, gathering; 2, drying; 3, parching; 4, threshing; 5, sifting.

In gathering, sheets are laid in the bottom of the canoe, and a start made for the rice beds. A man sits in the bow of the boat and paddles, while his helpmate takes up a position in the stern and with the aid of two stout sticks bends the stalks over the canoe and threshes the rice into the bottom of the boat. This continues until the boat is nearly full, when the rice is taken to shore, and spread out to dry. After a few hours in the hot sun the grain is ready for the parching. This is usually done by the women, who place it in a large iron pot and heat it over a slow fire, stirring it continually until it is "parched."

Method of Threshing.

It is then ready for the threshing. This is done by one of the men putting it in an iron pot or large wooden bowl hollowed out of a log, and with moccasins on his feet and trousers tied tightly around his ankles, he jumps on it until the grain is separated from the chaff. The last operation is that of sifting. The rice is poured into birch bark baskets, in small quantities, and squatting down in front of the tents—on the shore—under the trees or any place where there is a good breeze, the women gently shake until the chaff is separated from the grain, and is blown away by the wind. Crude as it may seem, it is exceedingly effective and the workers are scrupulously clean throughout the whole process.

Black rice is much more expensive than white. It is considered a delicacy on many tables and the people who know its value are always anxious to secure a quantity every Autumn.

Following items are from the issue of The Grocer of October 14, 1892:—

In our issue of Oct. 14, 1892, appears a report of the regular monthly meeting of The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association. Those present at that meeting included President Booth, Messrs. Mills, White, Clark, Gibson, Mulqueen, McCulloch, Marshall, Cleary, Perkins, Roberts, Williamson. How many of these are in business to-day in Toronto? The retail price of soap was a question gone into thoroughly at the meeting, and it has formed the basis of many a discussion since.

"The Montreal Retail Grocers' Association held the first meeting of the season on the evening of the 6th inst. D. A. Fraser presided in the absence of the president. Only routine business was transacted."

* * *

"It is complained that low grade flour is shipped in inferior barrels to the West Indies. In addition to the desirability to secure packing on the flour's account, sound material in all packing cases has a special value in the West Indies, as it can be used in bales and other packages in which goods are shipped from the Islands."

Editorial Note.— In the intermediate twenty years there have been many difficulties in the way of more trade with the West Indies. The trade agreement which is now in progress between Canada and the West Indies, should greatly assist in improving conditions.

Sugar Down and Easiness Still Ahead

Refined Declined 10c. on Wednesday Afternoon Last—Market is Still Easy and Further Reductions Expected—Has Been Big Season in Sugar—Nuts are Generally Firm—Strength in Clove Market—Preserving Season Dwindling.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Down 10 cents.

Nuts.—Very firm.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—A decline in refined sugar last week brought local quotations down to $4.85 in bags. The demand is slacker than a few weeks ago, due to lessened activity in preserving fruits.

Wholesalers are busy with fall orders and a general good business is reported as passing.

SUGAR.—Following on our reports of previous issues as to the general easiness on this market, sugar declined ten cents last week, and those dealers who kept close tab on the European market and also the movement of Cubans, have naturally worked out on the right side.

Dullness prevails in the market at primary centres in spite of the ten point drop, but it is hardly likely that any further cut will be made as the busy sugar season is practically over, and the decline would only tend to make the routine business a little better. It must also be remembered that there is now no more Cuban sugar on offer and steadiness, therefore, should be the general run of things until January next at any rate. Still, it is really hard to make any definite statement, so problematical is the situation always.

DRIED FRUITS.—A good volume of business is passing locally and very shortly we will have opening prices on a number of new crop fruits. For instance a cargo of Persian dates is expected next week in New York, and bookings are reported to be big because it is generally conceded that they are coming on a bare market. Hallowees constitute the bulk of the goods and prices are said to be a shade lower than those named last year for fruit off first tide steamer.

It is far from improbable that large size prunes will be higher in price this year than last as packers report a shortage of this kind on the trays and are none too anxious to dispose of what they have. The market is, therefore, firm for the latter but an easier feeling prevails for the smaller. Considerable activity prevails in the California seeded raisins, considerable booking being done for present and future needs.

Just how far the Balkan trouble will affect shipments of figs is hard to say at present, as the belligerents hardly know where they are at, but it is generally agreed that in spite of increased stocks, due to late arrivals, buyers are holding off in order to be on the safe side.

Of course the war pot which is kept a-boiling is helping to stiffen up the Greek currant market, to say nothing of the general firmness caused by scarcity if spot goods.

COFFEE.—Only a prophet could talk intelligently on the future of this market, but as the days of the seers are long since past, we can hardly go into detail. Reports are as conflicting as ever, present indications being that the new crop will be a short one and needless to say the bulls are highly pleased. Frost, as stated last week, has set in according to latest reports from Santos directors, and this will certainly not help any, as cold waves are by no means conducive to good coffee growth.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Down 10c., now at $4.95.

Beans.—Market bare of Canadian.

Cloves.—Firm.

Toronto, Oct. 10. — The anticipated easy trend in sugar set in last week when prices were were reduced 10 cents per cwt. Tendency is still downward and further declines are expected as market readjusts itself to new crop conditions. A large European beet crop now seems assured while U.S. domestic beet is now coming on market. Present raw market conditions seem to warrant two or three further declines. Demand for sugar is slackening up with the dwindling of the preserving season but the past two months have witnessed a record consumption.

The sorting demand in sealers is now letting up. It was very heavy this year, one jobber describing his efforts to fill demands as "a regular nightmare."

Dealers are wondering if the Balkan trouble will have any serious effects on trade. Canada imported $556,695 worth of goods from Turkey last year, but the major portion was goods other than grocery lines. Dried fruit brokers fear unless a shipment is made that currant shipments may be interfered with.

SUGAR.—Those who have been following our market columns will remember that it was repeatedly pointed out that easiness was ahead in sugar and would, therefore, be prepared for the lower prices which began to make themselves apparent on Wednesday afternoon of last week when refined was reduced 10 cents per cwt., bringing it down to $4.95 locally.

Nor is the end yet. The market continues decidedly easier and further declines can be looked for as arrivals of beet crop force prices gradually down. The U.S. domestic beet crop is now ready for market and as it comes forth it will cause easier prices in cane and Canadian prices will have to come down also.

"From the present state of the raw market," said one man in touch with the situation this week," it seems as if two or three further downward changes are likely. If raw market eases still further, we may get still more."

It is said that the tendency of jobbers now seems to be to look for too many changes. Demand is slackening with the passing of the preserving season.

DRIED FRUITS.—There are no outstanding features in any line of dried fruit at the moment. New currants should be along at any time and will sell at much the same figure as last year. It is feared that the trouble in Europe may interfere somewhat with shipments if it is not speedily smoothed over. Brokers report little interest in Valencia raisins, due to comparatively high prices as compared with other varieties. The first tide steamer with dates should arrive in New York about the middle of the month. First shipments are in good demand as market is bare of stock. This year's dates are said to be of excellent quality and ahead of last year.

Although prices on California fruits are low as compared with last year, buyers do not seem to be inclined to take hold and the coast reports easiness in prunes and raisins. New seeded raisins are quoted locally at 7¾ cent for choice first shipments. New crop apricots are quoted at 13c for standards, 14½ for choice and 16c for fancy by one jobber. The same firm quotes peaches at 10 for standards, 10½c for choice and 13c for fancy. Quotations of local firms on new crop goods vary to some little extent.

TEA.— There are no particular new features to report in tea. Local markets maintain an even tone of steadiness in sympathy with similar tendency in primary markets of the east.

COFFEE.—"Coffees are firm," said one man this week, "but I see no reason to change quotations, at least, not just now. Buying by jobbers and manufacturers is not brisk and we are able to pick up some lots at about same figure as six months ago."

However, steadiness is well maintained locally in sympathy with general conditions, although New York as usual continues to fluctuate as crop news comes in. Reports confirm first damage of some little extent to crop in Brazil.

SPICES. — Outstanding feature in spice market is firmness in cloves. Zanzibar continues to report the crop there small due to excessive rains and estimates the total yield as not above 50,000 bales. New York market has scored quite appreciable advances. A reaction is possible but it looks as if cloves are destined to sell at high prices during next few months.

Cream tartar is also showing signs of strength, while peppers are steady. The expected decline in celery-seed will probably come within week or so. One firm expects quotations down to 40 cents but say prices will go nowhere near normal this year, 35c being probably lowest figures.

There is still a fair sorting trade in spices reported by most houses.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—There is nothing in reports from the Far East to indicate anything of a continued steady tone to rice. Louisiana and Texas rice is now being offered but prices are higher than a year ago in sympathy with general trend. Quotations on Texas, according to one local jobber are ¾ to 1¼ cents above last year's figures, fine grade being quoted here at 7½ cents. Broken varieties may be purchased at about ¾ cents less.

NUTS.—There is general strength in nuts, views of holders are primary markets being decidedly firm on several lines. It would seem as if Brazils would reach a higher figure before the end of the year.

Discussing the situation in nuts one of the large importers says: "Tarragona almonds must be very difficult to obtain in the primary market, for usually at this time of the year the operators in Spain are anxious sellers and are flooding this market with cables, but this year not only is there no anxiety to sell but cables from Spain offering Tarragonas are rare. Sicily filberts continue firm, with prices slightly higher in the primary market. Brazils are again higher, and with stocks greatly reduced we must look for a still further advance as prices have been abnormally low."

BEANS. — There are practically no Canadian beans to be had and Austrian stock now has to be used. They cost about $2.50 to $2.60 per bushel. It is usual to have some new crop Canadian beans by this time but they are late this year. Nor are any prices being quoted, tendency being to hold off to see what actual out-turn will be.

BROOMS. — Altogether brooms are easier than they were three months ago. Gradually one firm after another has been making slight concessions in prices. Just last week one firm reduced prices 25 to 50 cents per dozen.

Prospects point to quite a large corn production in the U.S., but much rain will cause a great deal of corn of impaired quality. One manufacturer stated this week that there will be a lot of cheap corn which he wouldn't think of using in the manufacture of his stock.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—The opening prices on late fruits and a number of vegetables which The Grocer gave in the last issue have now been received and digested by the trade. On the whole in view of the lower prices on a number of lines they have been received with favor by the trade. Figures on tomatoes and corn are now eagerly awaited. They should be issued at any time now. They came out about the first of October last year but this season is later and as much depends on the weather towards the end of the season, canneries are holding off.

It would seem as if the lobster pack will again fail to run the trade through the entire year unless the initial orders of wholesalers are larger than usual. The early orders were filled but some companies are accepting no more business. It is probably in view of the shortage during past two years that wholesalers ordered fairly freely this year. The last four weeks of lobster fishing did not turn out well.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

New season's canned goods in.

Dried Fruits—Weaker.

Pecan Nuts.—Advanced.

Winnipeg, Oct. 10.—Renewed confidence in the business world has followed the very fine weathr of the past week and nothing but the most optimistic feeling now prevails.

The volume of September trade was much larger than in any previous year and the fall outlook is especially promising.

Bank clearings advanced nearly five millions last week which shows that fall settlements are being fairly well met although the delay in threshing is no doubt responsible for collections not being quite as good as they might be.

There is now a pretty comprehensive line of the season's pack of canned fruits and vegetables on the market. The dried fruit market is undoubtedly weak but no changes are reported. Valencia raisins are now coming in and are not as cheap as expected. California raisins are, however plentiful and will likely furnish the main supply.

The largest almond crop in the history of California is now being harvested. Pecan nuts have advanced.

There is still an unprecedented demand for sugar. Cheap fruit for preserving has led householders to put down more household stuff than usual. The sugar market is weak but the strong local demand is probably holding up the price.

SUGAR.—The retail trade in sugar still continues in unprecedented volume and wholesalers and jobbers have been taxed to forward supplies. From the conditions at manufacturing points a drop in price is anticipated but this will hardly come with so strong a local market.

DRIED FRUITS.—The Smyrna fig crop is estimated above average. Valentia raisins somewhat scarce and likely to be high. Currants are a fairly heavy crop, the amount available for export being estimated at 130,000 tons, some 15,000 tons more than that of the last two years. Unsettled conditions in the east may, however, affect export trade. Coast offerings are liberal. Peaches, prunes, and apricots will be ample for all requirements.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Oct. 9.—There has been an air of quietness about the local market during past week, and conditions remain practically the same as for some weeks past with firmer tendency in some lines. There are few changes. Sugar has declined ten cents in all grades, but this with the exception of an advance in beans is about the only difference of interest from last week's quotings. Sugar market is reported to be in nervous state and lower quotings are looked for. The condition of the crop of beets in Europe is one of the causes for the difference in sugar and the matter of stocks is of interest. Local demand during past six weeks has been particularly heavy.

Molasses remains firm and as authentic advices say that stocks in the Barbadoes are short and about exhausted, it is fully looked upon as certain that molasses will be much higher in St. John this year, during the coming winter.

Potatoes are being marketed in large quantities and the local demand seems encouraging, but the same cannot be said concerning the Upper Canadian or western markets. In Carleton county the price has been remarkably low, having fallen one day to 60 cents a barrel, but buying has been light and shippers for some reason seem holding back. Across the line in Maine the prices are better by thirty or forty cents. The St. John dealers are asking from $1.25 to $1.40 a barrel but this price will only remain for a week or two. The river boats are rushing large quantities down river for local dealers, and there is much general country produce coming as well.

No change in Manitoba Flours as yet

But it May Occur at Any Time—Millers Want to Get Exact Line on Wheat Before Setting Price—Speculation as to Probable Price of New Crop Flour — Old Wheat Flour in Good Demand—Rolled Oats Hold Steady.

The anticipated concession in Manitoba flour in keeping with the values on new crop wheat has not as yet occurred. Some mills are now using a certain quantity of new wheat but most of them have some quantity of old wheat yet on hand and naturally wish to run it off before prices are reduced. There is a tendency to hold off to see what the other fellow is going to do, but there might come a change at any time.

Another reason why there is tardiness in announcing any change in price is the desire of milling companies to arrive at a definite idea of how wheat values will rule for some time ahead and then set flour prices on that basis. They do not wish to set a price that might have to again be revised shortly to meet changed conditions in the raw material market. There is much to be taken into consideration in arriving at a price at which flour should sell.

Just at present there is considerable speculation as to what values on new crop flour will be. One man mentioned 40c a barrel as a possible reduction but he added "that is not a promise but a prophecy."

"There is bound to be a reduction," said one flour broker this week. "It has only been delayed by the slowness with which wheat has been coming forward. Prices of Manitoba to-day are 30c per barrel higher than those ruling a year ago, while wheat is lower, What can you then expect? The same grade of flour is selling in the United States at about 1.00 per barrel lower than prices here.

There has of late been quite a good demand for old wheat flour. This demand may seem rather unusual in face of present market conditions. "The reason for this," explained one miller, "is that flour from matured wheat is considered more desirable for bread making than that from new wheat. For one thing it will take up more moisture. For this reason it is considered as worth more than flour milled from new wheat and some dealers are willing to pay a higher price for it."

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The local flour trade has been active of late and the increase in demand for whiter wheat grade of old crop has come just at a time when supplies are none too heavy. This may be attributed to the fact that millers are not offering much new crop wheat flour, claiming that they cannot secure supplies themselves owing to farmers being unwilling to bring loads along heavy country roads. The export trade in new crop spring wheat flour has quieted down to some extent, the orders received being for small shipments during latter months of year.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—So far there has been no adjustment of Manitoba flour prices to new crop basis. It is hard to say when the change may come. "It might take place at any time," said one miller this week. "Those mills grinding old wheat will naturally wish to hold off until they get their stock of it run off. However, receipts at lake ports are on the increase and some mills are beginning to use the new wheat. One miller said this week that while receipts at lake ports have been considerable, holders are asking rates for above futures. Millers are holding off feeling that there must be a reduction in the near future.

There is no change in Ontario flour situation. With this kind of weather ruling farmers will not take the time to deliver wheat, especially as they think they will lose nothing by holding off and as a result there is little winter wheat flour offering and only at steady figures.

Promoting Flour Sales by Means of Display

Description of a Display in a Western Canadian Town Which Brought Good Results—Display Cards Profusely Used—This is Good Method of Getting Buyer on the Outside to come Into the Store—Too Much Bread Business Going to Baker.

Flour is an important item in most grocery stores, and for this reason the methods which can be used to increase its sale are of much importance to the dealer. It will be agreed without a dissenting voice that the dealer who merely puts in a stock of flour and makes no effort to get it into the homes of his customers will not find an appreciable demand, or at least it can be said that the demand will not be as large as if he took full advantage of the opportunity presented for its sale.

Window display is one of the important methods which the grocer has at hand to bring this product into prominence and some neat and attractive trims may be arranged. Many grocers do not use this method as much as they should. There are many, however, who have realized the value of window display in promoting flour sales and who take advantage of this method frequently with good results.

Western Grocer Has Good Display.

One such firm is the Banner Grocery Co., of Wetaskawin, Alta., recently had an attractive window display of flour which attracted no little attention, and the attraction of attention is a big step towards selling goods. The display was confined to one brand of flour. A row of fifty-pound sacks was placed next the glass. Then followed a row of 100-lb. sacks standing upright followed by another a step higher.

Good Use of Display Cards.

In the centre nestled in between the sacks was a large draped show card with the following reading matter in prose verse:—

"Patty cake, patty cake, baker's man, bake me a cake as quick as you can. It sure will be sweet, it cannot be sour, because it is made from ——— ——— flour."

Higher still and to the rear was a show card of artistic design on each side. One of them showed a ludicrous picture of a tramp making a meal from a loaf of bread, the reading matter on which was "If mother had used Blank Brand flour I'd never left home." The other showed a procession of people carrying flour away from a store and read: "Get in line, Flour Day at our place." In addition there were price cards on both cwt. and 50-lb. sacks.

Reaching the Outside Buyer.

This window which was dressed by J. Syme, attracted a good deal of attention and brought this particular brand of flour into special prominence. The fact is recognized that by personal talks you can only reach those people who are already customers and who enter your store. With a window display, however, you are enabled to reach those who pass as well, and in addition keep this line before present customers.

Many a steady customer not only for flour but regular lines as well has been secured in just this way. The woman who bakes her own bread, of all things demands that the flour shall be good and to her liking. If the brand which she has been using has not been completely satisfying her, what is more natural than that when she sees a window display of some other good brand, she should become interested and make enquiries. Then the salesman has his chance to make another customer for the flour and also for the store.

In addition, such a window is likely to suggest to the housewife who knows how to bake bread, but who has strayed away from the good old ways of her grandmother, that she again return to the habit of the olden days when the family table and the family appetite was brightened up by the presence of the home made bread.

Strong Talking Points for the Dealer.

The love of the home-made bread still lingers. Where is the little Willie or the fond husband whose heart is not gladdened and his appetite improved when mother's own bread is placed before him? Where is the housewife who does not revel in her capabilities as a baker and who is proud of her home-made products? These are the things that make it possible for grocers to swing a multitude of Canadian housewives back into the good old-fashioned habit of bread-making.

Grocer Versus Baker.

The grocer and the miller as well would do well to give some attention to this particular problem. It would seem as if bread-making is becoming a lost art to many a housewife of to-day, and that the baker is gradually winning supremacy in the producing of the staff of life. While the baker is far from being supreme is some localities, in others he has been gaining rapid headway. Housewives who would have scorned the idea a few years ago are now patrons of the baker. It stands to reason that if the baker is selling his customers bread, that the grocer cannot sell them flour for bread-making. It is undoubtedly time that a stand be made to maintain this business in the old original channels. Much can be done in this direction if the attempt is only made.

Many Selling Methods at His Command.

The value of window display in attaining this end has been pointed out. Personal talks will help to no little degree. Besides the old love of the home-made bread, the grocer can further show his customers why it is in their own interests to bake their own bread. Not only can they produce bread that is held in greater esteem by those who have to eat it but they can save money.

This latter point is one that can be made good use of. The housewife is always on the lookout for methods of reducing the household expenses. If you can appeal to her pocket book you are sure to get her interest..

Advertising is the third assistant which the grocer has to promote flour sales for, in this way he is able to reach people who never visit his store or see his window display. Properly written copy in the local paper will generally be found to bring good results.

Attraction Necessary to Draw the Crowd

So Claims a Winnipeg Dealer Who Aims At Something Novel For His Window Displays—Thanksgiving Window That Brought Onlookers—Christmas Display Which Sold Well and Another That Didn't.

"To push sales at special seasons such as Christmas or Thanksgiving time, get up an attraction," says D. W. McLean, who has been for twenty-five years engaged in the grocery business in Winnipeg.

"If you can get up something to make the people stop to look at your window, a great point is made. It will sell the goods in two ways: first the one who stops will very likely come in to buy some small thing and possibly go out a heavy purchaser, and secondly, he will tell about the attraction to some of his friends, causing them to have more than a glance in passing. This will also bring about results.

A Thanksgiving Window.

"I planned a window for Thanksgiving time that brought in a lot of business, some few years ago. It was a little representation of a settlers' log shanty with the family seated at a Thanksgiving dinner. Outside the door was a hungry wayfarer just in the act of knocking. The thing was well got up, the light and shades effective, and it took. I had no further window display but I had a big display of turkeys and pumpkins right near the door and put on extra light inside.

"Well sir," said Mr. McLean enthusiastically, "that window drew the crowd and our sales were record breakers that season.

A Suggestion for Christmas.

"At Christmas one time we arranged a child's bed-room with a mantel shelf, open fire place and so on, complete. Had a life sized doll asleep in a little cot and the Christmas stockings hung up. It brought the people round, and certainly sold the goods.

"I might mention many other attractions that we got up at different times that were successful.

Not Enough Originality.

"But I will tell you one thing I tried that was a complete failure. It happened this way. I was thinking of some scheme for Christmas when a young man came along, an expert grocery man, window dresser, etc. He wanted a job and I liked his looks and took him on. He was anxious to fix up the windows and I let him have a go at it.

"Well, he made the most elaborate display of goods you ever saw. He had a beautiful arrangement of fruits and candies and other seasonable goods, and had them all ticketed, and it was really a most painstaking lot of work.

"But it was labor lost. Few stopped to look. They knew all that stuff was in the store anyway and they could probably remember half a dozen windows along Main street just like it. That window was responsible for as flat a Christmas trade as I remember

"People love novelties, they love to be amused. It is, I will admit, increasingly difficult to invent sensations in these days of profuse advertising and electric signs, but you may be sure that if you can get the crowd stopping to stare at your windows, you will get the custom if you can deliver the goods."

Profit in Proper Handling of Tobacco

Many Dealers Have Tobacco and Cigar Stocks and are Making Money From Them—Should be Placed Where They Can be Seen—Moisture Among Cigars Necessary.

A traveler for one of Canada's large tobacco houses recently told the writer that grocers were more and more becoming favorable to all lines of tobacco; in fact he goes so far as to say that his firm markets the greatest part of their output through the grocer and general merchant. "Of course," he said, "there are some who say that they cannot sell the goods because the exclusive tobacconist is too close to them. But they will agree that they could certainly build up a business if the competition was removed."

Now here is just where some dealers go astray. The grocer further down the street sells flour and the man at the corner sells it, in fact they all sell it, and good quantities too. In spite of the fact that flour is a necessity, nevertheless competition in many lines can be beaten off to a certain extent, no matter in what line, so that the man who says he cannot sell tobacco is entirely at sea. Salesmanship is all that is needed, and as salesmanship means resource, then the man with resource can simply start up next door to a well-established competitor and take considerable of his trade from him.

Display Essential.

In selling tobacco, of course, one must keep the goods right under the customer's eyes and have them so attractively laid out that they will invite attention. A long show case deep enough to show plug tobacco, cigars, cigarettes and a few rows of pipes, is bound to produce results because the husband will very soon get into the habit of asking his wife when shopping to "bring home a plug of chewing," or smoking as the case may be.

Where a Mistake is Made.

Cigars are a profitable stock, but unless they are kept in a moist atmosphere they will dry up and, of course, not produce as satisfying a smoke as might be. Dealers should avoid letting stock of this nature go dry, because the man who once purchases and finds his cigar peel in his mouth, will not go back again. When a man pays for a smoke, he wants a smoke not a toy.

A Good Transient Trade.

There is quite an amount of transient trade to be had with tobaccos. A number of young men walking out during the evening on finding themselves away from a tobacco store immediately look for a grocery. Dealers should bear this in mind and place a sign outside the door.

One could quote instance after instance where tobacco has been made a good profit-winner by grocers. Suffice it to say now that the same energy put behind this department as behind the general groceries by those who say "I can't," will be the means of turning away all doubt.

LATE CEREAL AND FLOUR NEWS.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—The shortage of rolled oats as a result of scarcity of oats for grinding has become exceedingly acute and jobbers are unable to get supplies to fill their orders. This is in both package and bulk goods. The new oats from the West are late in coming forward and many mills have not been able to secure enough raw material to keep them going. "We can't get any supplies to fill orders," was the statement of the representative of one milling firm to-day.

"We are expecting a change daily," said the Toronto representative of one big flour mill in speaking of the anticipated decline in Manitoba flour. He thought the reduction would probably be about 30 cents per barrel.

Picking and Curing Prunes for Market

Interesting Information on a Dried Fruit Well Known to Commerce—Following Up the Prune From Blossom to Fruit—How the Different Sizes are Graded — Why the "Faced" Fruit Appears on Top of Box.

Only about a quarter of a century ago, dried fruits, prunes included were considered merely a big product of the orchard in California. Now, however, fruit curing has become an enormous industry valued at many millions of dollars and requiring the entire output of thousands of acres of orchards.

The French prune of commerce grown in California is known as the Prune d' Agen, and its ideal American home is found in the Santa Clara valley, where it was introduced from France in 1858. For many years it was thought that the fruit could not be grown successfully in any other part of California, but that was later found to be a mistaken idea, and now probably half the California prunes are grown in other sections. The Santa Clara valley is about fifteen miles wide and fifty miles long and is said to contain about 5,000,000 trees.

Changes in the Prune Trees.

During the blossoming season, the white bloom literally covers the picturesque valley and it is a beautiful and inspiring sight. This is in the latter part of March. By August the picture has changed its character completely, the trees being laden with rich purple-colored fruit.. Soon the scene is again transformed and the quiet orchard has become a field of busy workers who shake the trees gently so that the fruit will fall upon sheets, or it is picked directly from the trees into baskets and then sent to the drying trays.

Prunes, and all other fruits to be dried are, in California, cured on shallow wooden trays which are placed on the drying ground and allowed to remain there day and night without protection until the fruit is fully cured. Usually these trays are about 3 by 6 feet in dimensions, and they are set directly upon the ground, although in some cases a support about a foot high is built upon which the tray may be rested.

Goes to the Sweat-Box.

Before being put on the trays, the prunes are usually graded as to size by a mechanical contrivance, and after this preliminary grading, are dipped in a weak lye solution to crack the skins, which facilitates the curing process.

It requires from ten days to two weeks to cure prunes in the sun. When the fruit is sufficiently dried it is taken to the sweat-room and subjected to a process of handling which saves it from subsequent damage after storage and at the same time equalizes the moisture in all of the individual fruits giving the whole mass an even and uniform appearance.

All cured fruit will draw damp if stored in a mass without previous sweating, and this sweating is merely permitting the damping to take place under conditions of control. Sometimes the fruit is heaped in small piles on the floor of the sweat-room and turned occasionally, or it may be placed in shallow boxes and dumped from one receptacle to another at intervals. From one to three days are required to complete the operation.

Grading the Prunes for Market.

From the sweat room the prunes are taken to the packing room and there graded, finished and packed ready for shipment. Prunes are graded according to the number required to make a pound; thus 20-30s require from twenty to thirty prunes to the pound; 30-40s from thirty to forty prunes per pound, and so on, grades ranging to as small as 100-120s. This grading is done by a machine with riddles one above another, each with a slight incline, and a spout on the side to carry off the fruit of a certain grade as it comes along.

Prunes are "finished" by exposing to steam or immersion in hot water for an instant to soften them. The packing is usually done by women worker who put the fruit in twenty-five or fifty pound boxes, each box containing but one size fruit. The first layer is flattened by hand or machinery and each piece laid in the box with precision; then the box is filled without special arrangement and when full is conveyed to a pressing machine which presses the fruit closely without, however, crushing it. The box cover is then nailed on and finally is turned bottom side up, stamped and labeled, the original bottom, in which the first fruit was packed, thus becoming the top when the box is opened, so that the flattened or "faced" fruit as it is commercially called, is seen first.

On October 1, the incorporation of the Armsby Co. of New York, was effected. This matter has been in progress some time by the members of the J. K. Armsby Co. The new corporation was incorporated under the laws of New York State, and will be a holding company, the operating company still being the J.K. Armsby Co., of Illinois..

Big Crops of Florida Fruits this year

Yield of Both Grapefruit and Oranges Will be Large—Grapefruit Crop Said to be Three Times Greater Than Last Year—Now Beginning to Arrive—New Lemons Will Bring Lower Prices—Preserving Fruit Season on the Wane.

From present appearances it would look as if Florida fruits would find greater favor with the Canadian public this year and that the demand for them will be much larger, especially when compared with last year. Last season showed only a moderate yield of oranges from this state while grapefruit was extremely short and prices so high that demand was cut down to a low level.

Lemons continue to hold their high position on all Canadian markets. No change of importance can be looked for until new crop start to come in. The first arrivals are expected around first of month and being the advance supplies will probably command a premium but with further shipments prices are expected to return to a more normal level. Much depends on the condition of the markets when they begin to arrive here.

Domestic preserving fruits are now less of a feature, the result of smaller supplies. The funeral dirge of plums has been sounded while peaches are fast following in the same direction, although there will be some belated shipments to come on yet. Grapes are now the centre of attraction and a good volume of business is being done in this line.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS .— The trade in fruits has not been so heavy this week due to the closing up of the preserving season and the setting in of the colder weather. The fall apples are now on the market and in good demand while dealers expect a good movement of the winter variety when they come along also. A demand has been started for old crop cranberries and full price is being paid. Basket fruit is not moving so well while lemons are high and oranges are also firming up.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.— With the falling of the autumn leaves comes a dwindling of the preserving season. The flood tide in fruit supplies has been passed. The ebb must now be expected. Domestic plums are a thing of the past. Idaho is, however, supplying some fancy plums at 1.25 per box. Peaches have lingered on the market this week, but will shortly make their exit. There will, however, be some belated shipments for a time yet. Grapes are now the centre of attraction and a big business is being done. Quinces are selling at 45 to 50 cents per basket.

Some new crop Florida grapefruit is expected in the end of this week. Being the first shipment it will probably sell from $5 upward but there is a good crop this year and prices will be reasonable. The same is true of Florida oranges which will arrive shortly while both are said to look well as to quality.

Lemons hold at the same price and no change is expected until around Nov. 1.

VEGETABLES.—Despite the general large yield of potatoes this year, the local market has taken on a shade firmer feeling during past week and local wholesale prices range from 90c. to $1. There does not appear to be any material let up in offerings but there is a keener demand which would seem to indicate that some storing is being done. There are little or no New Brunswick potatoes coming here at present.

There is also a firmer feeling in a couple of other vegetable lines. Cold weather has put a crimp in tomato supplies and prices are higher at 35 to 40 cents while up to 40 cents is being asked for ordinary cucumbers, picklers selling as high as $1.

Chance left yet for Tomatoes and Corn

Consensus of Opinion Among Canners is That Total Pack Will be Large if Weather Remains Favorable for While Longer—Eastern Ontario Prospects Not Bright But Western Section is Hopeful—"Largest Pack Ever," Says One, if Weatherman is Good—Question of Suspension of Duty.

Prices on canned tomatoes and corn have not yet been announced. This is because of the uncertainty of the pack which may be large or small. Last year these prices were announced in The Grocer in issue of October 6 and it will be remembered tomatoes, 2's, opened at $1.07½, 3's at $1.17½, with gallons at $3.45. But these figures did not last long. The pack was short and prices immediately soared to those who had not booked ahead.

Corn, 2's opened at 97½ cents, and 2's fancy at $1.07½. Corn was a large pack and prices remained fairly steady.

But what is past is past. Now what of the future? What will be the extent of this year's pack and what will be the prices? These are the questions which canners, wholesalers and retailers are asking.

Canners are Interviewed.

During the past week representatives of The Grocer interviewed a number of Ontario canners in both the eastern and western sections as to the crops and how they are likely to turn out before the season ends. These conclusions have been arrived at. First, the progress of the tomato crop in Western Ontario has been much better than that in the eastern portion of the province. Secondly, that the season is much behind the average, due to continued cool, wet weather of a few weeks ago, and hence ripening has been much delayed. Thirdly, if fine weather prevails for two weeks longer the pack of both tomatoes and corn will be exceedingly large, probably the largest on record for Canada.

Eastern Crops Poor.

While the early prospects indicated a good yield of both tomatoes and corn in Eastern Ontario, later weather conditions upset calculations considerably. A farmer on the Picton market last week told The Grocer that he had 10 acres of corn which looked good once, but from which now he does not expect to pull a cob. He will feed it to the cows. A neighbor had 10 acres of tomatoes and earlier was banking on 500 bushels to the acre. Now he doesn't expect 500 bushels of ripe tomatoes altogether.

A canner in that district stated that the pack will not be more than 17 per cent. of the original estimate. Another claimed that while early corn was coming in freely, late corn was frozen. One stated that scarcely any, if any, of $2,000 worth of new labels ordered would be used and that large quantities of apples were being put up to give employment to those whom he wanted to secure again next year.

Outlook Better in Western Ontario.

The tone of the interviews from Western Ontario was, however, much brighter. Canners there remarked particularly on the difference in crops between the east and west.

"As regards the outlook for corn and tomatoes," said one, "if the present weather continues for three weeks, you will probably see the largest pack of corn and tomatoes ever put up in Canada. The factories west of Toronto are extremely busy, but unfortunately the factories east are not having as favorable conditions. The vines are heavily loaded with tomatoes and factories will keep on packing until the killing frost comes."

Depends on Future Weather.

"The indications all season," remarks another, "pointed to a very large crop of tomatoes but weather conditions during September prevented the fruit from ripening as rapidly as is usual, particularly at points east of Toronto, and consequently the pack is no doubt below the average. However, if we are favored with warm weather during the next two weeks, similar to that of the past three days, the total pack of tomatoes will be up to the average."

He refers here to Sunday, Saturday and Friday of last week.

Sufficient to Fill Demand.

One canning firm claims that the demand for canned goods in general will be fairly large considering the fact that many more factories are operating this year than last. They point out that last year, despite the short packs in many lines, the demand was, on the average, well met by supplies.

Judging from all these statements there evidently does not appear to be any great shortage likely in the total packs of all lines. If the frosts kill off the tomatoes early, the pack will of course be greatly reduced. Otherwise, while certain factories will be short, the total pack should be quite large.

Is This Report True?

Press reports from Ottawa last week intimated that certain canners were asking the government to suspend the duty on canned vegetables, especially tomatoes, coming from the United States. The alleged reason is given that the canners are not able to fulfil their contracts except at a loss and that they want to secure the balance at prices existing in the United States.

Whether this is true or not cannot be verified. So far as The Grocer is concerned no confirmation of it has been secured although several canners have been asked concerning it.

"We have no knowledge of any such application," said one, "and do not believe that there is any truth in the report," and adds that if fine weather continues the pack of tomatoes will be an average one so that the application for the removal of duty would be premature and unwarranted.

Think Supply Sufficient.

Another replied that "we cannot say if this report is true or not, and to our minds would consider it a mistake to remove the duty on any of the lines." This firm argues that the demand last year, considering the short packs was fairly well filled and no great quantities were imported from the States. With the additional factories in operation the total pack should be materially increased.

WHO IS THE WINNER?

How much is the peddler ahead if he cheats a farmer's wife out of 11 cents on her rags and 17 cents on a calf-skin, while at the same time she is working two dozen bad eggs off on him at 14 cents a dozen and stuffs a pound of hen's feathers in a sack of geese feathers she sells him at 40 cents a pound?

FRUIT NOTES.

Latest reports from Florida are that the outlook for a splendid orange crop still holds good.

Estimates of the number of barrels of grapes which will be shipped from Almeria are now generally placed at 1,700,000.

"This preserving business keeps one in hot water, doesn't it?" said the Pear to the Peach. "Yes," assented the latter, "it does jar one."

If you have skill, use it—cash it. If you have no skill, get it. It is no shame to be commonplace—the shame is in staying so. Mistakes are a blessing if they teach us not to make the same one twice. The trouble with some mistake-makers is that they refuse to be taught.

As a retailer you should take every opportunity to satisfy yourself that the buying end of your organization is meeting the requirements of your trade.

Fall Fish Trade Getting Under Way

Season so Far Has Been Good—Cooler Weather Induces Greater Interest—Dealer is Now Able to Give More Attention to This Line—Extensive List of Offerings to Choose From—More Life to Oyster Trade.

The fall fish trade is getting off to a good start. Conditions so far this year have been quite favorable to business and reports from various parts of the Dominion indicate that so far trade has been satisfactory for the season. Indeed from some centres it is declared to be ahead of that to the same time last year.

For one thing the weather is now more conducive to trade, as with a lower temperature retailers find it easier to handle this line. Supplies in nearly all lines are fairly liberal, and there is a fairly extensive list from which to choose so that the dealer should be able to satisfy the desires of all his customers.

Another fact that works for more interest in the fish department is that the dealer is not so busily engaged with other lines. For some time the pickling and preserving trade has demanded no little attention, but this business is now beginning to look to their supplies of smoked, prepared and pickled varieties.

Oysters are beginning to take on greater business. Dealers are looking forward to a good season's business. Cooler weather puts life into this line. It reduces the cost of refrigeration to the dealer. Quality of oysters is showing up better than seemed likely earlier in the season.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—With a number of festivals coming along a heavy fish trade is natural, and wholesalers at present state that the demand has exceeded that of last year by a good margin. Fresh halibut is not coming along any too plentifully, supplies of frozen stock having to be brought into service instead. Brook trout season is closed, while white fish are very scarce. Supplies of dressed pike are good and prices are a shade lower. Fillets are fairly scarce, but haddies are in good supply.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—The fish trade according to local wholesalers is taking on a healthier stride than has been noticeable so far this season. The weather this week has turned down to a temperature more conducive to business, causing many more retailers to take hold. It is now time that the grocer had his fish campaign opened.

Halibut is not so scarce as some time ago. There is just a sufficient quantity to nicely cope with demand. Stock cod is a scarce line.

Halifax cod is now on the market. Digby herring are selling at 75c per bundle of 5 boxes. Scottish herring from Lock Fyne are offered this week at $1.10 per kit.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—The fact that many of the fishermen from bay ports are busily engaged at present away from home in catching pollock and hake for drying and shipping to the West Indies has materially affected local supply of fish and reduced stocks to a low scale, particularly during latter part of week. The supply at the opening of the week was fairly good, but between the reason given above and the disagreeable weather interfering as well, the market had little to offer although the demand kept up well. This is not expected to last very long, and probably in a few days will see a vast improvement. Prices rule about the same.

Cheapness of Fish Makes it Easily Sold

Fish Department With a Little Attention Can Readily Be Made Profitable—In Getting Supplies Vary Them as Much as Possible—Fresh Fish Will Sell Just as Well as Smoked or Cured—A Suggestion for Showcase Display.

A Montreal wholesaler doing an extensive fish business has no hesitation in stating that grocers are getting more and more into the habit of handling fish, and further asserts that before many years have passed the greater number of the good stores will have separate fish departments.

"Of course," he says, "we cannot regard the man who carries a box of fillets on the counter as one keenly interested in fish, but we are anxious to see every dealer set aside a good bright portion of his premises for fish of all kinds and have a man look after it exclusively."

The grocers certainly have good opportunities for distributing fish and those knowing ones who have made and continue to make a Friday leader are reaping big profits, and these are bound to grow as long as the proper methods of salesmanship are employed.

Moderate In Price.

"The present high cost of living," says another wholesaler, "is every day whispering in the grocer's ear that people are looking for cheap substantial food, and taking everything into consideration fish is cheap, decidedly cheap, and lower than it was last year." And there is logic in this too, for what better meal could one have twice a week than halibut steak? Fleshy and palatable, the halibut is a seller and there is practically no waste.

Trade In Boneless Cod.

The advance made in the science of fish curing, etc., has opened the door to the dealer in many respects, and right here one can point out as an example—the careful packing and high quality of boneless and skinless cod. Imagine the selling talk the dealer has for this line—"it's all pure fish flesh, no skin, no bone, all waste matter eliminated. It is made ready for use after passing through a number of processes, and after all is made from pure cod which every consumer knows from a nutritive standpoint."

Novel Display Suggestion.

An original idea which could be worked out to advantage in the grocery store, and which would undoubtedly attract trade is the following:—

Get fairly long glass case, watertight about three feet deep, and after filling up with water put two or three artificial fish, say mackerel or herring inside, keeping them in fixed position by a stiff wire fixed from bottom of the tank to their abdomen, but leaving same sufficiently loose at bottom clutch to allow of slight movement of the fish. Finally place a generous number of gold fish in tank which will swim around artificial fish and present a living appearance to the "dead ones."

Along the top of the tank which can be built stoutly enough, can be run a highly polished white marble slab on which can be arranged various lines of fresh, smoked and prepared fish.

That such a display would produce good results, no one can gainsay, because the novelty itself will draw the customer over, and then the salesman has an opportunity to work up some business.

Cool Season Will Help.

Now that the cold weather is coming there will be little difficulty experienced in handling fish and as demand can easily be created for it, every grocer should give it some attention. A number have sold considerable fish simply by using a show case outside the door. Samples of different varieties can be shown thus, while orders can be filled from the warehouse. The show case too gives the idea of cleanliness and quality attracts the best custom.

Canadians to-day are eating more fish than ever before. Somebody is reaping the benefit, and every retail grocer might just as well secure a share of this. It remains only to place in a stock and display or advertise it so that it will be sold. Compared with fresh meats, as intimated above, fish is a cheap food, and being wholesome as well presents strong reasons why it should be pushed.

OYSTER QUALITY IMPROVING.

Advices From New York Contain Good News For Oystermen and Retailers.

The oyster dealer as well as his customers will be glad to know that the quality of oysters is showing up much better than seemed likely at the beginning of the season. This news comes from New York. They have shown a wonderful growth of late.

Spawning Season Late.

For a time, early in the season, it was feared that oysters might not show the growth that is always looked for after spawning. Samples secured from the various beds did not show any betterment, something that is unusual. Skeptical ones predicted that this would be a poor one for the growers and shippers and that wholesalers and jobbers would also suffer. Time, however, has shown that the oyster industry is not only holding its own but it is making progress. The spawning season was late and because of unfavorable weather conditions the "set" was late in appearing.

When one takes these things into consideration it is not at all surprising that marketable oysters were tardy in showing that increase in fat, which gives them body. They are now doing so, and rapidly, too. Oysters are getting better every day and before another week has passed they will be in prime condition. This betterment of stock has already been noted by buyers. Already New York shippers are receiving car lot orders, something unusual so early in the year, still nevertheless desirable. It shows that oysters are really good and it will not be at all surprising that car lot shipments should greatly increase.

Good News for the Dealer.

These are facts which the retail dealer would do well to acquaint customers with. It will start the demand off to a more healthy stride.

MONEY IN ROASTING MACHINES.

Peanut Roasters and Pop Corn Poppers Show Splendid Percentages.

There are a number of retail grocers in Canada making good money out of peanut and pop-corn roasting machines, and there is no reason why more should not take advantage of this equipment to increase their profits. Now that the cold weather is coming along these lines will sell easily if they are where the people can purchase them.

Peanuts cost from 8, 10 to 12 cents a pound and sell usually at 5 cents a bag with four bags to a pound. Here are shown profits ranging from 40 to 60 per cent. on the turnover.

Raw popcorn costs around 4 or 5 cents per pound out of which can be got about eight five-cent bags of popped corn. Allowing say 5 cents per pound for butter and salt there is a profit shown of 75 per cent. on turnover.

There is no reason why the grocer cannot get a good share of the trade now almost exclusively in the hands of street peddlers. A roasting machine can be placed in the doorway and on a busy night would certainly be one of the best profit-paying equipments the dealer could have. The machines pay for themselves in a short time, and besides attract custom to the store maintaining them. They are therefore advertisements that draw trade just as does glass display in fixtures.

How Merchants Can Lower Egg Shrinkage

Shrinkage in Canada Now Amounts to About 17 Per Cent., Which Amount Goes to Waste—United States Government Believes That Merchants are the Men to Remedy the Evil—By Becoming Expert Candlers They Can Pay for Quality Received.

It has been estimated that 17 per cent. of the eggs sold in Canada are lost through shrinkage. In the United States the loss amounts to $45,000,000 annually as a result of improper handling. That the producer, the merchant who buys from the producer, the shipper, the commission house, the retailer who sells to the consumer and the consumer himself suffers on account of these losses, is evident.

The enormous losses annually are attributed to small eggs, cracked and broken eggs, dirty, stale, hatched and rotten eggs.

The Department of Agriculture of the United States has taken this matter in hand and, a campaign of education is being waged to eliminate this loss.

Points Emphasized in Circular.

Seven fundamental points have been outlined in connection with this plea for better eggs and sent in circular form to shippers, producers and merchants. It reads as follows:

1. Encourage the production of large eggs. This can be accomplished by keeping pure bred "general purpose" breeds of fowls, hatching only the eggs that weigh at least two ounces apiece and from only the most vigorous stock. A higher price for large than for small eggs will help along the argument.

Note the air spaces in these eggs. The size of these indicate the age.

2. Infertile eggs do not hatch, do not form blood rings and seldom form black rots. If the male birds are sold or penned up after June 1, the flock of hens will lay more eggs and they will be infertile.

3. A year-round observation of New York egg receipts showed that over 12 per cent. were dirty-shelled, and sold for a lower price on this account. You should buy these dirty eggs at a lower price, for you are paid less for them. If one nest is provided for each six hens, in a cool, dark place, kept clean and vermin free, dirty eggs will be reduced to a minimum.

4. More than ten per cent. of the eggs received in New York during the year are "seconds" because they are stale. Tell your egg men that gathering eggs every afternoon, or twice daily in hot or murky weather, keeping them in a cool, clean, dry place until marketed, and marketing at least once a week and more frequently in the summer time, will reduce the number of stale eggs greatly. Of course, stale eggs are worth less money than fresh eggs all along the line.

Eggs in the Stolen Nest.

5. Can you convince your trade that eggs from stolen nests and from incubators are never fit for sale? If the farmer thinks they are good reliable food, urge him to eat them at home. For, since the egg buyer can afford to pay more for large, clean, fresh, whole-shelled eggs, it is good business for the farmer to use small, dirty, cracked eggs at home.

6. Do you know how to candle eggs? If not, learn, and learn quickly. There is no other way by which you can determine the worth of what you are paying for. Having yourself learned how to grade eggs, show the merchants, peddlers and farmers in your neighborhood, by means of the candle, what kind of eggs they are bringing to you. Farmers are not scamps, nor egg buyers' angels. Show the farmer the kinds of eggs you cannot pay for and he will find a way to eliminate the bad egg and to make the good egg even better.

7. When first quality eggs come to your packing house, what means do you take to keep them so until they get to market? To build up and keep a good reputation for your output, you must grade carefully and uniformly; pack in good fillers, flats and cases, ship quickly and under good conditions. If you would be classed among up-to-date shippers, you must have mechanical refrigeration that the chilling of the egg may begin the minute you receive it. Candle in a room where the temperature does not go above 55 degress F. Ship chilled, in a good refrigerator car, in car lots. If you can not chill the eggs before shipping, use a refrigerator car, well iced, and ship only the minimum load, that the eggs may receive the benefit of the ice before the market is reached.

Candling School for Merchants.

An egg candling school was formed in Kansas to which merchants in different parts of the state were asked to come and investigate conditions themselves. Demonstrations were given by expert candlers which have set them a-thinking.

It is the purpose of the state authorities to eventually reach every merchant in the state. It is pointed out that although many merchants came long distances to attend the instructions, that better results will be achieved if an egg candling car could be equipped and in that way touch all of the small towns which it is desirable that the campaign include. This plan, it is said, is likely to be adopted next year.

The candling of all eggs received in the store is the purpose of the campaign. It is pointed out that then the merchant will pay the farmer two prices for eggs. A higher price for the first-class eggs and a price from two to three cents per dozen less for the second-class eggs. In the candling process the bad eggs will be returned to the farmer. Another purpose of the educational campaign is to show merchants what first- class eggs look like.

The proper candling of eggs is a matter that should be taken up by every merchant in Canada. On this page are a couple of illustrations showing how the ages and conditions of eggs are detected by means of candling. If the merchant has a candling system in his warehouse, where all eggs that come in from farmers can be tested, a great work could be done in eliminating the shrinkage.

Opinions Differ on Future of Butter

There is a Feeling, However, That Prices Will Ease Under Big Fall Make—Factories Will be Turning From Cheese to Butter—Beginning to Change Already—Egg Receipts Falling off But Quality is Improved—Hogs Did Not Hold Top Price.

It is said that this would be a funny world if every one held the same opinion. It certainly would make the butter market much less interesting than it is at the present time. Just now there is a great deal of speculation regarding the probable trend of butter during the fall and winter. The wide differences of opinion at the moment show that it is by no means a settled question.

On the whole there is a steady feeling at present time. At some centres there is a firmness that may develop into higher figures. However, in many quarters there is a feeling that with factories shortly turning from the production of cheese to that of butter that we should have a big fall make of the latter article and that this should result in an easier tendency. The usual time for the change from cheese to butter is around Nov. 1, but a number of factories have already changed over. As cheese has taken an easier turn, they believe it more profitable to make butter.

One of the big factors that should be taken into consideration in sizing up the situation is the amount of butter in storage in Canada. This is something that can scarcely be arrived at. It is acknowledged to be fairly large. Montreal is holding a good deal for western account. Chicago had storage holdings of 60 million pounds on Oct. 1. As this is eight millions more than a year ago, one house refers to it as a bearish factor. Another house points out that the increase is not as great as that shown on Sept. 1. Thus is shown the difficulty of sizing up the situation.

The cooler weather is beneficial to the egg business in one way and in another it is not. There is no denying that it is giving us hen fruit of a more desirable quality but on the other hand, it appears to be making the hen less industrious. At least, receipts are falling off and storage stocks may have to be called to the rescue soon at some centres. In Canada as with butter, we have no record of storage stocks. Holdings in Chicago as reported on Oct. 1 by 40 houses was 283,900 cases in excess of a year ago.

Hogs did not maintain the record established during the early part of last week which was not far below the high point of 1910. The high price brought a more liberal supply of the porkers to market and prices accordingly weakened. In past few years it has been usual for hog values to fall off sometime during the fall and in certain quarters history is expected to repeat itself, at least to some degree.

BUTTER,—Butter is firm under heavy demand and an increase in price would not come as a surprise as supplies are short and have been for some time, shipments from the country points dropping off as is customary at this time of the year.

EGGS.—Supplies coming forward just now are much smaller than they have been during any previous period with the result that prices are on the upward move and it looks as if new laids will reach a record price this fall. As it is the level at present is pretty high.
